Eight Americans Killed, 62 Wounded As Reds Attack Two U. S. Viet Bases

SAIGON, Viet Nam (AP) — Eight Americans were killed and at least 62 wounded Saturday night when Viet Cong forces launched coordinated onslaughts on two big U.S. compounds at Pleiku, 240 miles north of Saigon.

At least seven parked aircraft were destroyed.

U.S. officials said the heaviest of the two attacks, backed up by mortar fire, was at Camp Holloway, on a Pleiku airport detachment.

Seven Americans were killed at Camp Holloway and 48 wounded.

One U.S. Army transport plane and six helicopters were destroyed. Three other planes and eleven helicopters were damaged.

The onslaught, in which the largest number of American casualties in South Viet Nam fell at one time, coincided with the arrival in Hanoi, North Viet Nam, of Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin.

It was not immediately known whether they penetrated the airport compound.

A coordinated attack was mounted at the same time against the U.S. advisory detachment at 2nd Army Corps headquarters in the town of Pleiku.

The attack on the headquarters involved a heavy barrage of 57 millimeter recoilless cannon fire and rifle grenades fired at short range.

The two-pronged attack was by far the worst directed against U.S. forces during this war.

Pleiku is a sprawling town of about 100,000 in the center of a vast prairie. The main American detachment just outside the town commands an open view of several miles in almost all directions.

Despite this, the Viet Cong apparently got within striking distance of the camp without tipping its hand.

Close to 1,000 Americans are stationed with the two big detachments. The largest is the headquarters compound for American advisors serving with the 2nd Corps and its dependent units. The other compound, near Pleiku airport, is an aviation detachment for U.S. Army helicopter men and Air Force pilots.

This was the first major Viet Cong initiative since the lunar new year holiday, for which the Viet Cong announced a unilateral cease-fire ending Friday night. The Viet Cong's clandestine radio station announced during the holiday that a reprisal would be made for the public execution in Saigon one week ago of Le Van Khuyen, 20, a convicted Viet Cong terrorist. The Pleiku attack may have been this reprisal.

LUCKY HAT—Bruce Schafer (right), 6, happily holds his cap and shows it to Tom Bulger, 17, who was lowered into a 20-foot sewer to help rescue Bruce, who had been trapped five hours in the hole in Grand Forks, N. D. Bruce was on his way home from school Friday night when he spotted what he thought looked like a snow fort. He peered into the hole and a ledge gave way. A searcher spotted the hole and investigated with a flashlight. He saw Bruce's red cap. Police said a manhole cover apparently had been pushed off the hole by a snowplow. (AP Wirephoto)

Chile Plane Crash Kills 86 Persons

By JOSE M. ORLANDO

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — A Chilean air liner with 86 persons aboard crashed and exploded into flames 11,700 feet up in the Andes Saturday and a rescue patrol reported there were no survivors.

The patrol reached the scene after a horseback and foot climb of several hours and said the plane of the Chilean air line — LAN — hit 1,200 feet below the summit of La Corona Mountain.

It was Latin America's second worst plane disaster. A Brazilian airliner crashed in Lima, Peru Nov. 27, 1962, killing 97 persons.

Among the 28 foreigners aboard was a U.S. woman, listed as Helen Berger of Long Island, N.Y.

The plane had taken off for Buenos Aires, Argentina and Montevideo, Uruguay, with 79 passengers and a crew of seven. It crashed a few minutes later near Lo Valdes, adout 50 miles east of Santiago.

A police plane flew over the area and spotted the burned out wreckage scattered for about 600 feet down the slope.

Also aboard the plane was a football team from the Chilean National Bank, bound for Montevideo to play the Bank of Montevideo team. Among the foreigners were three Italians, two Germans, a Russian and a Czechoslovakian.

Rescue patrols were dispatched to the crash site. They drove to the foot of the mountain and then began the slow ascent on horseback. It was reported the rocky terrain was so difficult that helicopters could not land.

It is the worst air disaster in Chilean history. The worst previous was a crash in 1960 that killed 24 persons.

In both accidents, the same line was involved. The plane in Saturday's crash was a DC6.

It was due in Buenos Aires about three hours after the take off time of 8 a.m. It was then to go on to Montevideo.

A 7-year-old Chilean boy, Luis Crellana Nunez, had his life saved because his papers to Montevideo were not in order. Police would not permit him to board the plane.

There was no indication why the plane crashed barely five minutes after take off among the towering Andean peaks. The area is one of severe air turbulence.

Yank Resumes His Search For Brother in Viet Nam

By PETER ARNETT

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — "I'm going back in and staying this time," Donald C. Dawson said Saturday.

Going back in means returning to a little Roman Catholic village deep in Communist territory north of Bien Hoa where he is trying to persuade the Viet Cong to return his flier brother — dead or alive.

Lt. Daniel Dawson, 27, vanished Nov. 6 in a spotter plane on a routine reconnaissance mission. Donald, 34, a Californian, arrived a month ago to look for him.

Dawson thinks his brother is dead and he is going back to Thai Hung village in the hope the guerrillas will accept his offer of $1,200 for the body.

Recently, there has been an increase of military activity around the village. Dawson said he is worried because this lessens his chances of getting the Viet Cong to cooperate.

Late in January, government forces swept through the region along the Dong Nai River trying to mop up the guerrillas. The Viet Cong retaliated by moving out of the nearby jungles.

Despite a Viet Cong lunar new year cease-fire proclaimed for all South Viet Nam, Dawson said guerrilla fire hit Thai Hung village Tuesday when he went back there on a brief visit.

The small defense force in the village would be no match for a large Viet Cong force, but it is prepared to fight off snipers.

Dawson is banking on the thousands of leaflets concerning his brother he has spread through the region and the information he has sent by word of mouth to farmers and priests.

Gathering his gear in Saigon, Dawson said he plans to return to Thai Hung, possibly Sunday, and remain indefinitely.

Another Pipeline Request Filed With State PUC

DENVER (AP) —Wyco Pipe Line Co. has asked the Colorado Public Utilities Commission for permission to build a pipeline to carry petroleum products from the Denver area south to the Colorado Springs-Pueblo area.

Wyco proposes to build a $2.5 million pipeline from a terminal at DuPont north of Denver to Fountain, south of Colorado Springs. The line would have an initial capacity of 13,500 barrels, the application stated.

The company, with headquarters in Chicago, now operates in Colorado, Wyoming and South Dakota. Its DuPont terminal is the southern end of the firm's existing interstate pipeline system.

Columbine has proposed a $3.1 million pipeline from Denver to Colorado Springs and Pueblo, having an initial daily capacity of 17,500 barrels. A hearing on the Columbine petition had been scheduled by the PUC for Feb. 23.

Carson Dental Care Report Is Being Prepared

A report on a Department of Defense Dental Advisory Committee hearing Feb. 1 at Ft. Carson, requested by the Army to declare the post a "remote" area for dental care for military dependents, is due from Washington Feb. 15, Dr. James M. Wambach, spokesman for the Colorado Springs Dental Society, said.

The committee visited the post and inspected six clinics as a step to determine if adequate dental care is being provided for dependents. Limited dental care for dependents would be allowed at Ft. Carson if it is declared a remote area, the Army said.

Maj. Gen. Autrey J. Maroun, commanding officer at Ft. Carson, believes, "in short," that military personnel at the post

Noted Indian Politician Is Assassinated

NEW DELHI (AP) — Pratap Singh Kairon, 64, one of India's most controversial politicians, was slain today by gunmen who ambushed his car 20 miles northwest of here, officials reported.

Sketchy reports from the scene said three other men in the car were shot down with Kairon.

Kairon, who resigned under fire in June as chief minister of Punjab State, had been in New Delhi for a meeting with Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri. They talked privately Friday.

There was no immediate indication whether the killers had political motives or were members of the Dacoit (bandit) gangs that roam sections of the Punjab—the home of the tall, sturdy Sikhs.

Family Cat Walks 675 Miles Home

MIDLAND, Tex. (AP) — Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Lewis of Odessa and their daughter, Betty, of Midland went on vacation last July, and they took the family cat along.

The cat, named Sheila, disappeared while they were stopped at the New Mexico - Colorado border near Farmington, N. M.. A careful search of the area yielded no sign of the pet and the Lewises reluctantly returned home without Sheila.

It was last Sunday before Sheila appeared on the doorstep of Betty's home in Midland, footsore and dirty but otherwise in good condition.

Restaurant Man In Atlanta to De - Segregate

By HEDLEY BURRELL

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — As his customers and wife wept, restaurant operator Lester Maddox announced Saturday that he would serve Negroes. It would have cost him $200 a day to continue serving white persons only.

Maddox, a bitter opponent of the civil rights law, had fought the act since its passage.

For Maddox, it was the end of a long struggle to keep his eating place segregated.

"We are not surrendering," he said, "but only accepting that which is being forced upon us — that which we feel violates our oath to God. We shall continue this fight as long as we live."

But he reported an order would be filed in federal court Monday confirming his readiness to comply with the civil rights law.

Harry Hoth Will Seek Re - Election To City Council

By JOHN KUGLIN
Gazette Telegraph Staff Writer

Mayor Harry Hoth will fight to be re-elected to the City Council even though he lost his battle for a two per cent city sales tax.

Veteran Councilman Carl H. Decker told the Gazette Telegraph Saturday he probably will not run again. He has been on the council almost 12 years.

The remaining councilmen with expiring terms, T. Eugene McCleary and James Johnson, have petitions out to place their names on the ballot for the April election.

Hoth's candidacy was announced by four men who will take out his petition Monday.

One, Joseph F. Pieper, strongly opposed the sales tax last fall as an active member of the Consumers Opposed to Sales Tax (COST) committee.

Pieper said Saturday he would work for Hoth's re-election because "I feel he has done a good job as mayor.

"He was as strong for the sales tax as I was against it. I believe we have impressed him with our way of thinking."

Other petition takers for the mayor will be Dr. Lloyd E. Worner, president of Colorado College (Hoth graduated from CC); M. P. Long, owner of Phil Long Ford; and Karl Andrews, home builder.

Re-election as councilman will not automatically make Hoth mayor. Under the City Charter, the mayor and vice mayor are elected by the council.

Hoth came under a barrage of criticism last fall for his speeches at council meetings against merchants' opposition to a city-wide sales tax. He suggested a $300 occupation tax on every business in the city as one means to raise revenue if the sales tax was defeated. He later said he didn't mean what he said. Hoth was also the target of verbal brickbats when he tried to prevent an attorney from presenting petitions containing 13,500 signatures

MONTROSE (AP) — Students in the economics class of Kenneth L'Argent at Montrose High School have decided that the federal government sometimes overdoes things.

L'Argent ordered 100 federal income tax returns from the Internal Revenue Service with the idea of having his students fill them out as a class project.

He got 22,000.

Hermanitz Trial Continues on Sanity Issue

Othmer Hermanitz, now on trial for murder, testified Saturday that he believed someone wanted to kill him when he was in the Colorado Psychopathic Hospital.

"I was having what I call hallucinations," he told the jury, and went on to say there were constant noises "ricocheting" in his room. He heard slamming doors, women screaming and "jazz music with someone preaching right through it." The witness said, "It didn't make sense."

He continued saying there was a Negro on his floor who was perpetually raving and cursing the U.S. Army. Although Hermanitz was locked away from him he was afraid someone would unlock the doors and the man would come in and kill him, he testified.

For protection he put a mag-

Retired Colonel Blames Rigidity Of Academy Code

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—What he called the rigidity of the Air Force Academy honor code and its administration by the cadets themselves led to the system's breakdown last month, a retired Air Force colonel said Saturday.

Richard B. Uhle, 46, president of the Pflueger Corp. of Akron, told The Akron Beacon Journal in an interview he was "personally shocked by disclosure of examination thefts" at the academy in Colorado Springs, Colo., last month. The violations of the honor code led to resignations by a number of cadets involved.

Uhle spent 17 years in the Air Force and was liaison officer at the Academy for two years. In 1962, two years after he retired, he returned as a reserve colonel for a two-week study and preparation of an unofficial report which was critical of the honor code.

He said he felt at that time that the honor code should have been tempered with mercy and that the cadets themselves did not accept a requirement they inform on any violations. He suggested that a broader approach to an understanding of honor was needed and that seminars be held on ethics and morality.

Uhle said the code is "not only unrealistic but presents a fairly limited interpretation of honor."

He said he felt the code could be made to work if the academy would stop "painting honor as a black and white proposition."

Congressmen Wary, Silent About Viet War

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senior senators looking into the situation in South Viet Nam are wary or silent about prescriptions for solving the U.S. dilemma there.

In the face of an uncertain picture, politically and militarily, in the U.S.-backed war on Communist guerrillas, the Democratic chairmen and ranking Republicans of two key Senate committees bided their time in silence Saturday.

An Associated Press sampling of sentiment among members of the Foreign Relations and Armed Services committees brought expressions of concern from two Republicans about government stability in South Viet Nam.

Other senators — their positions already on record — stuck to their guns in calling for a continued U.S. effort, with stiffer action if necessary, to help South Viet Nam win the guerrilla battle.

And Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, spoke again for a negotiated end to the fighting and neutralization of the area.

The Senate Foreign Relations and Armed Services committees both are conducting inquiries. Their chairmen, Sens. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., and Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., and top Republicans, Bourke Hickenlooper of Iowa and Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, offered no comments on the situation.

Saltonstall said it would be foolish to discuss a course before learning the results of the latest administration mission to South Viet Nam, by presidential advisor McGeorge Bundy.

President Johnson has declared that while senators of both parties are entitled to their differing views, his administration remains committed to the U.S. effort to help South Viet Nam fight off the Viet Cong.

Sen. George D. Aiken, R-Vt., of the Foreign Relations Committee said government stabili-

Halos Around Stars Clues Of 'Evolution'

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Dr. Frank J. Low, research associate in the lunar and planetary laboratory at the University of Arizona says he has discovered halos around three stars which may be clues to stellar evolution.

Low said he believes what he has observed are stars throwing out material which will become the building blocks of future stars.

The discovery was made with the laboratory's 28-inch infrared telescope.

Low said that some stars burst apart when they have grown to a critical size and that his discovery suggests other stars can get rid of material they have made internally and therefore continue to evolve.

The scientist identified the three stars observed with the halos as Btelgeux, Aldeberan and Mu Cephei.

By ELTON C. FAY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense chiefs say that the high cost of arming against all-out nuclear war is past the peak — but the five-year build-up cost totals more than $44 billion.

Deputy Secretary of Defense Cyrus R. Vance, speaking for ailing Secretary Robert S. McNamara, has been giving the House Armed Services Committee the Defense Department's annual report on the nation's military position.

As is customary, these hearings are behind closed doors.

Analysis of the budget shows that of the $247.7 billion outlay for all defense programs

Earth Is Mysteriously Expanding, Scientist Says

By HAL R. COOPER

LONDON (AP) — A British physicist said Saturday there is evidence the earth is mysteriously expanding like a balloon and is now nearly twice its original size.

The theory was put forward by Dr. K.M. Creer of the Newcastle University physics department in an article in the science magazine, Nature.

Dr. Creer noted that the earth's great land masses and their continental shelves — the edges shallowly submerged beneath the seas — now cover only 30 per cent of the planet's surface.

On an earth only 55 per cent as big, these land masses could have covered the entire surface of the globe, Dr. Creer said, and "the present shapes of the continents are consistent with the supposition that they once comprised a complete outer shell of a smaller earth."

Geologists have long been intrigued by the fact that, for instance, the eastern edge of the continent of South America would fit almost perfectly into the western edge of Africa if they were pushed together, suggesting that once both were part of the same land mass.

There also would be an excellent fit between the adjoining edges of North America, Greenland and Western Europe if these masses were brought together by a shrinking of the globe.

The age of the earth is generally estimated at 4½ billion years.

Dr. Creer suggested that all the land masses were in one piece when the earth was about a billion years old, and that this shell cracked and the segments drifted apart during an expansion process which has been going on for the succeeding 3½ billion years.

Dr. Creer said the source of the vast energy needed to bring about such a ballooning of the globe is still a mystery.

1,000 Man-Made Objects Mark Space Age Shots

By VERN HAUGLAND

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 1,000 man-made objects — satellites, spacecraft, capsules and assorted bits and pieces thereof — have been placed in orbit since the space age dawned Oct.4, 1957.

Tabulations prepared by the Goddard Space Flight Center at nearby Greenbelt, Md., show that 243 of these objects were satellites launched by the United States or its friendly partners, and 94 were Soviet-launched satellites.

Of that total, 103 U.S.-sponsored satellites are still in orbit, along with 16 made in Russia. The record lists as "decayed" satellites — those no longer in orbit — 140 of United States and 78 of Soviet origin.

Many of the satellites separated after launch into two or more space objects, or broke apart accidentally or by design, to produce space junk. The worst offender on this score was the vehicle which on June 29, 1961, produced the transit 4A navigation satellite, the Injun satellite, and 204 pieces of metal. All are still in orbit.

The next most prolific source of space debris was a Soviet launch of Oct. 24, 1962, which produced 24 orbiting objects. The last of these dropped out of the sky in late February 1963.

Goddard's records identify 460

'Mutiny' on Ship Was Only 'Rebellion'

By RAY KOHN

NEW YORK (AP) — Mutiny on the East River? Not quite, but a "rebellion" of Chinese crewmen demanding more movies and less overtime brought out helicopters, Coast Guard cutters, and a police riot squad.

Swarming aboard the 22,000-ton craft, the police plus immigration and customs officers encountered a crew of 25 Hong Kong Chinese, a Briton and a Cuban, and 17 Dutch officers. Everything was as quiet as the sluggish East River current.

What caused the tempest in the tanker? The captain, referring to an incident 10 days ago, said: "It was a stormy night, and we were on our way back to Curacao from New York. The officers were watching a Gina Lollabrigida picture in the saloon when suddenly the door opened and five of the Chinese crewmen pushed in. Ten more were waiting in the passageway.

"They raised a riot. They yelled and swore. One of them pointed to the projector. 'It is our turn to have a movie tonight,'' he shouted.

"They claimed that the officers had had four movies in a row since they had had one."

That was the movie menace on the part of 17 of the Chinese.

Now for the labor dispute: About six months ago the Chinese complained about their wages of $100 a month for a 48-hour week. The figure is about a quarter of what an American seaman would receive at union scale.

So the company raised wages for the Chinese to $150, but with about 50 hours of overtime a month.

Everything is quiet now aboard the Reza Shah. The 17 indignant crewmen were zoomed out of Kennedy Airport Friday night, bound for Hong Kong.

The "mutinous" men kind of had a last laugh at that. Their excess baggage charges amounted to $1,400, and an airlines official said the tab would be picked up by the steamship company.

Soldier Just Naturally Shoots to Win a Trophy

The hunter sighted in on the proud frightened buck and dropped him with one shot. Not bad for a nine year old boy whose 30.06 was nearly as long as he was tall.

Sixteen years later, Spec. 4 Terry Wells, 25, Ft. Carson, can recount stories about hunting bear on Kodiak Island in Alaska, stalking deer in the Orient, and challenging wild boar in Tahiti, to say nothing of his collection of 150 trophies and 600 marksmanship medals.

Wells, who began hunting with his Army father (Lt. Col. Elbert Wells who lives on Catamount Ranch in Woodland Park), is one of the rare sportsmen who has combined his love of the outdoors with a keen eye and a steady trigger finger.

Recently he won the individual smallbore rifle championship at Carson, bettering the record score he set last year. But that was only one of a long line of triumphs that began in 1954 when at 13 he won the Alaskan Junior Sectional championship over National Rifle Association competitors.

Since then he has won third, fifth, eighth, and twelfth in the annual International Postal meets. He has also served on regional teams which have taken championships.

Last year Wells was on the 5th Division rifle team but his company felt they needed him so they brought him back to work in their armory. He is a member of the 1st Battalion 10th Infantry which cornered the marksmanship honors at Carson's recent meet.

Wells doesn't know if he will get back on the team or not, but he hopes he will. "I joined the Army to shoot," he says, "On the outside I couldn't afford to shoot as much as I would have liked."

When he was on the team, he fired 150 rounds a day.

Wells' hunting trips have taken him to many parts of the world where he has bagged deer, elk, moose, bear, wild boar, and mountain goats. He has hunted over the continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, Tahiti, Japan, Korea, and China.

Wells considers himself a Coloradan. He fishes and considers himself a pretty fair lure man, and has taken a fancy to the state's game birds, the pheasant being his favorite.

He has several rifles but at the moment his favorite is a .22 Remington target rifle. At least that's what it started out as; Wells is also a gunsmith, as is his father, and is a graduate of the Denver School of Trades. Some of the modifications on his rifle include an enlarged stock which is equipped with a thumb hole and a trigger that is set to fire when a certain weight is applied.

The 1st Battalion 10th Infantry was the outstanding unit in Carson's recent smallbore rifle and pistol competition; it had the winning company and battalion rifle teams, the winning pistol team, and the top individual rifleman.

Besides Wells' new record, two others were set in the contest. First Sgt. Robert Simon, A Battery 6th Battalion 20th Artillery, successfully defended his individual smallbore pistol championship. He scored 857 points out of a possible 900 this year, bettering the old record which he set last year by nine points.

The other new record was set by 5th Aviation Battalion Headquarters Company in the .22 pistol company team matches. Team members were Maj. Robert Lemon, Sgt. 1.C. Alpha Taylor, Spec. 4 Robert Shoberg and Spec. 4 Cline Herren Jr.

Commie China Suffers Defeat In Nigeria

By ANDREW BOROWIEC

NIAMEY, Niger (AP) — Communist China's revolutionary effort in Africa has suffered a defeat in the former French colony of Niger. It coincided with dramatic events in the Congo and received little or no attention in the world press.

A series of attacks by guerrillas trained in China and Algeria were crushed by Niger's small army aided by tough Haoussa tribesmen.

Terrorists caught with arms in hand were dragged in village dust and shot dead. Outside the police station on this capital, a body lay for a whole day in sizzling sun as an example to those who might consider plotting against President Hamani Diori.

Interrogation of prisoners disclosed they belonged to the illegal opposition party Sawaba, led by Djibo Bokary, a disgruntled foe of Diori who fled the country in 1959.

Commuting between Ghana and Algeria, Bokary received large sums of money from Communist China to launch a revolution against Diori, Western diplomats say.

An estimated 150 African commandos, recruited mainly among Niger emigres in Ghana, were sent to China and trained in the use of firearms, commando tactics and preparation of fire bombs. Others were trained in Algeria.

Last fall, at a Communist meeting in Hanoi, North Viet Nam, Red China disclosed its interest in unseating pro-Western Diori. A Chinese-sponsored resolution approved "the struggle for freedom in Niger."

According to Western intelligence sources, the Chinese asked Bokary to show something for money handed him over a three-year period.

The result was what Western sources describe as a "clumsy, ill-prepared, badly organized attempt at revolutionary warfare."

Western diplomats say the crushing of the revolt has strengthened Diori's pro-Western regime. The abortive coup also alerted Diori to the possibility of more similar attempts.

Vigilance committees and self-defense groups were set up in villages along the country's borders.

Diori has joined Ivory Coast's conservative President Felix Houphouet-Boigny in spearheading anti-China activity in Africa.

Niger has a population of over three million sparsely spread out over 459,000 square miles. Cattle and peanuts are the main exports.

Grand Junction Hospital Proposed for Criminals

DENVER (AP) — The 10th Circuit Court of Appeals has upheld a National Labor Relations Board order directing a Grand Junction employer to bargain in good faith with his employes' representative.

The NLRB had found that W. R. Hall Distributor, W. R. Hall Transportation and Storage Co., and W. R. Hall Moving and Storage had engaged in unfair labor practices for interfering with the rights of its workers to organize.

The firm is engaged in the wholesale distribution of petroleum products and in the transportation and storage of household goods.

Teamsters Local 16 was certified as the collective bargaining agent for about 15 employes on Oct. 9, 1961. Although negotiations were carried on be- 28, 1962, little or no progress tween Dec. 13, 1961, and July was made, the NLRB found.

Circuit Judge David T. Lewis, Jean S. Breitenstein and Delmas C. Hill ruled Friday that the Hall firm lacked good faith in bargaining because of delays, lack of preparation and unreasonable demands.

The judges also held that efforts by Hall's son, Thomas, to draft a petition to oust the union during Dec., 1961, also constituted a violation of the National Labor Relations Act.

There are now 1.3 million Americans alive today who have been cured of cancer, according to the American Cancer Society.

City Parking Meter Receipts Show Drop

City parking meter receipts showed a sharp drop last month compared to January 1964.

Deputy City Treasurer James O'Leary said January receipts amounted to $11,168 compared to $12,231 for January 1964.

The city has about 2,100 parking meters, about the same as a year ago at this time.

An increase in the number of downtown parking lots is believed to be one reason for the drop in the parking meter receipts, but January is normally a slow month.

Power Battle Predicted for State Democrats

By EDWARD M. McMANUS

DENVER (UPI) — Colorado Democrats appeared headed for a power struggle in the wake of the surprise announcement by State Party Chairman Robert Maytag Thursday that he was not a candidate for re-election.

Maytag's statement triggered a lot of speculation, but no one announced as an open candidate for the job. State Sen. Roland (Sonny) Mapelli, D-Denver, appeared likely to be the first hopeful to make a bid for the post despite his denials.

Maytag, whose party scored a landslide victory last November, said he was stepping down "to devote more time to private business."

Although he made no mention of further political plans, some Democrats interpreted the decision as a step toward seeking high office—U.S. senator, governor or lieutenant governor—in 1966.

Maytag's two-year term officially ends March 20, the date the Democratic State Central Committee meets to elect a successor.

Former Gov. Steve McNichols, now the party's national committeeman and a likely candidate for senator or governor in 1966, is expected to put someone in his political "camp" for the position.

Among the Democrats mentioned Thursday as potential candidates were George Williams, Boulder County chairman; Paul Bechtol of Colorado Springs, 3rd Congressional District chairman; Roland Fariey of Pueblo, who ran against Maytag for the chairmanship two years ago State Rep. John R. P. Wheeler of Greeley; Arnold Alperstein, Jefferson County chairman; Vince Ryan, Denver chairman; and McNichols' brother Bill, who is Denver public works manager.

ADC Bags BOMARC in Gulf of Mexico Range

Air Defense Command pilots at Tyndall AFB, Fla. marked a first by intercepting a BOMARC drone target flying at more than 1,500 miles per hour at an altitude of over 50,000 feet.

The interception was within five minutes after the Bomarc "A" supersonic drone target lifted off its launch pad and streaked down the Air Force Gulf of Mexico Missile Range.

The mission was the first of a series of firing exercises of supersonic interceptors against the obsolete BOMARC target drone.

The high speed and high altitude capabilities of the BOMARC drones make them ideal to evaluate the Command's supersonic interceptor and air-to-air missile force.

Nervous Upset Can Have Spinal Origin

By The Colorado Chiropractic Society

Nervousness can be a good thing when nature calls for it normally, but millions of Americans are considered to be too nervous for their own good health — ulcers and a variety of other complications can result.

What causes abnormal nervousness?

This condition comes about when the body, for some reason, cannot remain calm and steady. The cause may be a natural one, that is, from the excitement of watching a thrilling movie or reading an exciting story in a fiction or history book. It is a delight to see children who are "jumping up and down" in anticipation of a surprise. And in times of danger, nature causes the nerves to become super sensitive to sound, sight and other senses.

These instances of nervousness are evidence that the individual is in an excellent state of nerve health. But what about the man or woman who is nervous without apparent cause?

The Doctor of Chiropractic has been gaining steadily in recognition for help he is giving sufferers in this field. More and more people are finding out that unexplained nervousness is so often the result of nerve pressur in the spine. But such condition does not mean there is an immediate danger of total paralysis, or that the patient will have to spend weeks in a hospital bed with his legs in traction, the doctor points out. But it does mean the patient is likely to be the victim of spinal subluxation, a condition where one or more of the spinal vertebrae are slightly twisted, and nerves are being pinched.

These pinched nerves are oftn determined to be the cause of nevousness — the victim "just can't keep still," because the nerves are pinched and are sending false messages telling muscles to get up and move, even though the victim doesn't want to move and his brain keeps saying to keep still.

But pinched nerves in the spinal column can send fake messages telling glands such as the adrenals or pituitaries to work when they should not do so, and the person may be in a constant state of nervousness as a result of an oversupply of hormones in his system. Growth disturbances in children can result if the pituitaries are not functioning properly.

CU Scholarship Planned For Skiers

Formation of a special scholarship foundation honoring the late Bud Werner, international skiing champion from Steamboat Springs who was killed by a snow slide last year in Switzerland, was announced by C. Neil Norgren, president of the foundation, officials of the University of Colorado and Mrs. Vanda Werner.

The announcement of the Bud Werner Memorial Scholarship Foundation was made at a meeting attended by Mrs. Werner, foundation trustees, representatives of CU and members of the press.

Norgren said that the foundation will provide a perennial four-year scholarship each year to the University of Colorado. It will be limited to students from throughout Colorado who have maintained above average academic standards and demonstrated "notable interest and ability in the sport of skiing."

"Funds for the needs of the foundation and the support of the scholarship will be derived solely from public donations and contributions," Norgren said. "We have set a goal of $50.000 to meet these requirements."

Four students are attending CU under the first such scholarship to be awarded: Jim Barrows, Steamboat Springs; Bill Marolt Jr., Aspen; Clark Matis, Durango; and Billy Yeager, Fraser.

Nominees for the scholarships will be selected from Colorado high school applicants in January of each year.

Serving as trustees of the foundation are C. Neil Norgren of Denver, president; Milton E. Meyer Jr., Denver, secretary-treasurer; and Dr. Meritt H. Stiles of Spokane, president of the U. S. National Ski Association, who will serve a two year term as trustee.

Tax decutible contributions to the Bud Werner Memorial Scholarship Foundation may be sent to: 2345 First National Bank Building, Denver.

She Got Pet, But Now Mo Goes Back

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — When politely asked recently if she could have a pet, her father obliged.

He brought home a lion.

It wasn't too much of an accomplishment for Maureen's father to find a baby lion. He is Howard Hays — superintendent of the Highland Park Zoo here.

But soon Maureen may be without her pet. Her dad says the cub now weighs 30 pounds and is getting too big to be kept in the house.

Hays said that in about a week, it will be back to the zoo for "Little Mo."

Anti - Death Penalty Group Is Formed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A group called Californians to Abolish State Killings has opened a statewide drive to abolish the death penalty.

San Quentin Chaplain Byron E. Eshelman launched the campaign Friday at a Los Angeles news conference.

"Our plan is based on the precept that no man is hopeless," said the chaplain. "First-degree murderers are the most dynamic people. They can be changed."

Although California has had a moratorium on the capital penalty for two years, courts have continued to sentence criminals to death. There are now 52 under sentence of death in state prisons.

DISTINGUISHED COMPANY — Second Lieutenant Dave Nuss of Johnstown, Penn., early in his military career began marching beside the great and near great personalities of the world. As commander of the NORAD honor guard, he accompanies each visiting dignitary while they inspect the sharp spit-and-polish Canadian-United States military formations. This time it's a U.S. Congressional Medal of Honor winner, Captain David McCampbell, retiring from the U.S. Navy at NORAD after a distinguished military career of 31 years. (NORAD Photo)

SHE'S ON FIRST

MALVERN, Ark. (AP) — It was a series of firsts when Mrs. Doris Baum killed a 125-pound spike buck on the first day of the second deer season here.

Lieutenant Nuss Walks Ahead of NORAD General

Boredom is now a work in his vocabulary. Inconsistency to him is a way of life.

One morning the 1963 graduate of the USAL Academy is marching with ramrod stiffness beside a VIP North American Air Defense Command visitor as they inspect the Canadian-United States honor guard.

Earlier that same day, attired in a military field jacket and baseball cap, he was squinting through a surveyor's transit as he completed preliminary estimates on a building modification at NORAD.

On his way to work that morning, this same typical young American was listening to the Colorado Springs music, news and sports station on his Jeep radio.

Just prior to his relaxing hour, he was in the midst of another job — his own version of moonlighting as he made an estimate for adding a room, fireplace and basement to a friend's home.

Dave Nuss, the young Air Force Second Lieutenant, like many another military man in this high cost - of - living era, has his own small contracting business.

You can describe Dave Nuss as a go - getting young American who is in the U.S. Air Force as a career. By choice — and Dave was not in the upper half of his class — he is not a flying officer.

"I wanted something more than that," is the way Nuss describes his choice of careers. "Since I've always been handy with tools, engineering seemed to be my field. Now I'm a member of a profession of which I am proud," he continued.

While performing his extra duty as Commander of the North American Air Defense Command honor guard, he is usually one of the first three people to shake the hand of a visiting dignitary just before that man insepects the honor guard. He is one of the General John K. Gerhart, NORAD commander in chief. It happens during the honor guard inspection ceremony.

Since taking over that job six short months ago, he has drilled his men, drilled them again, and when they were finished, put them on the drill field.

End result for Nuss and Headquarters NORAD is one of the most spit - and - polish young units in the U.S. military establishment.

A tribute to his leadership is the fact that these men are not full time honor guard members. They perform a NORAD headquarters job during normal working hours and practice for Nuss during off-duty periods.

Goodwill Industries Still Seek Discards

'Such valentines will help keep a flow of materials needed by handicapped workers during the winter months. Donations of usable clothing, appliances and household articles are especially sought," Goodwill officials said.

Donated materials will be repaired by the handicapped at Goodwill and sold through the organization's three outlets in Colorado Springs.

There are collection booths for Goodwill clothing at 25 area shopping centers. Goodwill will pick up sizeable donations.

Curator Keeps Count Of Museum Visitors

There were 1,277 visitors to the city's Pioneers Museum last month, according to Miss Dorothy Smith, curator.

Business has been on the increase since the last week of January when 3rd graders from School District 11 started their annual visits to the museum.

Because of their study of region history, the visits represent a part of their audio visual education. Indian displays and names of Gold Rush pioneers are a special interest to the students.

beginning in fiscal 1962 and projected through fiscal 1966 the allocation for the strategic retaliatory system amounts to $34.5 billion.

This does not include a second package, labeled "continental air and missile defense forces," which totals $10 billion for the five years. That is for direct defense against nuclear attack on the United States and complements the retaliatory action which would amount to offensive action for purposes of defense.

The $4.5-billion program proposed for strategic retaliatory forces in the next fiscal year is the smallest since the build-up was started with a $9-billion commitment in fiscal 1962.

As "packaged" for budgetary and functional programs, the strategic retaliatory force consists of: something over 850 insists of: something over 850 intercontinental ballistic missiles and about 900 long-range bombers of the Air Force; a current count of 22 Polaris submarines, with 352 missiles in their launching tubes.

By the end of the next fiscal year, ICBMS are scheduled to total about 1,000; there will be some reduction in the number of manned bombers with older aircraft phased out; by the end of the next fiscal year more than 30 of the scheduled 41 Polaris submarines will be in operation.

McNamara, when he appears before the committee, and his several civilian and military assistants, will give Congress detailed cost figures to explain the military requirements.

"The number of civilian dentists engaged in active practice is less than the desirable ratio; the waiting period for appointments, when they can be obtained, is too long; and the costs of civilian dental service, while approximately the same as the national average, are considerably excessive for the large number of dependents of junior officers and enlisted personnel of my command," Gen. Maroun said.

The dental society is opposing the designation of the post as remote primarily because the request was based, not on adequate civilian dental services, but insufficient pay of low grade personnel, Dr. Wambach said.

"We can find nothing in the pertinent laws which would indicate that a 'remote' area designation should be available to augment the income of low pay grade personnel," a statement from the dental society says.

The local dental group, in conjunction with the Colorado Dental Association, proposes the following program to work toward a solution to the problem:

A survey of the situation at each military establishment should be made to determine dental needs of dependents, the financial status of the people involved and the number of persons involved.

The survey could be made by some qualified organization such at the United States Public Health Service or State Health Department.

"Based upon these statistics, pursue a program seeking an amendment to the existing law based upon the Policy Statement on Military Dependent Care of the American Dental Association.

"If the survey indicates a need for emergency action to provide dental care for needy dependents, a mutually agreable program should be developed at the military establishment, and in consultation with the State Health Department or U.S. Public Health Service," the society says.

hunks of junk of U. S. origin, and 182 of the Russian variety, as having orbited the earth at one time or another. Of these, 372 U. S. pieces and 16 Soviet items are still in orbit.

The compilation does not take into account some 400 million hair-thin dipoles or wires, called Project West Ford space needles, launched by the United States in May 1962; and presumably orbiting in a continuous band, some five miles wide and 25 miles thick, encircling the earth.

Also still in orbit, but around the sun rather than the earth, are seven U. S. spacecraft and six pieces of junk, and six Soviet spacecraft.

The U. S. spacecraft now ranging far out in space include Pioneer 4, launched in 1959; Pioneer 5, 1960; 3. Mariner 2 and Ranger 5, in 1962; and Mariners 3 and 4, 1964.

In similar solar orbits are the empty rockets for Rangers 3 and 5, Mariners 2 and 4, and for Rangers 4 and 7, the two spacecraft that hit the moon.

Soviet vehicles in orbit around the sun include Lunik 1, launched in 1959; a 1961 Venus probe, a 1962 Mars probe, Lunik 4 which missed the moon in 1963, and Zond 1 and Zond 2 in 1964.

Soviet Russia has orbited and recovered five manned spacecraft, the U. S. four. Like their American counterparts, Soviet scientists have hit the moon with two vehicles.

Dear Abby--

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Head for the Hills!

DEAR ABBY: My husband's sister is married to a man who most people find very hard to take. He is well-read, but has a very big mouth and loves to argue. It is impossible for anyone to have a friendly conversation with him around. Three years ago they moved a few blocks from us and now, whenever we have company, "Big Mouth" barges in and takes over the conversation and turns it into an argument. That's bad enough, but now a bigger problem has come up:

We recently purchased a lake lot and were very excited about building on it until we found out that THEY had bought the lot right next to ours. How can we get out of this trap with the least amount of hard feelings? His wife is a nice person, but that doesn't help matters any. —TOO CLOSE

DEAR TOO CLOSE: If your husband can't persuade his sister not to build on the lake lot next to yours, have him tell "Big Mouth" to go jump in the lake, and you head for higher ground.

DEAR ABBY: Does a man who has never been married have the right to ask a divorcee what "killed" her marriage? I am referring to my own situation. I am interested in courting a divorcee, but before I become too deeply involved with her I would like to know something about why her first marriage ended in divorce. Have I a right to know, or not? —BACHELOR AT 42

DEAR BACHELOR: Yes, you have a right to know. But be aware that what she tells you will be only HER side of the story.

DEAR ABBY: My mother and father were married 44 years. When my father died three years ago my mother got a big double grave and put a headstone up with his and her names on it. Then she remarried. She is 65 and her new husband is way up in his seventies. Last Sunday, when my husband and I went to the cemetery to put a wreath on my father's grave, I saw a new stone had been put up nearby. I couldn't believe my eyes. I said to my husband, "Drive back—I want to see that new stone." He drove back and I saw a brand new stone with the names of my mother and her new husband on it. Now, what about my poor father laying in that grave expecting my mother to join him some day? If something should happen to my mother's new husband, she would probably remarry again, and before you know it, she'd have her name all over the cemetery with half a dozen different guys. Just where does my mother belong when her time comes? —DISGUSTED WITH MOTHER

DEAR DISGUSTED: The choice is your mother's. But it would make sense for her to be laid beside the man who stood by her side for 44 years.

DEAR ABBY: Even more stupid than the question, "Was this one planned?" is "What do you want, a boy or a girl?" I had two boys when I became pregnant with my third child, and I heard that question for six months. I assure you, I got very tired of it. We really didn't care whether we had a boy or a girl. All we wanted was a healthy, normal baby. I had a girl. The next stupid question started ringing in my ears. "Are you done now?" How do you answer a question like that? —EXASPERATED

DEAR EXASPERATED: A question like that deserves to be ignored.

Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, R-Maine, a member of the Armed Services Committee, said stabilized government should be a key concern.

Sen. Frank Carlson, R-Kan., suggested new measures to improve the military picture. "I am in favor of sealing off the movement of troops and material from North Viet Nam to South Viet Nam by posting border guards," he said.

Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., who had called previously for U.S. disengagement, spelled out his stand in favor of a negotiatthe Foreign Relations Committed settlement Tuesday.

Two Injured In Car Crash

Two Colorado Springs men were injured when their car careened into two parked cars early Saturday morning, police reported.

James Moore Schwartz, 28, of 1818 N. Cascade Ave. was driving north in the 400 block of North Wahsatch Avenue at "an apparent high rate of speed" when he hit a parked car. The parked vehicle then travelled forward for 21 feet and hit another car, parked on the same side of the street. Both cars were unoccupied.

Schwartz then continued north until he was aprehended by police in the 1300 block of North Wahsatch Avenue. Officers who stopped Schwartz reported that he and a passenger, Thomas Schwartz, of the same address, were "bleeding badly."

Robert Hibbard, downtown department store owner and president of the Retail Merchant's Association, said the COST committee has "done some talking" about supporting candidates in the upcoming election but "there has been no final decision."

All members of the council voted for the sales tax, with the exception of William Becker who is not up for re-election. All later voted to rescind their action after thousands of citizens signed anti-tax initiative petitions.

Hoth, who is winding up a six-year term, will run for a two-year seat. He was elected to the council in 1959 and chosen mayor by the council in 1963.

In giving reasons for running, the mayor avoided mention of the sales tax issue. He recently joined other councilmen in urging the state legislature to introduce bills legalizing county-wide sales taxes.

"Although I had considered retiring from city government to spend more time with my family and business associates," Hoth said, "many local citizens whose judgment I respect have encouraged me to seek re-election at this time.

Restaurant Man In Atlanta to De - Segregate

federal judge ordered him to pay a $200 fine for each day his restaurant was open and practiced racial discrimination.

Maddox said he was not surprised at the court's decision but was shocked so many Americans had failed to fight the passage of the Civil Rights Act, which, he added, already had brought hate, prejudice, violence and death.

He asked his friends and supporters not to make unkind remarks about U.S. Dist. Judge Frank Hooper, who held him in civil contempt and set the fine.

Hooper, Maddox claimed, was bound by a previous decision of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Every table was occupied at his restaurant Saturday, but he said loss of profits caused by attempts to integrate his eating place, together with legal expenses, amounted to $100,000. Expenses that could result from other cases pending might bring the total loss to about $130,000, he reported.

Crime Rate Same Here Says Chief

Police Chief Cecil J. McKissick said the crime rate in Colorado Springs last month was almost the same as during January, 1964. He said there was an increase of less than one-half per cent, which is figured on the basis of 397 offenses known to police last month and 379 during January of a year ago.

In the more serious crimes category, the chief added, the increase was slightly in excess of one per cent since there were 219 such offenses last month and 198 for the same month a year ago.

In this latter category, there were no murders or manslaughters, three rapes, five robberies, seven aggravated assaults, 34 burglaries, 136 cases of larceny under $50 in value and 25 auto thefts.

Other offenses last month included accidental injury, 12; deaths, 5; assault, 12; malicious mischief, 71; suicide, 3; attempted suicide, 3; forgery, 2; confidence game, 4; and bad checks, 9.

Nearly 20 per cent of the more serious crimes were cleared by arrest, but a much higher percentage on rape, aggravated assault, burglary and auto theft; it was only 14 per cent on larceny cases under $50.

Hermanitz, 50, Fountain, has been charged with the Aug. 8 pistol slaying of William E. Lucas, 2322 Lockhaven Dr. at the Wayside Inn.

During cross-examination conducted by Assistant District Attorney Bob Isaac, the defendant said he did not recall saying "I'm glad I shot the S.O.B." immediately after the shooting, and doubted if he had ever made the remark.

Hermanitz has pleaded innocent and innocent by reason of insanity. The psychopathic hospital has found him legally sane but he is still retaining both pleas and the present trial is on the sanity issue only.

He is represented by attorney William Eckhart and District Attorney Bob Russel is prosecuting with Isaac. Judge Hunter D. Hardeman is presiding.

DENVER (UPI)—A bill establishing a general minimum wage of $1.25 an hour was introduced into the Colorado House of Representatives last week.

Rep. Archie Losco, D-Denver, said Colorado at present had no general minimum wage, except for certain jobs held by women and children.

Lisco said his bill would exempt agricultural workers and apply only to firms employing four or more persons.

The bill would cover employes not protected under federal minimum wage laws.

Rep. Don Brinton, D-Colorado Springs, introduced a bill to provide for the establishment of a state system of junior colleges.

The bill provides for the state to pay 80 per cent of the operating costs of junior colleges and 100 per cent of capital construction expenses.

Winfield Scott Stratton Sold $10 Million Mine

"I received my money as a gift from the Father of us all, and I am responsible for the administration of it all:" this quote from Winfield Scott Stratton sums up the man's philosophy, said Byron Akers Jr. Friday.

Akers was speaking at the meeting of the Colorado Springs Rotary Club at the Acacia Hotel.

After 18 years of prospecting, said Akers, Stratton became the owner of a mine so valuable it was locked with bank vault doors. He sold the mine for $10 million, after it had already produced $27 million worth of gold.

A carpenter with no formal education, Stratton came to Colorado Springs in 1872. He built an Episcopalian church on Pikes Peak Ave., which presently houses the Village Inn; and a house for himself at 115 N. Weber St., the present site of Daniels Motors.

In 1875 he began prospecting in the San Luis Valley area, and lost everything when he bought a claim there. In order to finance his prospecting he had to return each year to carpentry.

"Colorado was the silver capital of the world then," said Akers. In 1890, the Sherman Act had authorized the purchase of 4.5 million ounces of silver, and the free coinage of silver had spurred the mining industry. The act, however, would be repealed about three years later.

On July 3, 1891, Stratton had a dream which told him to place a claim on the south slope of Battle Mountain. "It was no time for reason, but a time for action," Stratton is reported to have said.

The next day he filed two claims, naming them Independence and Washington in honor of the day. It was not until almost two years later, in June 1893, however, that he found the shrdlu hrdlu hrdlu shrdlu shrdl large vein of gold in the Independence.

"Unselfish use of great personal wealth" characterized Stratton, said Akers. Stratton "worth at least $3 million," helped homeless miners from the Cripple Creek - Victor area; was especially generous at Christmas time; and erected Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist churches in Cripple Creek.

He gave $20 thousand to Colorado College and $25 thousand to Colorado School of Mines at Greeley. He also purchased, and donated to Colorado Springs, the land for the City Hall and the El Paso County Court House. He also purchased the site for the Post Office, and resold it to the city for $65,000, "half-price," said Akers. The only pleasure trip he made was one to California.

His marriage, in 1875, lasted only a few months, and he did not acknowledge his son except in his will, when he left him $50,000. The son contested the will and obtained $350,000.

When H. A. W. Tabor went bankrupt after the repeal of the Sherman Act, Stratton gave him a permanent 'loan' of $15,000.

In 1896, Akers said, Stratton stood for the free coinage of silver, and backed William Jennings Bryan. He even offered to bet $100,000 on his election, a bet which, fortunately, was never accepted. Although the maintenance of the gold standard would benefit him personally, "free silver would be the best thing for the working masses," said Stratton, according to Akers.

Stratton bequeathed the remainder of his money to establish a trust fund for the Myron Stratton Home (named for his father) for the aged poor and dependent children, Akers concluded.

Restriction Rejected For Municipalities

DENVER (AP) — The statewide committee of the Governor's Local Affairs Study Commission has rejected a suggestion that it propose legislation restricting the size of municipalities that can incorporate in Colorado.

But it decided to present to the commission Feb. 20 a proposal still to be drafted aimed at large urban areas adjoining cities. The purpose would be to stop them from incorporating to avoid being annexed.

The commission staff suggested legislation to restrict incorporations by setting standards of population and size.

Forty residents in a county of under 25,00 can petition for an election of incorporation, and 75 are required in counties over 25,000.

The committee was told that under the law, "illogical" corporations can grow up.

Cited as examples were Glendale, a Denver suburb with 468 residents; Lakeside, with 28; East Canon, adjoining Canon City, with 1,100; Log Lane Village near Fort Morgan, with 310, and Garden City, 120, and Rosedale, 70, adjoining Greeley.

The Netherlands Antilles are two groups of three islands each in the Caribbean Sea. They are 550 miles apart. The total land area is 394 square miles and the population is 199,607.

Geopolitics Question on Security Seminar Agenda

By GLENN URBAN
Gazete Telegraph
Political Writer

If you are old enough to remember World War II you may remember that nasty word of the day—"geopolitics."

For reasons that are hard to explain now, the word in those emotional days came to mean bad things like Nazis and Hitler and other things—concepts that Americans opposed.

Actually it is a good word, used by respectable people who are really talking about political geography—something like a journalist being called a reporter or newsman.

"Geopolitics" will be one of the topics discussed at the National Security Seminar, scheduled to be held in the City Auditorium the last week of this month and first of next.

There will be 33 illustrated lectures and 17 related films. This is a two-week version of the 10-month course given at the Industrial College of the Armed Forces, Washington.

It is open to the public and for more information about registering for the course, call the Chamber of Commerce, 635-1551, Ext. 6.

The lecture on geopolitics will be given on the afternoon of Feb. 22, the first day of the seminar, by Col. B. C. Andrus Jr., of the Air Force. He describes the field as a study of the origins and use of land power and sea power in the world struggle for peace.

Just to warm your mind up to the geopolitical world, consider:

—You live in the Northern Hemisphere, and so do the majority of the rest of the humans on this globe.

—You live in a temperate climate, and so do most of the rest of the people who live in the Northern Hemisphere.

—America is the most powerful nation on earth, with tremenduous political influence on the globe. Other centers of power and political influence are in the same hemisphere and in the same temperate area.

Now, you ponder those things and you are thinking geopolitics.

You can bet your best pair of boots that Col. Andrus is going to have more to say than the examples above, and that is why the seminar is being held here.

The National Security Seminar is a broad, information packed presentation of facts to American citizens—facts the government thinks the public should know.

The seminar is designed to increase general understanding of the need for cooperation and prepartion in the world of today.

Each seminar session will be about one hour long, supplemented by visual aids, and selected films, and will be a factual and analytical discussion of topics and problems having a bearing on the nation's survival.

A Bite a Week, Roping Deer, Irate Calls Might Be Routine Week at Humane Society

COCK-EYED OPTIMIST—This young terrier paced his cage like the court jester waiting for a chance to entertain someone. A smile from a passer-by seemed to delight him. He seems sure he will be adopted this week.

Gazette Telegraph Staff Writer

Onslaughts from animals, from animals' owners and from animals' owners' neighbors are only a part of the several hundred crises employes of the Humane Society must face daily.

The 11 uniformed employes work two shifts — manning the trucks, feeding and caring for the animals in the shelter and soothing irate callers.

"We are affiliated with the National Humane Society," Martin L. (Skip) Seabolt, shelter manager, explained, "but we are under a board of directors at this particular shelter."

The Colorado Springs branch of the society started in a garage in 1950 when a group of citizens got together to help protect stray animals.

"That was done on a volunteer basis," Seabolt said. "Besides the work we do for the Society today, we also are deputized and bonded to enforce city ordinances. There is no city pound now. The society is more interested in the welfare of the animals and actually is in a better position to handle this job because we have the right type of equipment and trained personnel.

"Last year 7,706 animals were in this shelter. About 1,408 were, placed and 631 were returned to their owners. We were forced to destroy 5,659.

We do our best to place the desirable animals. We hold them here as long as we can, although the city ordinance only requires that we keep them 72 hours. We especially try to hold puppies, pure breds and very old dogs. The puppies often are adopted. The pure breds and the old fat dogs usually are family pets and have strayed away from home."

As for bites, Seabolt said employes average about one bite a week.

"The men on the trucks are the ones who usually get bitten," he said. "You just can't tell. You may start out to pick up a dog and maybe you just have to open the door of the truck and he will jump in by himself. And the next one might be one you couldn't catch if you chased him on horseback."

Seabolt explained that the more experienced men usually train newcomers.

"Requirements for this sort of work mainly are that a man likes animals and that he is able physically to handle them. He can be trained right here. One of the questions I always ask an applicant is how he feels about destroying animals. If he says he doesn't mind at all, I won't hire him. We have to destroy most of the animals that come in here, but we don't want to have personnel who enjoy it.

"In this business, the animals are not hard to get along with. It's the people who get to be a pain.

"We get calls on all kinds of animals. We roped a buck deer last summer. He had been running around in a residential section. Of course, we get all kinds of calls to come get a cat out of a tree or a dog out of a culvert. And we get lots of calls on snaes, rats, monkeys, skunks, even an occasional alligator. Wild animals go to the zoo. Calls on bears, we usually refer to the State Fish and Game Department.

"We even get calls on people. Just the other day a man called to ask how long we keep people before we turn them loose.

"Of course, we get several calls daily from neighbors who are worried about the way someone is treating a dog. You usually can figure about 90 per cent of those are all right. Some owners may need a little advice. But we check them all out. The balance of those calls we, as state humane officers, can take into court if the district attorney agrees action should be taken.

"And we get all kinds of lost and found cases where the owner will call and want to know if their black and white dog is here. Right now we are not full and we have about 15 black and white dogs back there.

"With the city's leash law, we get busier during the summer. We average from 60 to 900 animals a month then. And we have trouble trying to enforce the leasr law too sometimes. Not long ago we picked up a man's dog and a couple of days later he called to see if we had it. When I told him we did, he said he would give me just 30 minutes to deliver it back to his home or he was going to call his attorney and sue us.

"Situations like that leave us between a rock and a hard place several times a day. Our contract with the city prevents us from being able to do anything. A short time later, the fellow showed up and paid the 'bailing out' fee. He didn't say anymore about suing us.

"As for the effect this work has on the employes, most of us were raised around animals and like them very much. I was raised on a farm and learned to like animals when I was very young. I've had 17 years of experience in this business, 12 of those were right here. I have three children, two boys and a little girl, seven. We usually have about four pets at our house. In fact, I try not to let my little girl come over here very often because she likes animals so well.

"We get a lot of people through looking at the animals, especially on Saturday. Several Scout troops come through here every weekend. A lot of kids who come in with their parents leave crying for a puppy or kitten or something.

"We make it a policy not to allow children to take animals home by themselves. Their parents have to be with them. Sometimes the parents will call and tell us it's all right to let their child have one.

"Of course, there is a charge with any placement. It is $4 for a male dog, $2.50 for a rabies shot plus the license fee. It costs about $10 for a male. There is an additional $15 spay fee for any female. We don't allow any of the females to leave here without a deposit for having her spayed and we reserve the right to reclaim the dog if the new owners do not have her taken care of.

"For strays, there is a $5 impoundment fee."

Personnel at the shelter include Seabolt, Ronald W. Hunter, assistant manager; Janice Cohrs, secretary; William Kinnamen, Francis Snedeker, Wilbert Thompson and Ronald Hammer, drivers; Harold Grinde and Adolphe Lavely, kennel men, and Dana Cyr and Joe Beckham, who handle night calls.

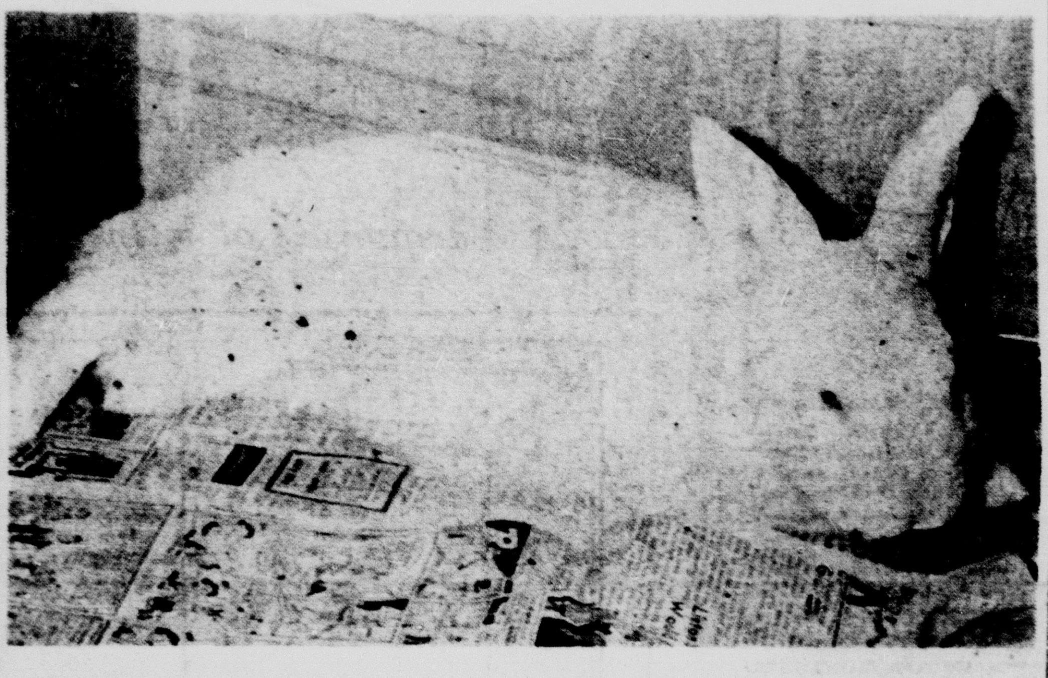
A NICE GIRL LIKE YOU — How did a nice girl like you ever wind up in a place like this, the child asks as she browses through the shelter. She looked at her mother with large, sad eyes. Mother shook her head but stopped to look back at the pups.

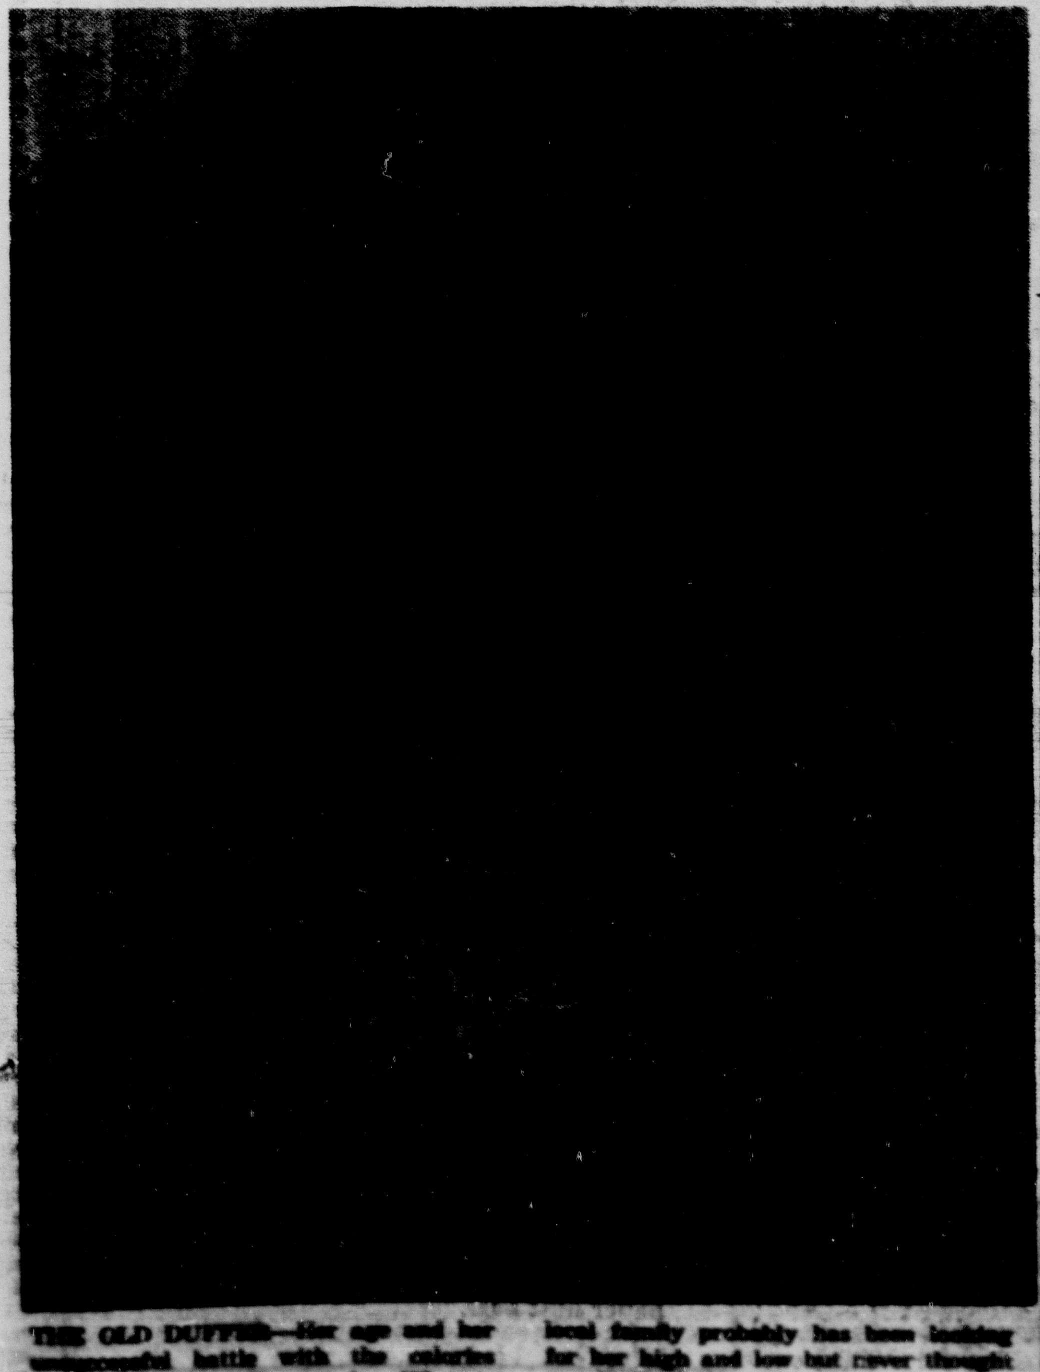


HARE'S HEAVEN?—I hardly think so, but you get three squares a day and a warm place to sleep and, you never can tell, someone may come along to take me away from all this.

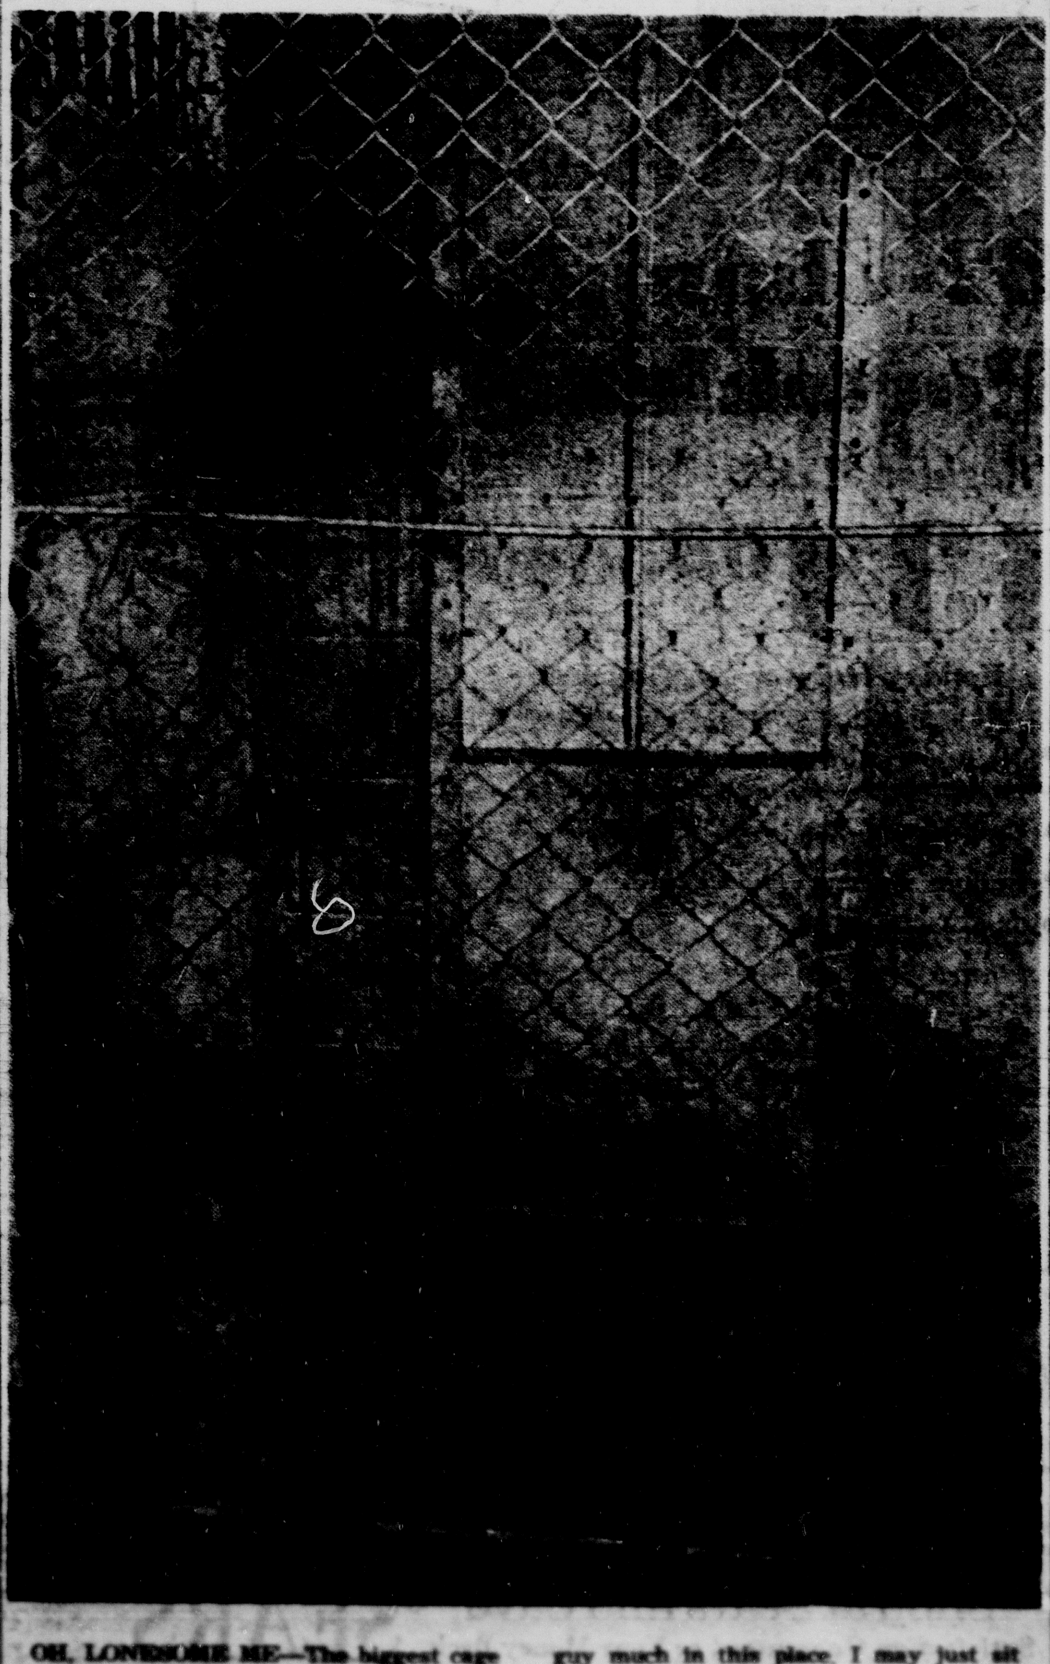
MAN, WHAT A NIGHT?—No, the look isn't caused by a hangover, that's just the way I look, this lovely Bassett Hound explains. It still looks as if this bloodhound could use a bloody Mary.

PEEK-A-BOO—This pup, concerned by all the racket a newcomer was making, just couldn't resist taking a look to see what was going on in the next cage.

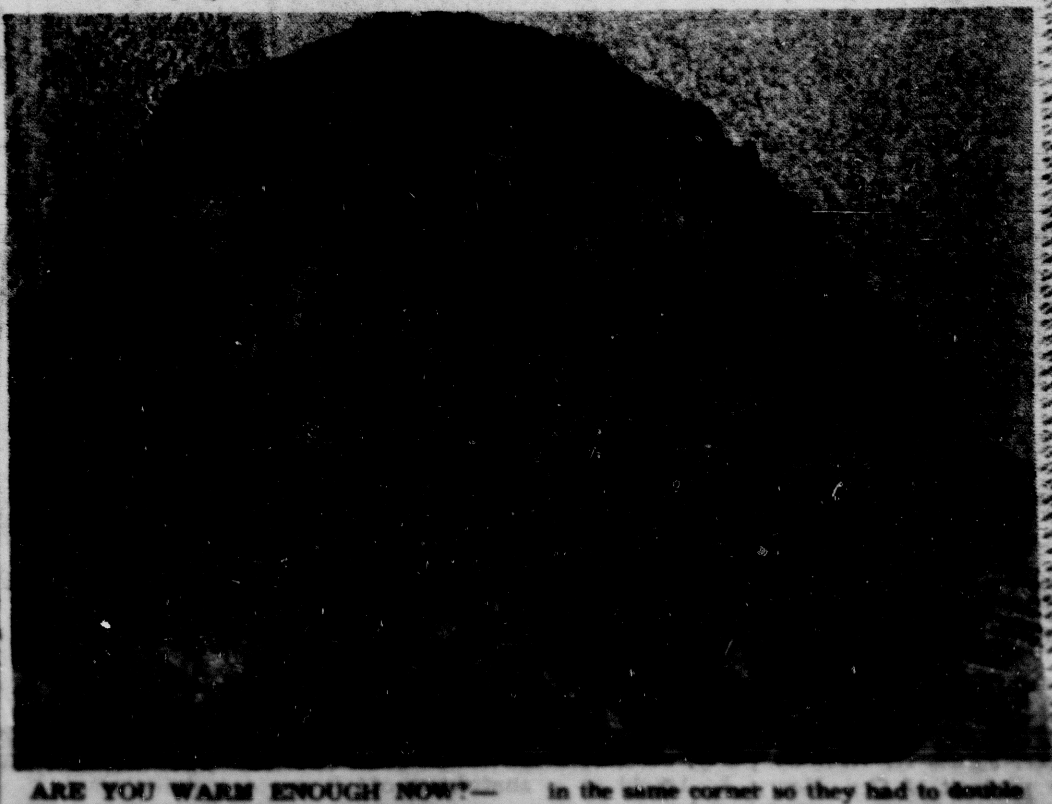
THERE MUST BE SOME MISTAKE—Well, that's their story, as they peer from behind the bars in a cage at the Humane Society Shelter, 633 S. 8th St. Both cats are available for adoption.



THE OLD DUFFER—Her age and her unsuccessful battle with the calories shows she was well-cared for. What is she doing at the animal shelter? Some local family probably has been looking for her high and low but never thought to call the Humane Society.



OH, LONESOME ME—The biggest cage in the place and me without a roommate on my first day. They don't show a guy much in this place. I may just sit here and cry all night.



ARE YOU WARM ENOUGH NOW?—The cage is large enough for 10 dogs their size, but they both wanted to sleep in the same corner so they had to double up, so to speak. Nothing like good old bunk beds, eh?

PROFILE OF A NON-COM

Editor's Note: This is another in a series of articles portraying non-commissioned officers of the Army Air Defense Command. As in other Army outfits, ARADCOM looks to its cadre of NCOs to play an important part in providing experience and leadership vital to fulfillment of the command's mission.

By S. SGT. VINCE NAYLOR
ARADCOM

A duty in the Army seldom mentioned is that of seaman. The Army Transportation Corps operates several types of small harbor craft manned by soldier seamen. The duties of these seamen range from deck hands to boat masters.

In the early days of his career, M. Sgt. James H. Bentley of Army Air Defense Command Headquarters served as boat master of a small tug boat. During this period he was stationed first at Camp Gordon Johnston, Fla., where he received his training in harbor craft, and later in the Philippine Islands.

A veteran of more than 17 years of active service, the sergeant has held Army assignments throughout the United States, and in France and the Far East.

Discharged from active duty in 1946, after returning from the Philippines, Sergeant Bentley spent four years in the Reserves and was called back to active service in 1951, during the Korean War.

His initial assignment was as a personnel sergeant at Fort Custer, Mich. This was followed by short tours with the Missouri Military District in St. Louis and at Ft. Carson.

He left the mountain post in February 1954 for duty in Korea as sergeant major of the 13th Engineer (Combat) Battalion, 7th Infantry Division.

In September 1955, Sergeant Bentley decided on a new field and attended the Machine Accounting School at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. After completing the eight-week course he returned to the Washington post and was assigned to the 32d Machine Records Unit. It was from there that he was sent to Ingrandes, France.

Since returning from Europe, the sergeant spent a tour of duty in Chicago and a second tour in Korea. Both assignments were with data processing units.

Arriving at his present assignment in Colorado Springs last month, Sergeant Bentley has the position of chief NCO of the Machine Branch of the 9th Data Processing Unit, ARADCOM headquarters.

The use of electronic date processing machines in the preparation of reports has come to play an important part in the military. It enables the many types of equipment and personnel status reports to be handled faster and more accurately. The responsibility of supervision of the personnel involved in operating these machines and assuring that data is properly processed is that of Sergeant Bentley.

After the arrival of his wife, Caroline, and their son, John, later this month, the Bentleys will live at 2237 E. Boulder St.

Merging of Reserves ROA Meeting Topic

The proposed merger of Army-Air Force Reserve units into the National Guard by the Department of Defense will be discussed Wednesday at a program sponsored by the local chapter of the Reserve Officers Association.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. in the Little Theater of City Auditorium.

The speaker will be Maj. Gen. George O. N. Lodoen, USA, (ret.), director of Army affairs for the ROA. He lives in Washington, D. C.

State Land Board Will Sell Gas Leases

The State Board of Land Commissioners will hold its regular monthly oil and gas lease auction Feb. 17.

Twenty-two tracts of acreage in El Paso County will be included in the sale, which will begin at 2 p.m. in the State Services Building, 1525 Sherman St., Denver.

A complete copy of the sale was forwarded to the county clerk for posting on the bulletin board in the Court House.

Patterson May Get Job as Pen Warden

DENVER (UPI)— State Reformatory Warden Wayne K. Patterson seemed a virtual sure choice today to be the next warden of Colorado State Penitentiary.

The Buena Vista man Thursday got the nod from State Institutions Director David Hamil. However, Hamil refused to say whether he planned to appoint Patterson provisionally.

The final decision will be made on the basis of tests given by the State Civil Service Commission. Commission officials have indicated they would prefer to set up an examination soon and use it to select a warden.

However, Hamil could make a provisional appointment. The appointee then would have to top other applicants in a civil service exam to retain the post.

Patterson, when asked if he would accept the job, said it had not been offered to him, but "I would not duck a job if there is one that needs to be done."

He would replace Warden Harry Tinsley who is stepping down July 1 to concentrate on his other job as state director of corrections.

Singer Pearl Bailey Reported Improved

HOLLYWODO (AP) — Singer Pearl Bailey, 46, who entered Mt. Sinai hospital in Hollywood Monday suffering from severe heart strain, was reported considerably improved Friday.

Her physician said her general condition is good but that she needs a rest. She may be able to return to her normal schedule in two weeks, he said.

TB Association Tests 309 In One Night

The El Paso County Tuberculosis Association tested 309 men and women recently.

Dr. William H. Ryder, chairman of the association's medical advisory committee, said 81 persons tested were sometime infected by the TB germ. He said they would receive X-rays to determine if they had evidence of active disease.

"It is in this way that our citizens are made aware that tuberculosis infection needs a watchful eye," he said. "Infection does not necessarily mean the person is diseased — that's an important distinction. But symptoms of any kind later on could be a warning signal indicating that a check with the family doctor would be very important."

Those tested came from Broadmoor, Palmer Park, west Colorado Springs, Stratton Meadows, Security, Palmer Lake, Falcon and of course Colorado Springs.

The only test assessed was the skin one for TB. Still to be analyzed are tests with the breathing machine to show the ability of the lungs to push air out rapidly. If lungs are too slow in doing this, the individual is advised to check with the family physician.

By age groups, persons between 45 and 64 were in the greatest numbers, there were 49 men and 50 women. Next was the 25 to 34 age group with 26 men and 30 women. There were bank tellers, typists, builders, carpenters, laborers, accountants, car salesmen, a politician and civil service employes.

Tests will continue once a week at the TB association office. The number of persons being tested has increased considerably, the association reports.

The tests are free and financed through contributions and sale of Christmas Seals.

MANY BIRDS STAY NORTH

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — A study at the Pennsylvania State University of 260 different kinds of birds that populate towns and cities in the state during the year, shows that as many as 60 species may choose to spend the winter there. The University urges residents to provide extra food for birds during the winter, particularly after snow and ice storms.

In 1944 Ray Ryerson Began Scout Executive Career

(Editor's Note: Today marks the beginning of National Boy Scout Week. The following article was written for a boy scout publication. The Gazette Telegraph reprints the article with the observance of Boy Scout Week.)

March 15, 1944 was red letter day for Ray Ryerson, Scout Executive of the Pikes Peak Council, Boy Scouts of America. It was the day that Ryerson was given a key to the Scout Headquarters office then located above the old Colorado Springs Music Co., which since burned down. It was the day that he initiated a new dynamic program for boys and young men in the Pikes Peak region through the Boy Scout program.

For under the leadership of Ray Ryerson more than 100,000 different boys under the direction of 20,000 adult leaders have received vital Scout training during his 20 years of service as Scout Executive.

If all the boys and adults who have received Scout training during Ryerson's career in Colorado Springs could be placed at one time in the area now encompassed in metropolitan Colorado Springs, they would completely occupy the entire area.

Yes, today on the average there is a Scout living in one out of every two homes in the entire area. Few if any other organization can boast of dealing with a more complete cross section of boyhood than in the Pikes Peak Scouting. Catholic Protestant, Jew, all races, creeds, the wealthy and not so wealthy, the most athletic type and the handicapped, all hold registrations in the scout movement.

In 1944, 415 Boy Scouts were shown on the official records in the two room Scout Office in the old McIntyre Building. Mrs. Earl Leonard was employed as office secretary and now twenty years later Maimie Leonard is responsible for the records of 10,000 boys and leaders each year. Mrs. A. G. Edstrom and Mrs. Pat Patterson also assist in the many details of serving the largest business enterprise in the region. At least Scouting can boast of serving the most customers of any business because Scouting has more employes than any business firm when one considers the 2500 volunteer employes who serve as adult leaders and the 8000 boys are the customers.

Three District Executives direct the important recruiting, training and planning details of 600 Den Mothers and 1900 adult male leaders in the far flung Pikes Peak Council which now encompasses 7 counties from the Kansas border to the Continental Divide. Harry DeLashmutt, Scotty Kenton and James Wiant, experts in the field of human relations and boy guidance, direct the destinies of hundreds of boys in their respective districts.

Ryerson stated that with the help of hundreds of wonderful business leaders one of the finest Scout camps in the country has been built to carry out the important camping activities of Scouting. A wonderful Scout Service Center, which houses the Administrative offices, has replaced the meager facilities that housed the headquarters in various locations throughout the downtown area.

Ryerson was asked to point out the major reason for the tremendous success of Scouting in the region. His reply was, "If I could point to only one major reason, I would say that it has been the leadership and devotion of the Council Presidents who have served this Council. Such men as Lester Howard, Dr. Roy J. Wasson, Chase Stone, Spencer Penrose, Don M. Alexander, Robert Hibbard, Henry Willie, Roy Bayless, Lyle Norton and Col. Howard H. Cloud.

"If I were to name the two major highlights in my 20 years career, I would say being host in 1960 to the largest gathering of youth in the history of the world, the 5th National Boy Scout Jamboree, held opposite the Air Force Academy.

"Secondly, I would say the pride in knowing that 100,000 boys have seriously accepted the Scout Oath as their code of living. Thousands of business and professional leaders in our community, who only a few short years ago were standing before their Scoutmaster pledging (on my honor, I'll do my best) as they became Tenderfoot Scouts. Probably the greatest thrill of serving as Scout Executive is to meet former Scouts in almost every possible situation who take great delight in telling of some thrilling experience on a hike or in their Scout meeting. Which proves the theory 'once a Scout, always a Scout.'

"Yes, March 15, 1944 was a great day. But March 15, 1965 I believe will be even greater, Ryerson stated, because that day will mark the launching of the most ambitious program in the history of the Pikes Peak Scout Council. The program is called "Triumph for Youth." The objective is to make Scouting available to thusands of additional boys and young men. With the help of God and 1000 additional volunteers, we can provide Scouting for all of the boys between 8 and 18 years of age by 1967. This will mean that every boy who really wants to become a Scout will have thechance to say "on my honor, I will do my best to do my duty to God and my Country and to help other people at all times."

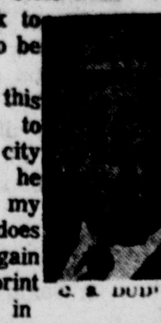
I Remember

By CHARLES S. DUDLEY



C. S. DUDLEY

My wife, who cuts my hair, which is unmistakably gray, tells me the color seems to be coming back to it. It used to be red.

I told this good news to Ray Herst, city editor, and he said that if my hair really does turn red again he will print my picture in the paper, with hair in red ink.

This sounds too good to be true. If, for instance, the picture of me that runs with this column, but which is generally mistaken for a picture of Dooley of the Advertising department, should come to be printed regularly with hair in red ink think what it would mean to me.

Why, my column would be spotted in an instant, and many more people would probably read it than read it now. That would mean that, for their benefit — although I don't think benefit is quite the word to use — I could start all over again and rewrite the some 350 columns I have already written.

You see, I have in a way run out of historical material. There is such a thing as it not lasting forever, else I would not be writing what I am writing now.

But with a new start, in red ink so to speak, I could just turn the pages of the scrapbook my wife keeps of the column and repeat, repeat, repeat. Of course, I would change the stories a little. Rehash is the word used in the trade. But they would still be compatible with truth.

Strict truth! How often does one hear about "interpreting" something.

'this "interpreting idea would give me some leeway to make the old seem new. It was secondhand enough to begin with. Now it would be "used" material.

I tell Ray I will let him know if my hair turns red.

I must say it is an improvement in my standard of living not to have to go the barbershops. I never did like sitting long in a barber's chair. I once asked a barber friend how quickly he thought he could cut my hair. He performed the act in almost a matter of seconds.

But he said most men would not like that. They would think they were not getting their money's worth.

Of course, having my wife cut my hair is no improved standard of living for her. But she would rather do it, she says, than see it not get cut at all. And there is such a thing as necessary economy these days.

When I meet old barber friends of mine they still speak to me, believe it or not.

ADC Will Get New Computers

Future Electronic Data Processing Systems for eight major Air Force Commands will come from the Honeywell 800-200 Electronic Data Processing System.

Approval of this system was given by the Air Force Secretary.

The two computers will be installed approximately Aug. 1.

The plans and scheduling of the conversion of ADC's present IBM 705 and 1401 computer system to be replaced by computers, started in October 1964.

The training of Data Processing personnel in programming language started Nov. 4. Program languages are converted by the computer to its patterns. Four classes have been completed. Three more classes are schedueld to be completed by Mar. 19, 1965. Computer operator training will start approximately 45 days prior to installation at Hq. ADC.

CONSCIENCE EASED

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) —In a signed letter, foregiveness was asked of a local store manager for the theft of a bicycle bearing when the writer was in the seventh grade.

Attaching a quarter to the note, the sender wrote: "I needed a bicycle bearing and got what I wanted. No one was around (I thought) but God saw me. If you will or can, will you forgive me? I am sending the money for the bearings even though they didn't fit my bike."

Springs Clubs Skate Away With Most Medals

Entering the meet were 124 skaters representing skating clubs from the Denver area, Pueblo and Colorado Springs.

Of 73 medals for first, second or third, Invaders Roller Club from Roll-O-Rena took 31 and Skateland Roller Club 19.

Highlight of the event was a demonstration of fours free style by two sets of fours from the Roll-O-Rena Club. Participating were: Roger Meadows, Kathy Lynch, Gene Varley, Donna Julian, Eddie Rush, Debbie Qwugley, Rick Wade and Nikki Wade. They performed intricate maneuvers as a team.

The Roll-O-Rena meet was one of several competitions held thruout Colorado and Wyoming. The meets are sponsored and judged by Amateur skaters and sanctioned by the American Amateur Roller Skating Association. The classes of instruction and the competitive meets are under the direct supervision of adult professionals thruout the states. Professionals directly in charge of the Springs area clubs are Mike Straight, Skateland Club and Glen Rush, Roll-O-Rena Club.

The next competitive meet involving the local clubs will be held at Roll-O-Rama, Thornton, Colo., Feb. 28th.

NEW DENTAL SKILLS

DENVER, Colo. (AP)—Teeth were meant to last a lifetime and they can if the public would take advantage of preventive dental care, insists Martin Brusse, president of a dental products company headquartered here and lead in a campaign to increase public knowledge of dentistry.

"A car owner will take his car in for servicing three or four times a year—preventive maintenance—but he won't do that for his own teeth twice a year," he points out.

Your Outdoors

By MARY SHIRER
For the Pikes Peak Group of the Colorado Mountain Club

How many times do we look at the sky? The principal reason is to see whether it is clear or cloudy. If we see clouds, we look again to see if they disappear, and if clear, we look again to enjoy that vast canopy of blue. We never seem to tire of it. When we climb mountains, we look more times at the sky than anywhere. There is something interesting about the blue sky blending with the color of trees and rocks and beyond the other high peaks which rise high into the deep blue. It is not only one thing that makes for beautiful scenery but the blending together of many. We see a procession of objects moving ceaselessly across the sky the sun by day and the moon and stars by night. The most conspicuous phenomenon is of course the daily motion of the sun across the heavens, producing the alterations of light and darkness and heat and cold.

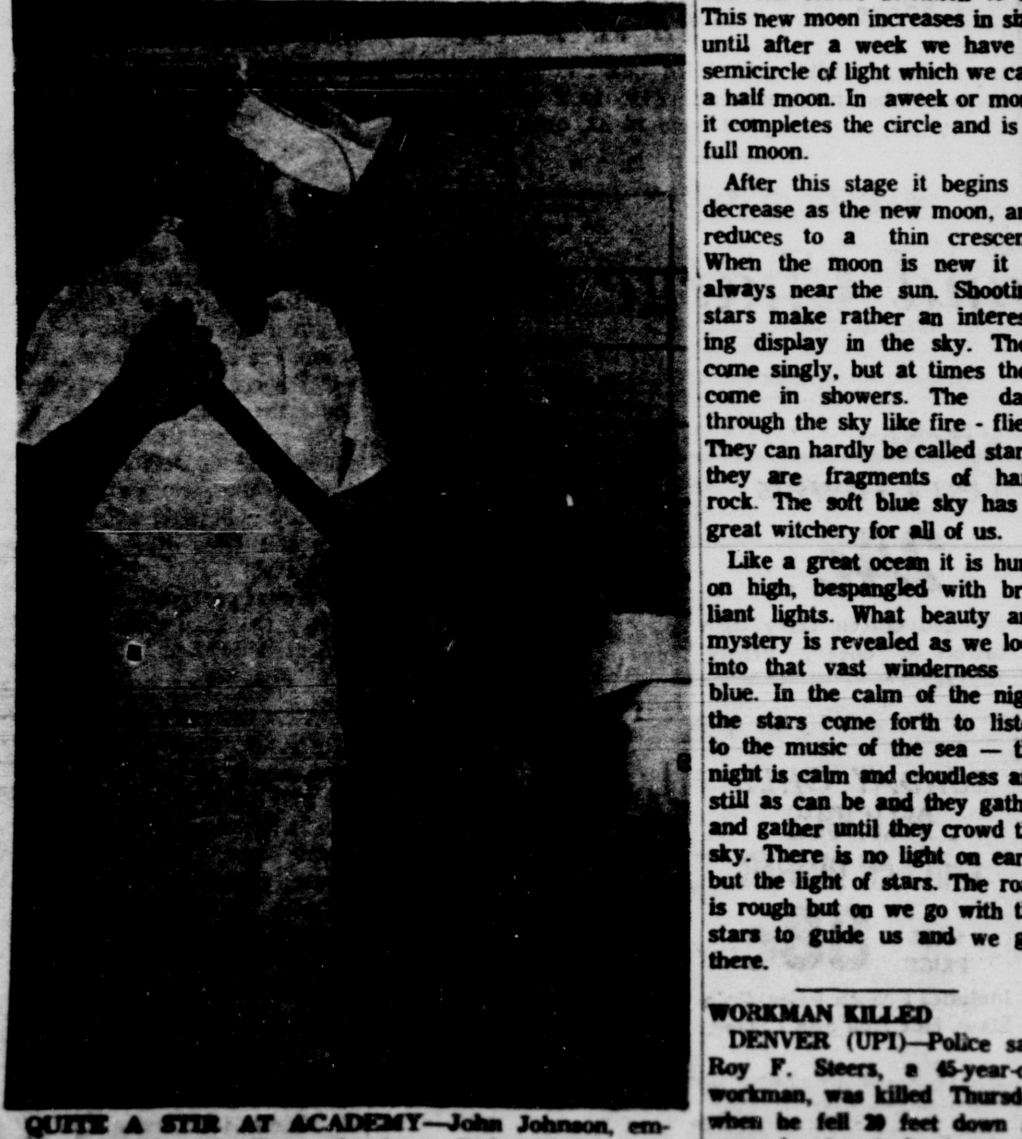
Every month the moon goes through the complete cycle of changes we call "phases." It begins as a thin crescent of light which we describe as the new moon. How we all gaze at it and are always a bit thrilled and call others attention to it. This new moon increases in size until after a week we have a semicircle of light which we call a half moon. In aweek or more it completes the circle and is a full moon.

After this stage it begins to decrease as the new moon, and reduces to a thin crescent. When the moon is new it is always near the sun. Shooting stars make rather an interesting display in the sky. They come singly, but at times they come in showers. The dart through the sky like fire - flies, They can hardly be called stars, they are fragments of hard rock. The soft blue sky has a great witchery for all of us.

Like a great ocean it is hung on high, bespangled with brilliant lights. What beauty and mystery is revealed as we look into that vast winderness of blue. In the calm of the night the stars come forth to listen to the music of the sea — the night is calm and cloudless and still as can be and they gather and gather until they crowd the sky. There is no light on earth but the light of stars. The road is rough but on we go with the stars to guide us and we get there.

WORKMAN KILLED

DENVER (UPI)—Police said Roy F. Steers, a 45-year-old workman, was killed Thursday when he fell 20 feet down an open elevator shaft of a building under construction near downtown Denver. The man apparently lost his balance, police said. His head struck a concrete floor.



QUITE A STIR AT ACADEMY—John Johnson, employe of the Air Force Academy Cadet Dining hall, isn't a trouble maker but he does believe in stirring things up. He's been doing just that for the past five years as a Mitchell Hall cook. This week he was commended for over 20 years' federal service.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, M.D.,Ph.D.

Miriam's nostalgic story will be doubly appealing to those who grew up in a free America, before Uncle Sam stuck his hand into every pay check via the 1913 Income Tax. The early days of the automobile were far more fascinating than our modern rocket ship pioneering or the moonshots.

By GEORGE W. CRANE
Ph. D., M. D.

CASE V-403: Miriam Taylor is a former Chicagoan who now lives in the little Indiana town near which we have our summer home.

Recently we were riding back to Chicago together by car.

"This reminds me," she began, "of my first automobile trip from Chicago.

"That was way back in the year 1906.

"And it took us 4 full days to travel the 150 miles.

"My father was quite inventive and had built our car by himself.

"But in those days there were no paved roads at all. We rode on narrow, one-lane gravel roads or even dirt roads.

"And one reason it took us 4 days for the trip, was the fact that my uncle would have to get out and help lead the horses past our car.

"For horses were unfamiliar with automobiles in those days. So they would snort and rear up.

"This was true even of the big, stolid draft horses hitched to heavy wagons.

"And the faster horses hitched to buggies would threaten to run away at the very sight of our automobile.

"Farmers would curse at us when we went past their wagons, too, even though my uncle might be leading their horses to avoid a runaway.

"I was a little girl but I can vividly remember that whenever we reached the foot of a big hill, we'd all have to get out and hike up the hill, except for the driver.

"We must literally have

"For in those days, too, the hills had not been graded down to the modern type of level roadbeds.

"We took the route straight south of Chicago toward Danville, Illinois.

"And each night we'd stop at a hotel while my father would send a telegram back to Chicago for new tires!

"For our tires would usually blow out before the day was over, although we travelled no faster than 25 miles per hour!

"But for me it was exciting all the time.

"Now, as I ride back to Chicago over these wonderful 4-lane divided highways, almost as level as a floor, it seems miraculous.

"And the smooth riding at 65 miles per hour, plus the durable modern automobile tires that last for 50,000 miles — all would be a wonderful surprise to my father if he were still alive.

"He insisted that automobiles were the coming mode of transportation but most people thought he was a crank on the subject and a dreamer!

"But he was a smart inventor and held patents on some of the basic automobile mechanical parts."

Many teen-agers who think they are so ultra modern have never ridden a horse nor been a passenger in a buggy! Nor even been on a train!

They don't even remember when we had no horrid income tax. Uncle Sam was then no "peeping Tom" and pickpocket, reaching his hand into every pay check!

In those days elbow grease and honesty far surpassed the modern "banana oil" and free-wheeling Bobby Baker methods of gaining wealth.

And those early automobiles were far more thrilling than all of our modern rocket ships!

GENEROUS DEBTOR

NICKERSON, Kan. (AP) — Mr. and Mrs. Paul Alexander, who operated a grocery store here from 1925 to 1942, had a phone call recently from a woman in a nearby town. She claimed she owed for groceries on credit years earlier, but was uncertain of the amount due. The Alexanders also were uncertain, as they long since had closed their books, but estimated the figure at about $25. The woman said she was sure it was nearer $65. And to the surprise of Alexanders, she sent them a check for $100 without explanation.

Liberia will raise taxes.

STRANGE HOBBY

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Ever think of vacationing in a cemetery. Two Milwaukee couples spent three weeks prowling remote cemeteries and ceremonial grounds to make graphic records of the past. Mr. and Mrs. Leland Tishler and Mr. and Mrs. James Erskine made 70 copies of early American pioneer stone sculpture. These represent symbols, designs, and sentiments wrought by Yankee stonecutters between 1650 and 1800 for burial markers. They used carpenters' crayon to make their images on rice paper and unbleached muslin sheeting.

Ex - Wife Insists That Ex - Hubby Stay in Jail

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa. (AP) Jack Goulding spent his 81st day behind bars today while a judge deliberated whether the 35-year-old divorced father had purged himself of contempt.

Goulding was jailed in November 1962, for refusal to turn over his son, Benjamin, now 9, to his former wife, Thelma. For two years the father remained in jail, while the boy was being cared for by his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Iva Johnson, in nearby Hagerstown, Md.

A Maryland court this week granted Mrs. Goulding temporary custody of the boy. Goulding's attorney then appealed to Judge Chauncey N. Depuy to give the man his freedom.

Mrs. Goulding, however, opposed the move, saying that she had only temporary custody of the boy. Through her attorney, she said Friday she wants her ex-husband to remain behind bars until every legal door is nailed shut in her fight for permanent custody.

Judge Depuy listened to both sides and said he would think it over. Goulding remained in his cell.

Military Life Began Early for NORAD Director

Brig. Gen. Joseph L. Dickman, USAF, director of Operations at North American Air Defense Command headquarters, was destined to become a military man.

He is a West Point graduate of 1939 but the process began long before that. He was born into a military family at Tampa, Fla., in 1917. His father, Lt. Col. Frederick T. Dickman,, deceased, was a 1960 graduate of West Point graduate, was a corps commander in World War I. So the young Dickman was exposed to military life from a very early age and took his schooling at a number of schools in a variety of locales which is the lot of the military child.

He attended secondary school in Asheville, N. C., and high school in West Orange and Manasquan, N. J., where he graduated in 1934. He then attended Admiral Farragut Academy at Toms River, N. J., until his appointment to West Point in 1935.

On graduation from West Point he took pilot training and had several routine flying assignments until October 1942 when, as a major, he was transferred to the 78th Pursuit Group, Hamilton Field, Calif., as deputy group commander.

BRIG. GEN. J. DICKMAN

* * *

The group initially was equipped with P-38s but shortly after its movement to England to join the Eighth Air Force it was re-equipped with P-47s. Dickman, then a lieutenant colonel at 25, participated in the group's first operational mission in April, 1943, a fighter sweep over Holland. The mission was completed without incident, but on the way home engine failure forced him to bail out.

He was evacuated to the United States and after a slow recovery from a shoulder injury he returned to duty, but it was almost a year before he got back into combat. In September, 1944 he joined the 82nd Fighter Group with the Fifteenth Air Force in Italy and completed a combat tour as squadron commander and deputy group commander.

His combat decorations include the Distinguished Flying Cross with one Oak Leaf Cluster, the Air Medal with four Oak Leaf Clusters, and the Purple Heart.

Gen. Dickman's post-World War II positions included assignments on the academic staff of the Air University and with the War Plans Division at USAF headquarters. After attending the National War College, he was named commander of the 388th Tactical Fighter Wing at Etain, France.

In 1958 when he was a colonel, Dickman was assigned to Headquarters U. S. Air Forces in Europe at Ramstein, Germany, and a year later became deputy chief of staff for Operations of the Seventeenth Air Force, also at Ramstein.

Returning from overseas in 1960, Dickman served for a year at USAF headquarters as chief of the Promotions and Separations Division in the Directorate of Military Personnel. In 1961 he became executive assistant to the Secretary of the Air Force and was promoted to brigadier general in January, 1962.

Before taking his present post at NORAD headquarters last October, Gen. Dickman served as commander of the Duluth NORAD Sector at Duluth, Minn., for 14 months.

Three Politicians Nabbed in Malaysia

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — Three leading politicans arrested on charges of plotting to promote armed revolution in Malaysia planned to set up a rebel government in exile in Karachi, Pakistan, a newspaper said today.

The three, members of opposition political parties known to share pro-Indonesian views, were arrested Jan. 28. They are Dr. Burhanuddin Al Hemi, president of the Pan Malayan Islamic Party; Abdul Aziz Bin Ishak, chairman of the National Convention Party; and Zishak Bin Haji Mohamed, former chairman of the Socialist front.

Moslems constitute more than half the population of Malaysia, where Islam is the official religion. The population of the country is approximately 7.5 million.

40 Die in Indonesian Quakes, Tidal Waves

JAKARTA (AP) — At least 40 persons were killed in a series of earthquakes and tidal waves that hit Indonesian Islands Dec. 24 and 25 about 1,330 miles east of Jakarta, according to reports just reaching here today.

The worst hit areas were Sanna, Mangole and Buru in the Celebes and the Moluccas Islands.

The official news agency Antara said a tidal wave destroyed 90 per cent of the houses in Sanna.

Civil Service Exams Slated For Police

Civil service tests to bolster the eligibility list for Colorado Springs police officers will be held later this month.

C. L. Heitman Jr., city personnel director, said the written examination would be given at 7 p.m. Feb. 18 in the main arena in the City Auditorium. Successful applicants would take oral and physical tests later.

The police department plans to add eight additional men in April. A dozen new men were added to start the year.

Applicants must be at least 5 feet, 9 inches tall, 21 to 30 years old, weigh at least 140 pounds and have completed two years in an accredited high school. GED certificates will be accepted in lieu of high school credits.

Heitman said copies of military discharges, if any, should also be furnished his office.

Further information about the civil service examinations may be obtained from the personnel director's office.

Peace-Keeping May Be Placed In Thant's Hands

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Support grew today for a plan to place the U.N. peacekeeping problem in Secretary-General U Thant's hands in hopes some accord can be reached in time to save this session of the General Assembly from total collapse.

The United States has thrown its weight behind the plan, proposed by Britain and a number of other nations to try to head off a U.S.-Soviet showdown over voting rights that could deal the United Nations a crucial blow.

The plan, presented to Thant by Lord Caradon, Britain's chief delegate, calls for a review of peacekeeping operations past, present, and future by the 21-nation working group set up in 1962 to study the problem.

The assembly would recess while the review was being made, and Thant would take the initiative in setting up consultations with the big powers and regional groups.

The British told Thant general agreement on the principles of peacekeeping would make it easier to settle financial troubles stemming from past peacekeeping operations.

If the plan wins approval, the assembly, which meets Monday to clean up budgetary matters and other housekeeping details, will probably recess until late April or early May.

Soviet Ambassador Platon D. Morozov called on Thant late Friday, presumably to discuss the new proposal. There has been no indication yet of Russian reaction.

CC German House To Be Dedicated

Max Kade House, the German language center at Colorado College, will be dedicated at special ceremonies Feb. 16.

The German House opened in September, was made possible by a grant of $15,000 from the Max Kade Foundation of New York.It is operated by the college's department of German and Russian under the chairmanship of Dr. Thomas O. Brandt.

Two principal officers of the Max Kade Foundation will be here for the occasion, Max Kade, president of the foundation, and Dr. Erich H. Markel, executive vice president.

Kade House, 1129 Wood Ave., is the home of 19 women students at Colorado College. It is designed for students majoring in German or students interested in German language and culture. Oly German is spoken in the house.

Funds provided by the foundation went to remodeling the house, furnishing it, and starting a library of German language books and records.

The Max Kade Foundation was established in 1944 to further and promote worthwhile public, religious, charitable, scientific, literary and educational purposes.

Students living in the Kade House are under the supervision of Mrs. Vera Frowein of Germany, the house mother. Also living in the house is a departmental assistant, Miss Anne Duerr, an elementary school teacher from Germany.

Aspinall Is Against VA Hospital Closing

GRAND JUNCTION (AP) — Rep. Wayne N. Aspinall, D-Colo. told an audience of 300 Friday he is strongly opposed to the proposed closing of the Veterans Administration Hospital here.

He said planning by the VA for shutting down 14 hospitals across the country "was all done in a very secretive manner." He called it "the poorest sort of government planning."

Asked by a member of the audience if he felt the closing was justified from the standpoint of economy, Aspinall replied in the negative.

"The hospital was needed here when it was built in 1947, it is needed now and it will be needed for the next 15 or 20 years," he said.

The congressman said he felt it was the duty of the hospital administration here to have kept the public up to date concerning developments.

With at least 6,640 miles, Alaska has the longest seacoast of any state in the Union.

Changes Planned in Tejon Street Parking

City Taffic Engineer Don L. Smith said parking on the west side of the 200 block of South Tejon Street would be changed from angle to parallel about Feb. 12, weather permitting.

The proposed change was discussed and unanimously approved by the Downtown Traffic Advisory Committee.

Smith said this particular block is the only one on both North and South Tejon Street which does not allow two lanes of moving traffic in each direction.

The change from angle to parallel parking would correct this and alleviate delay and congestion for southbound vehicles.

The 200 block of South Tejon Street is 60 feet wide from curb to curb and, with paralle parking on the east side, provides for two lanes of moving traffic for northbound vehicles. But the angle parking on the west side reduced southbound traffic to one lane.

"This means that virtually the same amount of traffic headed south in the 100 block in two lanes has to be channeled into one lane in the 200 block. The average difference in traffic volume in the two blocks is only 12 vehicles per honr." Smith said.

The change from angle to parallel parking on the west side of the 200 block of South Tejon Street will reduce the number of parking stalls from 19 to 12.

World's Largest Low Density Shock Tube to Be Used at AFA Seminary

Editor's Note: This seminar will cover a new addition to the Air Force Academy research facilities.

Within a slim tube just 17 inches in diameter and 84 feet long, personnel of the Frank J Seiler Research can duplicate conditions found at speeds ranging from two to 12 times the speed of sound.

Two Seiler Lab staff members, Capt. Douglas S. Johnson and 1st Lt. Charles F. Stebbins, a 1961 Academy graduate, will discuss technology and characteristics of the laboratory's low density shock tube — largest facility of its kind in the world — at the third of the spring series of technical seminars sponsored by the Air Force Academy Department of Electrical Engineering.

The seminar, open to all interested persons, is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. Feb. 17 at the Academy.

Intended for research in low-density hypersonic gas dynamics, the shock tube will have an operating Mach number range from about Mach 2 to 12.

Included in the seminar will be a discussion of the thermodynamics of ideal gases which have resulted in a new shock tubeoperating technique promising economy and accuracy previously unobtainable in an instrument of this type.

Other major engineering features and some interesting aspects of large-caliber shock tube design philosophy will also be presented.

Research associates responsible for design of the tube will discuss details of topics proposed for initial study in the facillity. The topics, some of which are under investigation by cadet research assistants, include shock wave structure, curvature, ionization and disassociation effects, relaxation and surface accommodations effects, high - speed instrumentation, and related problems.

Capt. Johnson is a 1956 graduate of the Military Academy. In 1961 and 1962 he received his M.S. and A.E. degrees from Cal Tech. Since that time the captain has been an assistnat professor of Aeronnautical Engineering and is presently a full - time research asssociate with the Seiler Lab.

Since graduating from the Academy in 1961, Lt. Stebbins has earned both M.S. and AeE. (Aeronautical Engineering) degrees from Cal Tech. He is presently a member of the Seiler Lab research staff and a part-time instructor in mechanics and aeronautics.

The next seminar will be Mar. 9. Lt. Col. M. M. Wakin, professor of Philosophy and assistant dean for social sciences and humanities, will discuss "The Scientist and the Philosopher — Friend or Foe."

Col. Gage H. Crocker, professor and head of the Air Force Academy Department of Aeronautics, will assume the post of commander of the Seiler Research Laboratory Feb. 15.

He will replace Col. R. C. Gibson, director of the laboratory since its inception in October 1962.

Col Crocker became head of the Department of Aeronautics in September 1962 following award of his Ph.D in Aeronautic and Astronautic Engineering at the University of Michigan.

The colonel also holds a bachelor's degree in Aeronautical gineering from Massachusetts Institute of Technology, a masters from the University of Michigan.

He served with the Aircraft Laboratory, as Falcon Missile Project Officer, and head of the Air to Air Missile Project Office at wright - Patterson AFB, Ohio.

Col. Crocker first joined the Academy faculty as an instructor in Aeronautics in 1959, serving until he began final work on his Ph.D. in 1961. He is a graduate of the Air Command and Staff School.

The Seiler Laboratory is a facility of the Office of Aerospace Research. It was established at the Academy to perform basic research for the Air Force and provide an environment to foster an active and imaginative research program among cadets and faculty.

Primary emphasis is placed on projects in chemistry and astronautics but support is also given worthwhile research projects in the natural sciences proposed by cadets or faculty members.

SUICIDE FINDINGS

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (AP)—Contrary to popular opinion, suicide is not always preceded by visible gloom or dejection. Psychiatrists working at suicide prevention centers have discovered that attempts by patients to take their own lives frequently are preceded by "smiling depression" — a covering-up of inner fears or failings with an air of good humor.

"Once the suicide has made up his mind to take his life, he may suddenly seem relaxed, even happy and relieved, because he has decided a way out of his agony," according to Dr. Robert E. Litman of the Los Angeles Suicide Prevention Center.

BE-KIND-TO-ALIENS PLEA

BERNE, Switzerland (AP) — A recent report on foreign manpower in Switzerland, totaling 230 pages and published here, included a plea to "be kind to foreigners." The report asked that the police status of foreigners be bettered and that after living and working in Switzerland for a three-year period, reliable non-Swiss be given long-term residence permits. The report also asked that the public be informed of the economic importance of foreign labor and be reminded of its own "humanitarian obligations" to strangers. The recommendations concern 690,000 foreign workers (many of them Italian) and 175,000 foreigners permanently settled in Switzerland.

Man's Thumb Saved Lives Of Men in Sea Laboratory

By RALPH DIGHTON

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Topside a hurricane was brewing.

On the ocean floor 193 feet below four men were in a 10x40-foot cylinder which could become their tomb unless they were rescued before the storm struck.

For seven hours, while an overloaded crane shook with the effort of trying to haul the underwater laboratory to the surface, no one knew whether they would make it.

The men were ordered to abandon the laboratory — their home for the previous 10 days — and move to a tiny, cramped compression chamber for the trip to the surface. Then, just as the chamber cleared the water, it sprang a leak. In minutes the four would die painfully of the "bends," unless the leak were plugged.

Chief petty officer Sanders Manning found the leak and plugged the hole with his thumb. Internal pressure, equal to that of the ocean at 200 feet, jammed his thumb in the hole like a cork in a bottle. The flesh gave with a spurt of blood but the bone held and the leak was stopped.

Minutes later the chamber, dangling from the end of a wire rope, was lifted to safety — just in the nick of time. Technicians discovered a metal pin to which the rope was attached had been bent and almost sheared.

"We were holding our breath — those men were close to death," Navy Capt. G. F. Bond said Friday in telling first details of an experiment called "Sea Lab I" off Bermuda in January 1964.

Bond told the winter convention on electronics the four men showed no ill effects from their long underwater adventure — except for Manning's bloody thumb.

Astronaut Scott Carpenter was to have been one of the four, Bond said, but he broke his arm in a preliminary dive and was replaced. Bond identified the others as Lt. Cmdr. Robert Thompson, Cpt. Robert A. Barter and Gunnery Mate Lester Anderson.

Bond also disclosed plans for a more elaborate experiment with a 12x50-foot "Sea Lab II" to house teams of 10 men up to 30 days at a depth of 250 feet off La Jolla, Calif., this summer.

If this is successful the Navy plans to have "large numbers of men living and working indefinitely at depths up to 600 feet" within the next four years, Bond said.

Illegal Coin Lands Man Into Trouble

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — The small coin slipped through the slot, the turnstile was released, and Llewellyn H. Slaff walked through illegally — 1,780 times — say Secret Service agents.

Staff, 48, a metalsmith at nearby North Island, cut down pennies to dime size, then used them to save 18 cents on the 10-cent ferry ride to and from work over a five-year period, agents said.

He was charged Friday with two counts of defacing and passing U.S. coins. Each violation carries a fine of $10,000 and a five-year prison term.

FROG VS. BROTHER

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Despite everything, mothers sometimes disappoint their sons. When Mrs. H. P. Judah went to the hospital maternity ward, she left her son, Speedy, age 2½, with an aunt.

After a telephone call from the hospital, the aunt reported to Speedy: "Guess what — you have a new little brother!"

"Oh, Nanny," he exclaimed, "I wanted a baby frog!"

Springs' Blue River Watershed Gets More Than 18 Feet of Snow

More than 18 feet of snow has fallen on the Colorado Springs' Blue River watershed on the Western Slope and utilities officials are more than pleased with the prospects of a good runoff from that area this spring and summer.

As of Thursday, a total of 221 inches of snow had been measured on Hoosier Pass between Alma and Breckenridge since last September. Colorado Springs diverts water from five Western Slope streams via three tunnels into Montgomery Reservoir on the Eastern Slope and near the top of Hoosier Pass.

From Montgomery Reservoir, the water is taken by a 30-inch, 73-mile long pipeline into storage on the north slope of Pikes Peak. Peak diversion from the Blue River watershed is 15,000 acre feet per year. Last year, Colorado Springs water users consumed 20,320 acre feet.

The mountainous snows in the region are rated as the heaviest in 30 years by "old timers" in the Fairplay - Alma region, including petroleum products merchant Clair Hall. Lowest temperature recorded in the area this season is 26 below zero, which is not too frigid in an area where 40-below is not uncommon.

Alvis Truner, caretaker for the Utilities Department on the Blue River, gave the following snowfall amounts for the current winter: September 2.5 October 11.5; November 64.5; December 79; and January 63.5.

Winter sports have boomed in Breckenridge as a result of the excellent snow conditions this year, too. A somewhat tired waitress at a Breckenridge inn pointed out, "There doesn't seem much difference between week days and weekends; we're swamped."

Breckenridge is downstream from the Colorado Springs' watershed on the Blue River and heavy snowfall in the lower area will ease demands for water from the higher elevations where the city diverts water eastward.

In the meantime, it would appear the Blue River diversion, plus runoff from Pikes Peak and purchases of well water will maintain water supplies at adequate levels, officials say.

Pikes Peak Region Yesterdays

By DORA FOSTER

Editor's Note: Dora Foster asked B. Lee Pace to be a guest columnist. This is the second of three articles containing Pace's colorful anecdotes of the early days of Colorado Springs.

"Youthful Hannah, to whom calendar pages never meant a thing, was among those attending top stage productions at "the old opera house", where Woolworth's now graces the business landscape of North Tejon. Just mention the name of Lon Chaney, and Hannah is sure to retrieve from memory's storehouse recollections of Chaney, who, associated with that old-time theater, went on to the greatest heights of Hollywood, winning such acclaim as that reserved for the leading character in the cinema attraction, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

"With no effort at all, of course, Hannah always can tell you all about the days when among the fanciest of food emporiums was operated by Herb Sommers, North of Pikes Peak Avenue on Tejon, while the Knorr Brothers featured quality foodstuffs up North Tejon way, not too far south from Acacia Park — a park, by the way once fringed by probably the most glorious array of lilac flower-laden bushes to be found anywhere.

"And how possibly could a native such as Hannah ever permit to slip from memory at least a couple of disastrous floods that visited the Pikes Peak Region quite some years ago. First, there were the angry waters sweeping down North Wahsatch Avenue from the Black Forest, carrying with them many a home and other edifice. The late prominent Melvin M. Sinton who, founded the Sinton Dairy, whom through his thoughtfulness and agility enabled him to save the life of B. A. Eaton. Some region residents may yet recall with Hannah that Melvin Sinton — one of the county commissioners when the present courthouse was built and later a Colorado Springs city councilman — was originator here of the first Farmers Luncheon Club organized in the U. S. A. And then, of course, there was the more recent flood of Memorial day — back in 1934 or 1935 or thereabouts — when meandering Fountain Creek was so transformed by a cloudburst up Ute Pass that its angry waters roared from this usual complacency into torrents of such moment as to sweep before its tide the old South Nevada Street bridges where was astranded atop their automobile a just married couple who, arms about one another and so much in love consistently refused warnings from firemen and others to leave their car for safety beyond the raging floodwaters. When the bridge finally crumbled, the young couple — even as a faithful sea captain staying with the ship — were last seen tumbling midst the turbulent waters rushing toward their destination the Arkansas River near Pueblo.

To this very day, no trace has ever been found of this couple, who in earlier time of the flood might have been rescued, rather than staying with their doomed and flood-threatened automobile caught by the waters that were finally to destroy the South Nevada Avenue Bridge.

"As one of the most popular of early - time dances in the Pikes Peak Region, Hannah might well recount revival of of the old-time square dance, "Twas the late County Agent J. Carroll Hale, who popularized the annual square dance, calling, and fiddling contests — all of which, long forgotten — were revived as an entertainment of the annual Colorado Pure Seed Show, then held in the Colorado Springs auditor-maintained yearly by Zebulon Pike Chapter of the Veterans of Foreign Wars — were given impetus throughout the nation by student quadrilles directed by the Lloyd Shaw, principal of famous Cheyenne Mountain School, who added to such revival by conducting special classes for square dance instructors from all parts of the nation, aided and abeted by recordings and books of an instructional nature. So popular did the old-time dance become, the Jaycees built a special concrete strip for dancing, immediately fronting the bandstand in Acacia Park.

"Naturally you'd be wrong if you thought Hannah could ever forget the late Police Chief Hugh D. Harper's recollection of oil-rich Indians from Oklahoma, their pockets filled with coin of the realm, frequently found it less inconvenient while summering in the Pikes Peak region, to purchase a new, big black Cadillac than to take the trouble of having the car's oil changed. Also etched in her memory is the admonition of Chief Harper's successor, the late Irvin B. Bruce — that it's profitable to be careful, since a majority of the auto thefts are directly traceable to motorists who thoughtlessly leave keys in the ignition of a car's front panel, at the same time leaving automobile doors unlocked.

"Hannah's storehouse of memories has also recorded the information that Judge John C. Young, still busy as an attorney in Colorado Springs, is the only Pikes Peak Region lawyer ever to follow service as district attorney, district judge and chief justice of the Colorado Supreme Court — honor enough, it would seem, for a Democrat in Republican laden territory — as a judge in the world-attentioned Nueremburg trials of topflight German accused following World War II.

"So, knowing a great many things about a great many people and a great many events as the result of her long experience, it's little wonder that Hannah can so interestingly report true stories of this community and its people. She reported that Charley Hobbs, onetime stockman out Eastonville way, now retired in Colorado Springs, can toss together the most delectable angle food cake of anyone you care to name — male or female. She knows, too, that Roy A. Davis, who built little more than a typewriter ribbon and its adjuncts into a thriving typewriter and office supply business up on North Tejon, was speaker of Colorado's house of representatives and president pro tem of the state senate back in the early 1920's and only this past summer won high national award from the Fraternal Order of Eagles for extraordinary humanitarian service. Another Davis honor never likely even to be approached is his more than 25 years as a member of the Colorado Welfare Board — most of the time as chairman — appointed by governors of both political parties.

"Who but Hannah remembers when Clem Morris was just "another banker" instead of one of Colorado's most successful? How many know that the chap, now long gone, who was responsible for national designation of Horse Week, had so little of this world's wealth that he often slept in police cars in the garage back of city hall, and his clothes were so worn and tattered he was even unable to attend ceremonies raising the first American Flag over Pikes Peak — a suggestion he himself made as a ceremony appropriate daily atop the world's most famous mountain?"

H. L. Hunt Writes

In a free constitutional republic, the legislature makes law, the courts interpret law and the executive carries out law. In a totalitarian state, one man or one thought group does all three.

Where the wording of the constitution itself is in question, in a free republic, the courts interpret the words in the constitution as they stand. Only by concurrence of large majorties in several legislative bodies, and, in the case of most of our states, by the vote of the people, can a constitution be amended.

Nowhere in the thinking and writing of our Founding Fathers is there any indication that the courts alone were ever intended to have the power to change the Constitution. Nowhere in all the mass of our older legal precedents is there basis for a claim by the courts to that power.

But now, changing the Constitution by the courts alone seems to have become accepted practice. Defenders of the present United States Supreme Court freely admit it. They no longer take the trouble to pretend that the Court is interpreting the Constitution of the United States as it was meant when it was written or previously respected.

It is possible that our fundamental law might need changing. The Constitution contains provisions for its amendment, and it cannot be right for the changes to be made by 9 political appointees serving for life or at least during their good behavior.

If law is not made by the people's representatives, law may soon enslave the people.

Unemployment Rate Hits New U.S. Low

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate hit a seven-year low last month.

The Labor Department fixed the figure at 4.8 per cent, and said it was the lowest since October 1957. In January of last year, the rate was 5.5 per cent.

Despite the percentage low, the number of unemployed in January rose about 500,000. The department said this was about 300,000 fewer than normally expected in the post-Christmas letdown.

Figures are adjusted on a seasonal basis.

Understanding Your Heart Is Route to Less Worrying

By The Colorado Medical Society

It's Heart Month again, and you'll be hearing a lot about that big, vital muscle in your chest and the causes, cures and prevention of its ailments. Much of what you hear will seem to be worrisome. Actually, it should not be.

It is true that heart diease in all its ramifications still is the leading cause of death among Americans, but for an intelligent person a store of accurate information about heart disease — coupled with effective action where action is called for — is the best way to stop worrying about your heart and its statistics.

Let's take a briefly simplified look at a few of the most common forms of "heart trouble."

First, arteriosclerotic heart disease is often a counterpart of the aging process, which affects the heart muscle itself. The muscle is affected because it receives insufficient supplies of oxygen and other nourishment by way of the blood. Fresh blood reaches the heart muscle by way of the coronary artery and its branches. This is the blood which keeps the heart going, not the blood which the heart, as a pump, distributes to the entire body.

Changes can occur within the coronary artery which diminish its ability to carry fresh blood to the heart muscle to sustain it in its life-long service as a vital pump. Deposits of a fatty substance along the lining of the artery constricts its diameter much as mineral deposits in a water pipe decrease its carrying capacity. When these deposits, called atheromata, become thick, the heart muscle begins to encounter difficulties of "starvation" for more oxygen and nourishment.

In its mildest form, this disease is called angina pectoris, meaning literally, pain in the chest. The pain often extends to the shoulder and down the left arm. It is a warning sign and does not mean there has been structural damage to the heart muscle.

In the next stage there is tissue damage in the muscle. It can be a gradual damage over a long period, or it can occur suddenly as a result of a blockage of the artery by a clot-athrombus. This is known as coronary thrombosis, the most frequent variety of acute heart "attack," or it may be termed more technically, a myocardial infraction. The blood clot lodged in the artery or one of its many branches cuts off the flow of blood, and an area of heart muscle thus is abruptly deprived of sustenance.

Such an attack may lead to sudden death or critical illness. But only about 10 to 20 per cent of the victims of first heart attacks die, and the great majority of patients, if they receive proper care and exercise reasonable precautions, recover from the attack. Many members of the "coronary club" go on to lead useful, productive and happy lives for many years ahead.

Coronaries are more common in men in most age groups, although the rate among women increases after the menopause to almost the male rate.

A second common form of trouble is rheumatic heart disease. This disease is the result of permanent damage to the heart from repeated bouts of rheumatic fever and strep infections. This disease is diminishing because of better and more prompt treatment of strep infections, particularly in children.

The damage to the heart takes place during an active bout of rheumatic fever, but in most cases is not fatal. Quite often its episode subsides without too much immediate heart damage. But over a series of bouts, scarring of the heart occurs, damaging and destroying the valves within the heart and leaving them unable to function efficiently.

This, in turn, makes more work, excessive work, for the heart muscle because it has to pump twice as hard to get the job done. The abnormal strains take their toll — often many years after the initial damage was suffered. The scarring can affect any of the four major valves within the heart, although most commonly involved is the mitral valve between the upper and lower chambers on the left side of the heart.

Another common type of trouble is hypertensive heart disease. This is the result of a long history of high blood pressure. The heart has to pump against this abnormally high pressure, and over the years it may weaken and fail in carrying this excessive work load.

Mention also should be made of congenital heart disease, a group of heart malformations which are present at birth. For some of these there is still no adequate treatment, but for an increasing number of them advances in modern heart surgery have made possible repairs which were unheard of two decades ago. These congenital defects include such things as abnormal transpositions of the great blood vessels around the heart and holes, leaks, in the septum, the inner wall between the chambers of the heart.

Your best insurance against heart trouble is a regular, thorough checkup by your family doctor. He can spot and head off conditions which might blossom later as a heart attack.

The hallmark of a coronary attack is unexplained chest pain. Only rely does a heart attack occur without chest pain. Never neglect a chest pain. Especially if it occurs following exertion, exposure, a heavy meal or emotional stress.

Hypertensive heart disease often can be prevented by adequate treatment of high blood pressure. Unless you are receiving regular checkups from your doctor, you may not know you have high blood pressure.

Early and effective treatment should be given to every strep infection or episode of rheumatic fever, especially where children are involved. This means following your doctor's orders to the letter and continuing treatment until he says it's time to quit. It's not enough to start feeling better. Many times it is necessary to put the whole family under treatment to eliminate a lingering strep infection.

CHRISTINE HAIGLER

* * * * * *

Skater Christine Haigler Is Featured in 'Holiday'

Christine Haigler, Olympics skater from Colorado Springs, is given a prominent spot in the March issue of Holiday magazine, which goes on sale Tuesday on the local newsstands.

In addition to a full-page color photograph of Miss Haigler, Holiday has the following to say about the skating star:

"Pretty Christine Haigler describes herself as 'nothing but a typical teen-ager.' Still, at seventeen, she has to her credit some fairly untypical accomplishments. She has won all sorts of amateur figure-skating awards, in national competition as well as in her home state of Colorado, has represented America twice in the last two years in World Figure Skating Championships at Cortina, Italy, and Dortmund, Germany, and, last year, she was given a place on the U.S. Olympic Figure Skating Team. 'I'm fortunate in having found a sport I enjoy,' Christine says, 'One thing has led to another, and the Olympics — well, that was a dream I never thought could happen, but it came true'."

Holiday further goes on to say: "This makes it all sound delightfully simple, but a glance at Christine Haigler's daily schedule gives you an idea of the rigors and self-discipline involved in becoming a champion. Her day begins at 5:30 in afternoon — her school hours have been specially arranged to make time for skating — followed by homework until dinnertime. After dinner, 'Then it's back to the ice rink for more skating.' if she had any free time, she says, 'I'd really live it up by going to dinner and a movie with a real cool date.' For her, these are pleasures that must wait.

"Christine Haigler is not only a dedicated athlete but also is a deeply religious young woman. 'Religion has had a great influence on my life,' she says. 'I trust in God and have great faith. He gives me strength, and I know He is always with me. In every skating competition I always carry a mustard-seed charm to remind me of what Jesus said in Matthew Seventeen: If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you."

"Like so many of today's young people, Christine is soberly concerned with, and spends a good deal of time thinking about, national and international issues and problems. She sees sports, furthermore, as one avenue toward solutions. For example, juvenile delinquency, she feels, is caused 'by kids not having enough to do to keep them busy and active.' International athletic competitions — the Olympics in particular — do a great deal to improve international relations and help people understand each other. In sports, prejudices tend to disappear.

"At the moment, she says, 'I'd like to be a lot of things, but only time will tell. I want to complete my education to be able to assist others, and to be a good citizen. I want a happy family, I want to keep my faith, and in some way to be useful to my friends and to mankind.' Her immediate goal is to represent her country again in the 1968 Olympics, and to this end her silver skates flash across the ice thirty-five hours a week. In 1968 she would like — who knows? bigger mountains have been moved — to come home with a gold medal."

The photograph in Holiday magazine was taken by Wayne Miller. The interview with Christine Haigler, who attends Cheyenne Mountain High School, is featured in conjunction with a major article in Holiday entitled: "American Youth: A Generation Under the Gun," with text and captions by Stephen Birmingham.

Among other teen personalities featured in the article are: Ona White, a Peace Corps volunteer in Nigeria; Warren Quinlan, a high-school drop-out; Mary Ninette Woodjack, girl at the beach; Diemer True, young Conservative; Alan McIlvain, lumber heir; Lesley Gore, young entertainer; Mark Messe, young scientist; David Kessler, farm boy; Kenneth L. Word, sailor in the Far East; Susan Pickman, art student in Paris; and Henry L. Jones Jr., civil rights worker.

In "A word with our readers," the Holiday editor explains: "Our adolescents, despite their frequently conspicuous frailties, their hovering, bewildered parents, their awkward, often idealistic and occasionally alarming struggle with the complexities of life in the 1960's, are as much a mixed bas as those of any previous generation but the essential goodness of them far overshadows the bad. After reading Mr. Birmingham's report, one cannot escape feeling that this crop of Americans in their teens is more throughtful, more aggressive, more willing to take chances and learn from occasional mistakes, and more interested in ultimately improving the world about them than earlier generations have been."

CEMIRT Teams To Expand Training

The decision was made during the two - day conference held by Col. E. V. N. Schuyler, deputy chief of staff, ADC Civil Engineering. Twenty - five Civil Engineering Maintenance Inspection Repair and Training (CEMIRT) Team representatives from six air divisions attended.

The CEMIRT Teams will reemphasize training of diesel engine, air conditioning, heating and alarm specialists at the radar sites, thus increasing the capability of site personnel to make repairs and insure proper operation of the equipment. It will also eliminate many emergency trips by the teams to sites forced to shut down because of breakdowns.

Among other changes in the new CEMIRT Team concept, will be the taking over of the aerospace ground environment items which are closely associated to the civil engineering field. The items include the air conditioning, humidifiers and other associated equipment at the radar installations, which formerly were the responsibility of the Communications - Electronics - Meteorological Section.

The CEMIRT Team concept was organized by Air Defense Command civil engineers to offset the shortage of highly skilled diesel, electric, refrigeration and heating equipment specialists at ADC's widely separated installations.

The traveling experts perform major maintenance and take care of highly technical and complex problems that on-site specialists are unable to handle. The teams also train less qualified specialists in spotting trouble areas and making minor repairs on the equipment, and respond immediately to emergencies.

World's Fair Hopes To Recoup Losses

NEW YORK (AP) — Figures issued by the New York World's Fair reports that it lost $17,540,100 last year but hopes to recoup some of the loss this season through increased attendance and drastic cuts in costs.

The report, disclosed Friday by the fair's own auditing firm, showed that, as of Dec. 31, the cash reserves of the fair were $629,063.

The audit — by Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co. — wrote off as uncollectable two-thirds of the money now owed to the fair in loans and accounts receivable.

Bristol School Had First PTA Organized in County

By STEVE WILLIAMS
Gazette Telegraph Staff Writer

For El Paso County, it all started way back in 1899 when members of the Bristol School System, under the direction of Mrs. William P. Kinney, established a Congress of Mothers. The National Congress of Mothers had sprung up in 1897 in New York, and the idea caught on just two years later in the Pikes Peak region.

Mrs. Kinney was the first president of the organization, which was the first parent-teacher group in El Paso County. The national organization was later named the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and in 1924 became, by act of Congress, the PTA. The Bristol organization affiliated with the state and national groups in 1926-27, and this association has been maintained throughout the years except for the school year 1935-36 when the Bristol unit had no organization.

Although records were not kept of the early history of the Bristol PTA, as early as 1911 Bristol already had a well organized and active association. Miss Nellie Remick became principal at Bristol in that year, and she was followed in that position by a Miss Leech. In 1926 the treasury balance was $112.50, and in that same year a play was given to raise funds for the purchase of a victrola. A paid membership of 91 was also recorded for 1926. One of the interesting things the PTA did that year was to distribute milk at school to the undernourished children in the classes.

In 1929 there was a paid membership of 123, and the purchase of a radio for the group was of such importance that it was recorded in the minutes. Interspersed throughout the history of the Bristol organization are notations such as "a candy sale was held this year, and also a carnival, from which the proceeds were $102." In 1932 the group subscribed to 12 child welfare magazines, and also 12 Colorado Parent - Teacher magazines. The membership that year was 103.

In 1934 the membership had sprung up to 142, and preschool training was begun at Bristol School. It was also in that year that Bristol School joined the hot lunch program. It was decided to disband the organization the following year, and give the property to the Washington PTA, but in 1937 they reorganized and once again became the Bristol PTA.

For Bristol School, the traditions of Mrs. Kinney are being carried on by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bonner, who are co-presidents of the organization. With a family of six children, four of whom are in school and two of whom are getting ready to attend, the Bonners have a vital interest in the proceedings of the PTA. Membership of the organization is 248, and while it hasn't grown all that much in the 66 years since its birth in 1899, it is still a contributing factor to the excellent relations enjoyed between the school administrations and parents in the county. Bonner is Director of Purchasing at Penrose Hospital, while his wife, a Registered Nurse, keeps the family running smoothly on the home front.

Joe Wallace has been principal of Bristol School for the past three years, and has charge of 350 students from kindergarten through the sixth grade. Married and the father of two children, Wallace received his B.A. and M.A. from Colorado University in Boulder.

The work of the El Paso County PTA Council today is being carried on under the direction of PTA President Mrs. F. C. Knox. There are 17,644 paid members with 46 PTA units in six school districts.

Superintendents of the school districts are N. V. Gorman in District 2, Richard Taylor in District 3, Thomas Doherty in District 11, W. W. Bundy in District 14, Howard Dunning in District 20 and Roy Howell in District 38.

To celebrate the anniversary of the founding of both the national and local organizations, the annual Founders Day Dinner will be held tomorrow night in the Wasson High School cafeteria. Bristol School with its delegation will of course be in attendance, for 66 years ago this week, that's where it all began.

Trash Fire Burns Corner of House

A trash fire set off by children spread to a house at 745 E. High St., occupied by Shirley DeJong, Saturday and burned a corner of the house. Companies 1, 4 and the aerial of the Fire Department fought the blaze. Damage was limited to the corner of the house and to smoke damage.

A fire alarm was turned in at 11:45 a.m. Saturday when J. Manuel, 829 Maple, burned the insulation from some wire in his yard. No damage was done by the fire. Companies 1 and 2 responded to the alarm.

Company 3 put out a car fire at Lombardo Auto Sales, 1801 W. Colorado Avenue. This alarm was received at 9:47 a.m.

McKissick Says Top Shots Trained First

The Colorado Springs police department has one of the top shooting organizations in the west—and the main reason for it is the firearms training program, according to Police Chief Cecil J. McKissick.

There were 102 men, including two park policemen, participating in the program last year. McKissick said these men spent 251½ man hours in this training and expended 25,175 rounds of .38 caliber special reloads.

Effectiveness of the program is shown in the fact that 42 of the men averaged 90 per cent or better shooting score for the entire year, and 15 of those 42 had an average of 95 per cent or better.

Most accurate shooter of all was Sgt. James J. Coster, firearms instructor for the police department, who had a 100 per cent score for 1964. Werner I. Finstrom was almost perfect with 99.9 per cent.

The other 13 top shots with a 95 per cent average or better were Leslie S. Davis, William B. Sutton, William L. Brown Jr., James L. Caldwell, Bennie D. McFarlen, Donald D. Ranney, J. Wayne Strobridge, Henry W. Fryer, John C. Donahoo, Lewis C. Heinz, Leonard L. Huscher, Bert E. Johnson and Charles M. Maloney.

McKissick said the police department overall average for last year was 86.8 per cent compared to 84.7 per cent in 1963.

The chief said the department shooting prowess has gradually increased over the past decade. The department average in 1955 was only 65 per cent, had increased to 78 per cent in 1958, then moved up to 82.59 per cent in 1961.

Coster said there were no purchases of powder, primers or lubricant last year. The department does its own reloading.

TALK RESCHEDULED

BOULDER (UPI)— University of Colorado officials said they hoped to reschedule the talk of Nobel Peace Prize winner Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. The civil rights leader was unable to keep his scheduled speech Wednesday night. King was jailed in Selma, Ala., in connection with Negro voter registration drives.

'65 Corvair Monza Sport Sedan

Corvair by Chevrolet

The beauty of it, of course, goes deeper than the things you don't get. There's the other side of the coin—what you do get in their place.

Take the no window post, for example. What you do get is hardtop styling—with curved frameless side windows—in every Corvair closed model. Even the lowest priced coupe or sedan.

The transmission and driveline hump you don't get means more foot room for both front- and back-seat passengers. Thanks to Corvair's rear engine, the floor is practically flat.

No radiator—the engine's air-cooled—also means no water, no antifreeze and no hose leaks to worry about. All of which add up to some more important pluses.

Power steering? Power brakes? Corvair needs them like a centipede needs crutches. With most of the engine weight on the rear wheels, the front ones are free to steer easily. And stops are quick and sure—with no nose-diving. Come on down to our showroom and discover the difference for yourself.

Plenty of Water Brings Cheer to Guantanamo

By ELTON C. FAY

WASHINGTON (AP)—Water, in ample quantity, is washing away the gloom in Guantanamo and is bringing back the kids and their mothers to their homes on that U.S. Naval Base in Cuba.

It was different a year ago today. Prime Minister Fidel Castro had cut off the fresh water supply for the base.

Things looked dark, strategically and domestically. Washington ordered Guantanamo to start sending dependents back to the United States. The base was to become a military garrison, womanless and childless, standing ready to repel attack and faced with water ration.

Last February, when Castro cut off the water and thought he had turned on a drought, there were 2,994 dependents of military and civilian personnel living on Guantanamo. By December, the total had dropped to 1,464.

But at Christmas time, Washington changed its mind. The word went out to permit dependents to go to Guantanamo. The first began arriving last month, about 250. And more are on the way.

The Navy had been buying water from Cuba, and the daily water consumption of the base at the time the Reds cut off the supply was about 2.2 million gallons.

The immediate, emergency step was to shuttle tanker ships between Florida and Guantanamo to bring in fresh water. But the shuttle — and there wasn't water enough for laundries, much less for such things as swimming pools and watering lawns.

Even while the first shuttle trips were being made, the Navy hastened to start a permanent setup to replace the Cuban water supply.

It began work on three plants to distill sea water into fresh water. Three such plants would produce the average 2.2 million gallons daily required in normal functioning of the base.

The first plant went into operation last August and the first of the two tankers was pulled out of the shuttle service soon after. A second plant began pouring out its share of fresh water in September and the other tanker was withdrawn. The third plant began operation in December.

The big reservoirs on the base were filled. Water was in abundance, even enough to fill the community swimming pools on the base and put water on withered lawns and flowers.

Russians Bolster Mongolia Influence

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet Deputy Premier Alexander N. Shelepin ended a 10-day visit to Mongolia today apparently intended to bolster that Soviet satellite from Chinese pressure.

Mongolian Premier Yumzhagin Tsedenbal was reported to have renewed his support for the Soviet Union in its ideological dispute with Red China.

Mongolia's Communist party recently ousted three officials on charges of questioning the party's ties to Moscow. The big Communist country, which lies between the Soviet Union and Red China, has been hurt by Chinese economic retaliation for its pro-Soviet position.

Throughout the city, contributions to the Mothers March of Dimes were made by passing the envelope from neighbor to neighbor. However there were still instances of doorbell ringing while walking the block.

Seventeen boys and girls from St. Mary's Sodalities met at the home of Toni Cina and sporting their March of Dimes buttons for the Mothers March in Ivywild. They collected $89.

In another part of the city, Mrs. Ray H. Slaybaugh, 2 Friendship Lane, also rang doorbells in the Garden of the Gods area. The funds collected will further research to find the causes and cures of birth defects.

Briefings Not Piped To President, He Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Press secretary George E. Reedy has labeled "silly" reports that his twice-a-day briefings to newsmen are piped to President Johnson.

The subject came up at Reedy's afternoon briefing Friday amid widespread newspaper reports that the press corps believes Johnson listens in on such sessions.

Said Reedy of the alleged bugging: "I've heard of some silly ones in the silly season. I think that takes the prize."

'Plasma Pinch Engine' Slated for Space Tests

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new electric rocket device called a "plasma pinch engine" is ticketed for a ride in space this year, the Navy disclosed Friday.

Though small in size compared with conventional chemical rocket engines, it was described as a possible forerunner of devices which one day may:

—Propel manned spacecraft to distant planets after they are first sent aloft by larger rockets.

—Allow orbiting satellites to be switched from one orbit to another —for example, switching communications satellites from low- to high-altitude orbits.

It's designed for initial orbital testing in a Navy satellite later this year — the first electric rocket engine involved in an orbital flight. But it won't go to work until the satellite has first been lobbed into orbit by a conventional rocket.

Cmdr. Milton Gussow of the Air Programs Division, Office of Naval Research, told about the plans in an agency publication, "Naval Research Reviews."

Cooperating in the effort will be the Naval Research Laboratory and the Bureau of Naval Weapons. While Gussow didn't say so, the bureau's interest presumably indicates the tiny 11-pound engine, with 12 pounds of allied equipment, has military potentialities.

It is designed to function by the interaction of an electric current and a magnetic field in the presence of a hydrogen gas —the latter serving as a propellant.

The electricity and the magnetic field team up to create a force that compresses, or pinches the electrified gas — called plasma — and causes the gas to be exhausted very rapidly through nozzles in the spacecraft. This propels the vehicle in the direction opposite to that of the exhaust.

Cobbler Disinherits Son; Son Wins Out

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Italian-born cobbler John Nigro, who died in March 1963, directed in his will that the $100,000 estate he had amassed in this country be used for building a hospital in Grimaldi, Italy.

Frank contested the will in Los Angeles Superior Court. His father was incompetent when he wrote the will, he said. His father was irrational and under psychiatric care, the son, now 40, testified.

Friday the court agreed with the son. Grimaldi lost. The full estate, it was ordered, goes to Frank Nigro.

Michigan Tech Romps Past CC

BETWEEN THE LINES

by Loy Holman

In Classy Company

Short shots from the past week . . .

There may have been a lack of suspense surrounding the presentation of the Quarterback Club's yearly top citation given this week to Barbara McIntyre, but there was no doubt that the pert U.S. Women's Amateur golf champion was by for the most outstanding candidate for 1964.

* * *

National Champion

* * *

Being the first distaff winner puts Barbara in a class by herself, and also on a list that has included Olympic champions, All-America football players and coaches who have brought national recognition to the state of Colorado. Recognition of course, is the key to the award since this is from which the state's sports personalities are judged.

Hers was not only state-wide and national, but Miss McIntyre also drew attention from wherever golf is played through her U. S. title and play in the Curtis Cup matches and the World Amatuer tournament in France.

Hats off to her!

Along this same line, of the over 200 in attendance at the Broadmoor for this Sports Achievement Award, many are still wondering in disappointment just what the featured speaker was trying to put across.

As one wag said afterwards, "He sure missed a fine opportunity to say something brilliant."

At the rostrum was Cliff Buck of Denver, newly elected president of the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU). His speech could probably b trimmed down to: The most talented athletes probably will be taken care of, but the AAU is concerned over the physical being of the general public and would like to see the facilities of the nation (school gyms, etc.) used more extensively.

Or as another listener, used to filtering long speeches in a courtroom, said, "I think he was trying to say something should be done but the AAU isn't going to do it."

Buck could have given the AAU's view on the raging fight with the NCAA for control of amateur athletes, or he might have described his trips overseas with AAU teams, or even the future of the AAU basketball tournament which has been slowly dying in Denver.

But he didn't.

From what little information that can be gleaned from the Air Force Academy's announcement that the preliminary investigation of cheating is finshed, it appears the Falcon footbail team will not be left as bad off as originally thought.

Of the 29 football players didepárted, 20 of those had eligibility remaining and about a dozen were being figured as proven players. One was lost already because of grades, and apparently there will be about eight lettermen showing up for spring practice in a few weeks.

There is no way to fully evaluate the effects this whole mess will have on athletics at the Academy, but it surely will be felt for three or four years to come. Squad morale is bound to change—for better or worse—and on the opptimistic side, the coaches are looking for a more dedicated group in the face of the shame which has been brought on them by only a few

As Coach Ben Martin put it this week, he started with even fewer experienced players in his first season at the AFA—and we can all remember what happened that year. The Falcons were undefeated.

Still to be reckoned with however, is the Cadet court which will deal with those among them who "tolerated" knowledge of the cheating ring. Or do you, too, get the impression the AFA is trying to slide over this phase of the investigation . . . after making such a hullabaloo over the justification of the Honor Code before.

In all, the Academy appears to be getting hurt more by rumors than they would have by coming clean with the taxpaying public when it first was made known.

The Academy is one of the few schools in the country that doesn't make use of the so-called "red shirting" practice of keeping athletes out of competition for a year in school to prolong their eligibility.

But Texas University's Darrell Royal undoubtedly wishes he had kept his mouth a little tighter this past week regarding over the signing of George Sauer by the American Football League's New York Jets. He freely admitted a poor choice of words in cussing out the Jets for taking Sauer.

For years the practice of "red shirting" players has been common knowledge, but this incident certainly brought it and the moral implications of holding a student in school a year long for football, to the attention of everyone.

You see, Sauer was one of 24 players Royal held out of competition for one reason or another. Granted, none are forced to stay in school, but on the other hand there is little encouragement to these players to go ahead and finish their studies on time when a coach can squeeze another season out of them in a packed stadium.

Anyway, the Texas coach is miffed at the pros, and he's closing the campus gate to their scouts. "That's what this issue boils down to," Royal said this week, "and I don't care if they are from the AFL, the NFL, the WPA or the CIO."

This region, compared to others around the country, has never been known to be a mecca for basketball. Oh sure, there one certain games which draw capacity crowds but the gymnasiums more the most part are relatively small and the majority of seats are filled with students or attend for the sociability as much as for the sport.

But the one exception is the annual appearance here of those clowns of all cagers, the Harlem Globetrotters. In my memory, there has never been less than a full house at the City Auditorium for any of their games in the Springs—an in most cases there have been long lines out front of disappointed fans who didn't arrive quite early enough to get tickets.

As announced earlier, this trip the 'Trotters will make it a double dip in Colorado Springs, playing the nights of Friday and Saturday, Feb. 26-27. So, for a change, everyone who has wanted to view their zany artists—and haven't been able—will have two opportunities.

And, as an extra bonus, part of the proceeds will be donated to the Elks Club sponsored Laraden Hall for crippled children. See you there?

Kansas State Scoots Past Cyclones

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Kansas State's defending champion Wildcats stayed in contention for the Big Eight basketball title by racing past Iowa State 82-71 Saturday night.

The triumph avenged last Saturday's startling 91-76 Iowa State victory at Ames and evened K-State's league mark at 3-3.

The Wildcats, victims of a fast break, deadly outside shooting and plentiful free throw shooting last week, beat the Cyclones with exactly the same formula. As frosting, Coach Tex Winter's club threw up an harrassing 1-3-1 zone defense that cut the effectiveness of Iowa State's usually deadly outside shooting.

Magie, Blumer Hurt In Rough--and-Tumbler

HOUGHTON, Mich. — The explosive Michigan Tech University hockey team, paced by the early scoring of Toronto sophomore winger Gary Milroy, banged in four first period goals and then went on to smother visiting Colorado College 10-1 here in a game played Saturday afternoon.

The victory brought Tech's Western Collegiate Hockey Association record to 7-4-1 and only a game and a half behind league leading North Dakota's current 8-2 mark. North Dakota was idle this weekend.

Michigan Tech's sweep of the two games this week against Colorado College, also taking Friday's series opener 3-1, left the Tigers from Colorado Springs with a cellar-dwelling 2-8 mark with six WCHA games left on the schedule. It all but eliminated Coach Bob Johnson's Bengals from a berth in the league plafoffs.

But even of more concern to CC, as they started back to Colorado from the deeply covered snow pack of upper Michigan, was the physical being of the squad. After Saturday's contest, in which there were 20 penalties blown against both squads in a 60-minute melee, there were no less than five regulars with major injuries.

Picking up the latest injuries in Saturday's game were wingers Bob Magie, the team's leading scorer, and Glen Blummer. Although they finished out the rough-and-tumble game, Blumer has a probable broken hand and Magie was taken to a hospital for treatment of a cut mouth and possible broken teeth.

Also operating with injuries from past games are goalie Bill Howard with a double fracture of his hand, and defenseman Dick Haugland with another broken hand. Defenseman Ken Hanson was unable to make the trip here because of a concussion from last weekend, but was released from a hospital in Colorado Springs on Saturday.

The penalties, 10 against each team, played an important role in the one-sided victory by Tech, with four of their goals coming with the Tigers were shorthanded.

Milroy scored two goals in the opening period as the Huskies took a 4-1 lead after the first 20 minutes of play, and he assisted on three others to pace the win. Also scoring twice were sophomore Wayne Weller and junior center Ricky Yeo. Team captain Al Holm had four assists, Milroy three and three others two each.

The lone CC tally came in the first minute of play with sophomore Johnny Genz beating goalie Tony Esposito on a breakaway, after taking a pass from center Jim Amidon. But that was the only time the Tigers could light the goal lamp.

Tech jumped out to the first lead with only 19 seconds gone in the game with Milroy pumping one home from four feet on the left. And the score remained tied until with 5:13 gone Milroy got his second of the period on a blistering shot that sailed past goalie Howard.

From then on the Huskies padded the margin as 2,032 partisans from Tech cheered them on. Tech got its first goal with CC short in the last minute of the period with Dennis Huculak connecting on the power play, and shortly before Weller hit his first of two goals when Howard came out of the nets to try and stop the puck, but was beat to the disc by the Toronto soph.

In the second period, the Huskies scored twice while the Tigers were serving penalties, Fred Dart getting the first and Pete Leiman pushing the margin to 6-1. Then, rubbing salt into the open wounds, Yeo scored while his own team was short at the 19:28 mark.

Roughing erupted at the close of the second period, but sticks really started to fly in the final round. Tech's Bob Toothill got the only major infraction of the game, a five-minute spearing call, but nine penalties were for either slashing or roughing in what amounted to a head-hunting dual.

There was no scoring in the third stanza until the three-quarters point, but then Tech poured in three more to close the affair with Ed Caterer, Weller and Yeo getting the final trio.

Howard ended up with 32 saves for the Tigers, but the 10 got past him, and Tech's Esposito stopped 28 of the 29 CC shots on goal.

This next weekend Colorado College will return home, hosting the University of Minnesota in a pair of games Friday and Saturday. After that, they finish out with home games against league-leading North Dakota and then a final trip to Michigan State.

Air Academy High Falls To Boulder Fairview

BOULDER—Chris Martinson and Don Queen controlled the boards and Tom Maulsby led the shooting as Fairview defeated Air Academy High, 82-63, Saturday night in a non-league game.

The Kadets could manage only one offensive rebound the second half as Martinson and Queen took off rebounds in a manner similar to Harrison of AAH's Will Roger League. The two frontliners each added 18 points to the fray. Maulsby had 19 to lead the score parade.

AAH finally dropped behind at halftime, 38-37, after pressing Fairview the entire first half. Then the Boulder team whipped into a fast break that ran down the Big Blue time and again.

Bert Spear and Mark Baker led the visitors with 10 points each. John Van Ark added 13 for Fairview.

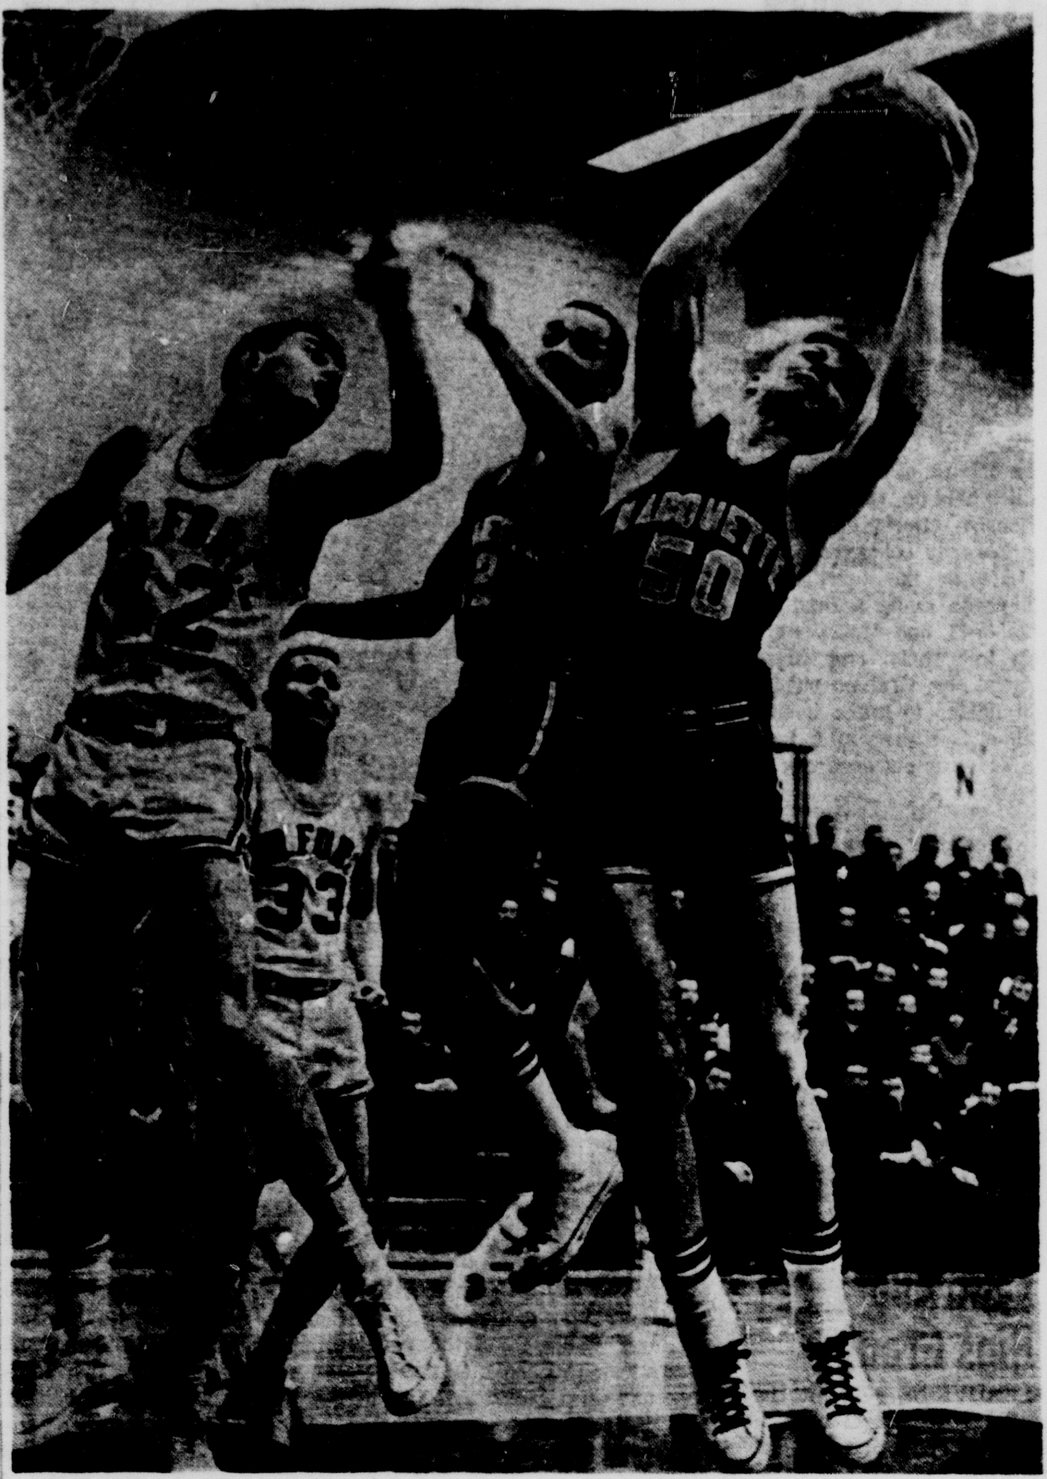
Jayhawks Outhustle Oklahoma

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Walt Wesley's 34 points made the difference for Kansas as the Jayhawks stayed in the Big Eight basketball title race by whipping hustling, hot-shooting Oklahoma 77-68 Saturday night.

The victory enabled the Jayhawks to gain a game on leading Oklahoma State which was upset at Missouri. Kansas is in third place with a 4-3 record. Oklahoma dropped to 2-5 in the league.

Led by Mike Rooney and Bill Whitlock, the fiery Sooners wiped out a 34-24 Kansas lead in the last 4:48 of the first half and surged on top 40-38 at intermission.

But the 6-foot-11 Wesley, Riney Lochmann and 6-5 Al Lopes, playing both forward and guard, led the Jayhawk comeback. A goal by Ron Franz put Kansas ahead to stay 47-46, and the lead reached seven points before the Sooners rallied within two, [illegible] with six minutes left.



THE PAIN OF IT ALL — Marquette University's Dan Anderson (50) comes down with a rebound, but appears to be in pain as he fights off teammate Craig Leonard (42) and Cadet Sam Peshut (in white, 42) for the carom. The Air Force Academy's Fred Budinger (33) looks on. Despite platoon substitution by the Warriors and a last-minute drive, the Air Force came through with a 75-73 victory. (Gazette Telegraph Photo)

Air Force Stings Warriors Hanging on in final Minute

By LOY HOLMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Editor

Coming from behind in the second half and then barely hanging on as they watched a nine-point lead evaporate in the closing minute of play, the Falcons of the Air Force Academy captured one of their most precious victories of the basketball season Saturday night in a 75-73 verdict over Marquette University.

In a see-saw game that had the lead change hands a half-dozen times, a big bucket by sophomore Fred Budinger with 1:08 left in the contest turned out to be the divider between these two nearly yearly rivals. The Warriors close seven points of the lead in the last minute but time ran out just as they were making a last-ditch attempt to send the game into overtime.

The victory gave the Falcons a 4-3 margin in their series with Marquette and it was the second straight over the visitors from Milwaukee. It also lifted the AFA's seasonal record to 7-9, and dropped Marquette's ledger to 7-10.

In that Marquette had just last weekend upset then eighth-ranked St. John's of New York, the triumph was even more dear to the Cadets who have had their troubles getting all gears to mesh this winter with a sophomore—dominated group. It ended a five-game home stand for the Falcons which included three wins, and ballooned their hopes for another winning season though five of their last seven games are on the road starting next Saturday at Portland, Ore.

In a thrill-packed finish that ended with a continual parade to the foul lines at both ends of the court, the Air Force came awfully close to literally throwing the game away.

Counting on the nine point cushion with a minute remaining, the Falcons slackened their usually tight defense and gave the driving Warriors room to maneuver for easy layups. The strategy was working fine and Marquette appeared to be running out of time to play the catch-up game, but a ful-court pass nearly turned the tables.

With 18 seconds left, the Warriors' Paul Carbins slapped in a follow shot that trimmed the score to 75-73. The visitors then applied a pressing defense on the out-of-bounds pass, and Pat Dowling's long lead to Sam Peshut went the distance of the floor and out again.

That gave Marquette the ball again with eight seconds, but their leading scorer Bob Wolf dribbled the length of the court and was blocked under the bucket by a pair of Cadets. Wolf lost control and Budinger picked it up for the Air Force just as the buzzer sounded.

Wolf topped the visitors with 20 points, 11 coming in the first half as Marquette managed to rally for a 34-33 lead, but the Air Force's Peshut was high for the game with 24. Also coming in with double figure totals were Rocke Calvelli, a fancy dan at ball handling, and Joel Plinska, a veteran who actually has been playing off-and-on for Marquette since 1957. Budinger had a dozen for the Falcons, and teammates Pete Hugdahl and Marty Andrade pitched in 11 and 10 respectively.

Andrade, who was a last-minute hero for the Falcons in Wednesday's two-point win over nesday's two-point win over California Western, came through when the Cadets needed them the most. Against Marquette, it was Andrade, along with Budinger, who provided the spark with three jump shots and a tipin with seven minutes to go that brought the AFA out of a tie and into a six point lead.

From then on it was a march to the free throw lines for both teams and the Falcons held their own and even managed to increase the margin to nine until the final drive by Marquette in the last minute of play.

Due credit should also go to junior veteran Ed Sullivan, although he was slightly off his average with but eight points. It was Sullivan who drew the assignment of watching Marquette's ace, big Tom Flynn, and he held the 6-5, 220-pound junior to but a single field goal.

Flynn, who had been averaging near the 20-point mark, was one of four hugh forwards the Warriors put on the floor—all well over 200-pounds. Plinska topped 'em at 230 pounds, but agile Paul Carbins came in at 215 and tall Dan Anderson was but five pounds less.

The Air Force finished off with a respectable 42.6 per cent from the field and held Marquette to but 31.5 per cent.

The Falcons held the lead through the latter part of the first half, taking it over with 12 minutes gone and holding on until the Warriors' Roger Buxton hit a pair of free throws with 59 seconds left. Sullivan's shot at the buzzer trimmed the lead to one.

In the second half, Marquette was ahead until Peshut hit from 15 feet with 6:30 gone and from then on the Falcons were never headed again. Their lead bounced around from nine to four points until the last minute spree by the Warriors.

Buffs Strengthen Grip On Big 8 Second Spot

BOULDER, Colo. (AP)— Colorado scored seven straight points to pull away from Nebraska in the second half and then went into a deep freeze Saturday for a 62-52 Big Eight Conference basketball victory.

Colorado scored on 26 of 37 free throw attempts to Nebraska's 8 for 16 and outrebounded the Huskers 59-43 to pick up its fourth win in six league games and tighten its grip on second place.

It was the fifth loss in six Big Eight games for celler-dwelling Nebraska.

Chuck Gardner paced Colorado with 18 points and 15 rebounds while Mike Frink had 11 points and Lynn Baker 10.

With the score 36-36 at the intermission, Colorado started slowly in the second half with only five points in the first five minutes and Nebraska moved ahead 42-41 on the shooting of Hare and Willie Campbell.

Colorado responded with seven straight points and never trailed after that. With the score 55-49 and 4:45 left, Colorado began a ball control game that drew Nebraska into numerous fouls.

Bucs Face Key Game With Regis

DENVER—Dan Wright's pennant seeking Pirates face a "must-win" showdown game with old nemesis Regis this afternoon at the Regis College Fieldhouse. Tip-off time is set for 2:30 p.m. today.

The Colorado Springs - Parokes, presently deadlocked with torrid-scoring Mullen for the Denver Parochial League lead via 10-1 won-loss records, face the formidable task of defeating the Regis crew here today because of the losing jinx the St. Mary's cagers have encountered at the Regis Fieldhouse in past loop outings.

It required the Pirates' first DPL championship team to snap that jinx two years ago. However, the present St. Mary's basketball edition has the advantage of a first round victory over Regis (50-40) earlier this season and Wright's chargers have displayed team unity in their last few games.

Friday night the Buccaneers proved they could jell as a unit and not depend upon their top scorer, Tom McCarthy, to take the bulk of the scoring responsibility. Three Pirates scored in the double figures, including McCarthy, as they dumped Cathedral by a 76-62 margin Friday night.

This was the Pirates 10th DPL victory against one loss, losing that single outing to the high-scoring Mullen five, 66-62, and they upped their overall record to 15-2. The Bucs second loss came from the Will Rogers League pace setters from Harrison in non-conference play, 75-72.

Should the St. Mary's roundballers manage to surpass the Regis defensive-minded cagers today, this will take some pressure off their shoulders when they tangle with Mullen Friday night at the latter's home court. On the other hand, a loss to Regis would probably put too much pressure on the youthful Pirate when they clash with Mullen.

Wright Lands 32 Points as Rams Tip Pokes

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP)— Lonnie Wright, Colorado State University forward, scored 32 points to lead CSU to an 82-77 basketball victory over Wyoming Saturday.

Wright hit 18 for 20 free throw attempts, 16 coming in the second half when he scored only one field goal and played the fouls on him.

Sonny Bustion, CSU center, was thrown out of the game with 40 seconds left when he and Robinson got into a tussle.

Robinson was awarded three technical fouls, making all of them, but not enough to bring the Cowboys from behind.

The lead changed hands 12 last part of the period with four times in the first half with the score tied on six occasions.

Cherry Creek's Shooting Edges Cheyenne Mountain

By DICK FOSTER

Cherry Creek's sharpshooting Bruins "Bearly" squeezed by the Chepenne Mountain Indians, 50-47, in a hot, back and forth ball game at Cheyenne Saturday night.

The loss left Coach Don O'Hare's Indians with a 7-8 season record, while they stand 3-3 in league competition with their win over Canon City Friday night. Next Friday, Cheyenne will meet Widefield at Cheyenne, and the Gladiators have turned into a Will Rogers League toughie.

Bill Massarand, who had a terrific night Friday, was again at the reins of the Cheyenne drive Saturday. He poured in 19 points and got 14 rebounds. Ron Graham was off except at the boards where he netted 13 rebounds, and Dick Miller took some terrific pot-shots from the corners for 10 Cheyenne points.

The Tribe's little guardmen also showed quite an improvement in running the Indian attack, which showed up much cleaner than their erratic display against Canon City. Shooting, though was only mediocre.

Cherry Creek, however, had some bombers of their own, and really went to work from the field. Jim Paterson and John Vranesic shot 11 points apiece, and Terry Schultz had 10. The Bruins hit 17 of 42 shots from the field for a 40.5 percentage, while it took the Indians 67 shots to hit 18. That 26.8 percentage is quite a shade lower than Cherry Creek's output.

Defensively, both squads performed well. Cheyenne had a small 11-9 lead after one quarter. An exchange of free throws by Vranesic and Steve Walrod opened scoring. John Vogt added a fielder for the Bruins and Massarand countered with two field goals. Miller put two field goals in in that frame, and Graham added one. A pair of free shots by Vranesic, and a fielder by Scultz ended the period.

Cheyenne moved to a seven point edge in the early second period on a continuous bombardment of the nets. Miller hit for four quick points, Massarand added three and Jeff Remmel hit two. Cherry Creek sank four points in that time to make the score 20-13 with five minutes left.

Cherry Creek then turned to the role of aggressor and held a seven point bulge, 29-22 by halftime, as Cheyenne's scoring was jammed to a halt by some outstanding defense and ball stealing. Four points each by Mike Haldeman and Dan Smith helped push the Bruins well in front.

The Cherry Creek five managed to retain most of the lead through three periods of play and still had a 39-35 edge by the end of that frame. They never lost the lead in the fourth frame although Cheyenne's pressing defense made things pretty tense. The Creek team had a fine defense of their own though, which held up, while most of the offensive efforts on both sides temporarily collapsed.

Late in the fourth quarter, Cheyenne made a final bid. It was 48-43, and Massarand sank two free shots, and missed a crucial one. Graham put in a final fielder to make it 48-47. A pair of free shots after the horn by Vranesic put on Creek's final two tallies.

Ailing Bradley Boosts Tigers Past Yale

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Princeton barged out to a healthy first half advantage then, with All America Bill Bradley sub-par with an ailing knee, held off Yale 67-62 in a regionally-televised Ivy League basketball game Saturday afternoon.

The victory pushed Princeton's league record to 6-1, while Yale is now 1-5.

Bradley, Princeton's Rhodes scholar and the nation's No. 3 collegiate scorer, was out of action for a time in the second half after falling heavily following a foul and apparently suffering a knee injury.

He returned when the Elis began closing up and, though moving noticeably slower, rallied the Tigers.

Princeton forged a 43-34 halftime advantage, but watched it shrink to 56-53 late in the game. Princeton then broke through the Yale press and it was as close as Yale could come.

Bradley led all scorers with 28 points, while Robert Trupin had 17 and Herb Broadfoot 15 for Yale.

Leadville Rips Granby

LEADVILLE — Jack Hosley, battling the effects of a week-long flu illness, scored 17 points Saturday night as Leadville dumped Granby, 81-56.

CC Tankers Break Four Pool Marks

Colorado College broke four school records Saturday as the Tiger swim team swept a 59-36 decision from Western State College in the CC pool.

The Tigers will host their first annual invitational relays Saturay with Colorado Mines, Regis and Weber State of Utah competing.

AARON BIDS FOR LEAD—Tommy Aaron lashed an iron from the rough on the 18th hole at Eldorado Country Club while making a strong run for the lead in the Bob Hope Golf Classic Saturday. Aaron, only a stroke off the pace when the day began, got a birdie on the hole and 33 for the back nine, which he played first. His ball was barely in bounds, claring the out-of-bounds marker in the background. (Associated Press Wirephoto)

St. Cloud Batters AFA Icers, 13-5

St. Cloud State ripped Air Force Academy's hockey club, 13-5, Saturday night in the Broadmoor World Arena, completing a two-game sweep. The Minnesota college gained a 10-1 victory Friday night.

Roger Carlson led the cadet icers with two goals, in the second and third periods. Al Sweeney also scored two goals in the first and third periods. John Vickory tallied a line goal in the third period, knocking the puck off the goalie's skate behind the red line on a power play.

Doe Bryant turned the hat trick for the visitors. John Duncan, Dick Beaudet and Dennis Anderson each scored two for St. Cloud.

The victors outskated AFA throughout the game, with the three third period goals the Cadets' only bright spot. In the second period Carlson's goal was the only shot on goal by Air Force.

The Cadets are scheduled to travel Saturday to St. Mary's College, Winona, Minn. St. Cloud has two games tonight and Monday with Colorado College's freshmen.

Montana State Trips Falcon Grapplers

Montana State handed the Air Force wrestling team its fifth straight loss Saturday downing the Falcons, 23-8.

John Angell, the Cadets' 157-pounder from Warwick, R. I., and senior Al Pfeltz, a 177-pounder from Pittsburgh, Pa., garnered the only wins for the Falcons. Bob Englebretson, native of Selleville, Ill., wrestled to a 4-4 draw in the 167-pound match to round out the point making for the Air Force.

There were no pins in the meet. The Air Force now has a 0-5 mark for the season with their next match being a Tuesday night assignment against Colorado State College at Greeley.

Panthers Topple Stingless Hornets

By CHARLIE DREUX
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Watching the undefeated, smooth-running Will Rogers League kingpins from Harrison looking helpless against Pueblo County's stall-game tactics Saturday night, it wasn't difficult to summarize that the Panthers were not going to benefit from this non-conference encounter.

Undoubtedly, Harrison's head coach Norm Sullivan was thinking the same thing!

Actually the outcome of the game was anticlimactic, particularly when the visiting Hornets (at the insistence of their coach) started the waiting game and it really didn't benefit either team from playing this lustreless-type contest. But perhaps it gave the Pueblo County cagers an opportunity to practice ball control and it played havoc with the normally fast-breaking Panthers.

It was sheer delight for the harassed and bewildered Harrison roundballers when the scheduled 32-minutes of play ran off the clock and the Panthers were justified in feeling uneasy about recording their 11th victory of the season.

Perhaps the Pueblo County coach was informed of the Panthers capabilities and was forced to this type "strategy" which certainly backfired on the Hornets and their coach.

After the Panthers jumped to an 18-8 lead at the conclusion of the first period, the Hornets put the skids on and slowed the pace to a standstill the following period as the Harrison squad couldn't cope with the situation.

Then the Hornets switched their strategy and got into a full gait which nearly proved fatal to the bewildered Panthers. Pueblo County dumped in 13 points in the second period to narrow the margin, 28-21, at intermission.

It was the third period which proved most grave to the onlooking spectators as both the Panthers and Hornets' followers didn't pay the price of admission to see the Pueblo County control the ball for over seven minutes. The Hornets finally took a shot with 11 seconds left in that period as the "plan" was to stop the Panthers from scoring. But Harrison's 6-4 frontcourtsman sank a two-pointer from the field and was fouled as the third period ended.

Obert made good the third point, making the charity toss to give the Panthers a 31-22 lead. During that period, the Hornets picked up only one point and Harrison tallied three.

The Pueblo County cagers returned to their relentless business of stalling in the final period but once again broke into a fast-break game which cut Harrison's lead to 35-31 with 3:14 left in the game.

The Hornets made an all-out last minute effort to pull out the "victory." Tom Meek, who was the top scorer for Pueblo County with 14 points, scored with :58 left on the clock but Larry Gagnon rallied for the Panthers with a pair of charity tosses with only :07 remaining in the game.

Red Raiders Pass Century Mark Again

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) — Texas Tech passed the century mark for the fifth time this season, defeating Rice 102-69 Saturday in a Southwest Conference basketball game.

Rice's early slow down tactics kept the game close during the opening minutes but Texas Tech countered with a zone press that helped build the Raider to a 47-30 halftime lead.

Doug McKendrick of Rice paced all scorers with 29 points but was the only Owl tallying more than nine points. Texas Tech offset his performance with 20 by Harold Denney, 19 by Dub Malaise, and 16 apiece by Glen Hallum and Norman Reuther.

Canon City Turns Back Danes Rally

CANON CITY — Dan Wheeler's Tigers managed to shut-off Fountain Valley Boys School's Danes last minute rally here Saturday night as the Canon City cagers pulled out a 52-50 squeaker-win in non-conference play.

The Tigers led throughout the game and their six-point lead was cut to only a two-point margin as the Fountain Valley aggregation, behind the scoring of 6-5 Hal Clifford who tallied 16 points, nearly turned the tide in the closing minutes.

For the Tigers, Mickey Gann poured in 17 points and enabled the Tigers to end a seven-game losing streak.

Minnesota Runs Past Mich. State

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Minnesota picked up steam after a slow start and ran away from Michigan State, 88-79, Saturday handing the Spartans their sixth straight Big Ten basketball loss.

Lou Hudson was the hot shooter and all-around one-man gang for Minnesota. He was top scorer with 32 points.

Bill Curtis and Stan Washington scored 22 points each for Michigan State.

The Gophers now are 5-1 in the conference and in good position to challege the Big Ten front-runner, top ranked Michigan, which has a 5-0 mark.

Early in the game it looked as if Michigan State was finally ready to score an upset. The Spartans scored first and were leading 14-5 with less than five minutes gone. Minnesota came back and went ahead 25-24 when there was only 7:36 left in the half.

Snell Hopes to Break Mile's 3:50 Barrier

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — Peter Snell, the world's greatest miler, will make one brief stop in the United States and then head for Europe in what probably will be his last bid for more running records.

His goal is a 3:50 mile, but there is some question that he will improve on his existing marks.

"I need considerable incentive to keep training," the New Zealand comet said, before departing on his overseas trip. "The Olympics provided one and I was in the best form of my life. I knew after that that it would be hard to turn around and get into intensive preparation for the European trip."

He will run in the Los Angeles Times meet next weekend before continuing on to Europe. It's his only U.S. appearance.

"You never know about Peter," fellow New Zealander John Davies told New York track writers last Tuesday. "He'll either run like hell in a race, and win it, or toss it away."

Snell, winner of the 800-and 1,500-meter races in the Tokyo Olympics last October, followed up this double gold medal performance by setting a world mark of 2:16.6 in the 1,000 meters and running the mile in 3:54.1.

He achieved both records in Auckland within the space of a week.

Snell admitted that he had eased off training considerably since his great Olympic showing and the two record races shortly afterward.

"I've just been doing enough to retain reasonable form," he said.

"I'm trying to work up gradually to a stage of running 100 miles a week and training for Europe."

In Europe, he said he would shoot for the record in the 1,500 meters. He ran the distance for the first time at Tokyo. He normally runs the mile.

He said he believed that, with concentrated effort, the right concentrated effort, he might run the mile in 3:50.

"After the European trip, I'll definitely retire," Snell said. "I'll just run enough to keep fit, because it's something you never want to lose completely. I'm going to enjoy playing other sports for fun, golf and tennis."

He is a topflight tennis player, who might have been his country's best if he had given the sport as much time as he has to his track. He shoots in the 80s in golf.

He said he and his wife may some day move to the United States, possibly California. He currently is employed by a New Zealand cigarette firm.

Casper Moves Up To Lead Hope Golf

By BOB MYERS
Associated Press Sports Writer

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The big guns of golf finally spoke Saturday and when the firing was over Bill Casper Jr. topped the field in the $100,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic.

Casper shot a five-under-par 67, giving him a 72-hole score of 276 and a lead of two strokes going into Sunday's final round of the 90-hole tournament.

Alone at 278 was Frank Beard with a 68, and Arnold Palmer suddenly emerged after three days of so-so golf.

Palmer had a 67 for 279 to tie with Tommy Aaron, with 72, and Dave Marr with 69.

Jack Nicklaus, also made a rally for nine holes when he shot a 33. But he went four strokes over par on four holes on the back nine with a bogie, par bogie, double bogie. It gave him a round of 72 and 283.

The weather played almost fiendish tricks throughout the day on the four courses involved, Indian Wells, Eldorado, Bermuda Dunes and La Quinta. Each has par 36-36—72.

There was bright sun, and simultaneously, sun and showers, and there was wind that whipped from all directions.

"The wind would blow hard, then stop. It would blow easy, and stop again. Then it would shower, even when the sun was shinning, and three times I put up my umbrella," said Casper.

Casper, Nicklaus and Palmer played Indian Wells and were viewed by a national television audience. The weatherman promised good conditions Sunday.

"This is the third time I've led this tournament after 72 holes," Casper noted. "Maybe this will be the lucky time."

Casper birdied two holes on the first nine and turned in 34. He drove into a trap and had his only bogie on number 10. Then he reeled off three straight birdies from number 14 on and added a final birdie on the 18th when he dropped in a 10-foot putt.

Palmer was three strokes under par after the first five holes but bogied two of the last three and had a 35 for the first nine. And then playing when the weather was possibily its most erratic, Palmer came home in 32 for his 67.

Cradle of Coaches Sends Four Into World

By DON BANDY
Associated Press Writer

OXFORD, Ohio (AP) —John Pont became head football coach at Indiana, Carmen Cozza succeeded Pont at Yale, George Blackburn took over at Virginia, and John McVay moved to the University of Dayton.

These four, named to new coaching positions last month, have one thing in common. They are either graduates or former head football coaches at Miami University of Ohio.

For Miami, it is another chapter in its fabulous story as the cradle of coaches. The list of Miami alumni and-or former head coaches now in other collegiate or pro positions reads like the who's who of American coaching.

Pont and Cozza played football and were roommates at Miami. Pont became Miami's head mentor and one of his assistants was Cozza. Pont took Cozza with him when he took the coaching reins at Yale.

Pont and Cozza in their Miami playing days had three head coaches: Blackburn, Woody Hayes and Ara Parseghian.

McVay, 1953 Miami graduate, went to Dayton from an assistant's spot at Michigan State University.

Ernie Plank, Jay Fry and Herb Fairfield — all Miami graduates — are joining Pont's Indiana staff as assistants. Jack Faulkner, Miami '49, last month was named as assistant with the pro Minnesota Vikings. And Jerry Hanlon, Miami '56, moved from the high school ranks to join McVay's Dayton staff.

Other Miami alumni now at collegiate football helms are Paul Dietzel at Army, Ed Biles at Xavier of Ohio and Bo Schembechler, the present Miami coach.

In addition to Hayes and Blackburn, former Miami coaches include Stu Holcomb, athletic director at Northwestern; Sid Gillman, coach of the pro San Diego Chargers and Weeb Ewbank, head man of the pro New York Jets.

Miami's production of famed coaches started in 1918 when Earl (Red) Blaik was graduated. Blaik was an outstanding end on the Miami team and went on to coach at Army.

Another famed graduate and former coach of the Southwestern Ohio school is Paul Brown, who coached at Ohio State and then founded and coached the Cleveland Browns. He is now out of coaching.

Miami hasn't limited itself to turning out football coaches. Walter Alston, who has managed the Brooklyn and Los Angeles baseball Dodgers the last 11 years, is a Miami grad.

AFA Swim Team Tops Texas Tech

The Air Force swimming team notched its fifth win against two losses Saturday as the Falcons outscored Texas Tech, 57-38.

Steve Siegler and Rich Abramson, the Cadets' outstanding sophomore duo, were the only double winners in the meet. Siegler, a native of Chicago, Ill., won the 200-yard individual medley and the 200-yard breaststroke.

Abramson, from Jamaica Estates, N.Y., copped both the 200-yard and 500-yard freestyle races.

Salida Romps To Triumph

Sports Hall of Fame Inducts Three as Charter Members

DENVER (AP) — The newly-established Colorado Sports Hall of Fame announced Saturday that it has voted Jack Dempsey, Earl (Dutch) Clark and Byron (Whizzer) White as charter members.

They are the first to be voted into the state hall of fame by a selection committee of 18 sportswriters and sportscasters.

Dempsey, 69, Clark, 58, and White, 47, were the final selections from an original list of 80 nominees which was screened to a group of 12 finalists. None of the other finalists came close to the three-fourths majority vote of the selection committee—the requirement for induction.

Dempsey, rated by some the greatest heavyweight boxing champion, was born at Manassa, Colo., which accounted for his descriptive nickname of "The Manassa Mauler."

Clark, a Pueblo Central High School graduate who was born at Fowler, Colo., earned AP All-America honors as quarterback of the Colorado College football team in 1928. He starred as a pro quarterback for the Portsmouth, Ohio, team and later with the Detroit Lions. He later coached the Cleveland Rams and became athletic director at Detroit University.

White, from Wellington, Colo., was a star football back at University of Colorado, became a Rhodes scholar, played with Pittsburgh and Detroit in pro ball and now is a United States Supreme Court justice.

Dempsey, a New York restauranteur, notified friends he hoped to attend the induction ceremony. Clark, who has suffered two heart attacks, said his health would dictate whether he is able to make the trip to Denver.

White's ability to attend will depend upon matters before the court.

Dempsey, born June 4, 1896, won the heavyweight title July 4, 1919 from Jess Willard at Toledo, Ohio. He reigned until Gene Tunney dethroned him by decision in 1926. Tunney defeated a comeback bp Dempsey in the famous "long count" fight.

Clark was an iron man for the CC team. He ran the ball, passed, punted, drop-kicked extra points and field goals, kicked off, called signals and played safety on defense.

In pro ball, Clark led the National Football League in scoring in 1932, 1935 and 1936. He later coached at CC, Colorado Mines and University of Colorado.

White, after starring three years on University of Colorado in the late 1930s, sandwiched in three years of pro ball while attending Oxford University, Yale University Law School and Navy service during World War 2.

Work on Pikes Peak Meadows Progressing

Grandstand foundations and retaining walls are nearly finished and structural steel work will begin in about 10 days. A final surfacing of sandy loam will finish the mile racing strip.

Pikes Peak Meadows, located between Colorado Springs and Pueblo, has been awarded dates for a 41-day meeting, May 7 through July 1. A 19-day quarter horse meeting will open July 16.

Stewart and John Sidenberg, track general manager, will visit Sunland Park at El Paso, Tex., and Turf Paradise at Phoenix both to line up horses for the inaugural meeting and to consult track officials regarding workers for their new plant.

Birds Top Arvada's Wrestlers

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

A strong Arvada wrestling team split a pair of matches with Colorado Springs' clubs Saturday, dropping a tight 24-19 decision to Wasson in a morning meet and rebounding to defeat Palmer 35-9 in the afternoon.

Wasson's triumph completed a sweep of five non-league opponents for George Kalber's Thunderbirds and ran their dual meet record to 9-1 for the season. The T-Birds have lost only to South Central League leader, Pueblo East, and will conclude their regular season slate next Thursday night in a battle with tough Pueblo South at the Wasson Gymnasium.

Palmer is 3-7 for the season following Saturday's defeat. It was the second straight loss for the Tribe following a victory over Trinidad last week. Palmer concludes its regular season activity Thursday night by traveling to Pueblo to meet the East Eagles.

The Wasson-Arvada duel Saturday morning was an excellent one with the Thunderbirds forced to win two of the final three matches to nail down the triumph. Going into the heavyweight contest the Birds had a margin of only 21-19 and the Redskins were in postion to pull out a team victory with a win at that weight.

But Wasson's Bud Hoffpauir, shifted to heavyweight from his normal division at 180 for the second straight time, turned in a strong performance to defeat Mike Pomorico of Arvada 3-0 and clinch the decision. Even that match went down to the wire, however. There was no scoring in the initial period and Hoffpauir rode out the second stanza, leaving it still 0-0 going into the final two minutes. However, Hoffpauir came up with a reversal and then was awarded a point for riding time.

The Thunderbirds appeared on the way to an easy win after taking the first three matches on decisions by Dan Costell and Terry Remy and a pin by Ed Abeyta. Jim Ranals, who had lost only once previously this year, was leading in the final period of the 120 pound match when he was flipped into a pinhold with just 22 seconds remaining.

Archie Martinez won at the next weight to give the Birds a 14-5 lead but Arvada came up with three wins and a draw in the next four weights to tie the meet. Yogi Grandcourt, Wasson's once-defeated 165 pounder then reversed the trend by pinning Don Bethruem in 5:53, and after Arvada had won a 180, Hoffpauir contributed the clinching points.

Palmer also had the visitors down in the early going as Don Nicks and Hershel Biglow won decisions in two of the first three matches. But the Redskins then reeled off five straight decisions to go into a 20-6 lead.

Larry Wiliams gave the Terrors three more points in the 154 pound match with an escape and takedown in the third period that brought him from behind and to a 3-1 victory. But disaster qucikly followed as the final three Terrors athletes all fell prey to pins, including highly-regarded Mike Risk who had been moved up a weight to 180. Palmer was without standout heavyweight, Ron Smith, however. Smith is nearing the limit of matches allowed by Colorado rules and was held out by Coach Glenn Blagg.

The Tribe had two tough losses in the middle weights. Richard Snow was defeated 2-0 by Arvada's Terry Moore when he was the victim of a near-fall with only a short time remaining in the match. And Henry Johnson lost the 145 pound bout to Bob Bartlett of the visitors, 3-2, on riding time.

72 Pros Enter Pikes Peak Open PBA Tourney Here

By CHARLIE DREUX
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Dick Weber, who leads the winter Professional Bowlers Association (PBA) tour in prize money, Jim St. John, Bill Welu, Buzz Fazio, and last year's Denver PBA Open winner Don Johnson of Kokomo, Ind., along with eight state "amateur" keglers will head the field of 104 bowlers shooting for a chunk of the $28,500 Pikes Peak Open PBA Tournament.

The Pikes Peak Open, without question the biggest single event in the history of Colorado Springs bowling annals, is slated for Classic Bowl and national exposure via ABC-TV network during the finals.

Beginning with the Pro-Am Tourney and practice session for the PBA gunners Monday, Feb. 22, the Pikes Peak Open continues through the following Friday night with the finals set for 8 p.m.

According to the Pikes Peak Open promoter, Ralph Archer of Wheat Ridge, the Colorado Springs area is falling behind in filling the alloted slots for the one-day Pro-Am Tourney. Archer said that he was expecting a field of 240 bowlers from throughout the state to compete in that phase of the Pikes Peak Open but he related this week that the local area is running behind in filling its quota.

Bowlers interested in competing in the Pro-Am Tourney are urged to contact their respective bowling establishments for further information or they may check with the Classic Bowl.

In addition to providing the local bowlers the opportunity to see the nation's top keglers in action, the Pikes Peak Open will also bring in additional monies for the community and the March of Dimes.

The El Paso County Chapter of the March of Dimes can realize between $6,000 and $7,000 dollars from the tickets sales and local program advertising during the five-day Pikes Peak Open PBA Tournament.

Archer has signed a contract with the El Paso County Chapter officials to handle all the tickets sales and local program advertising. They will receive 20 per cent of the ticket sales and local program advertising and this is the first time a charitable organization has been able to work with the PBA on a contract basis.

Mrs. James C. Stotts, chairman of the local March of Dimes chapter for the ticket sales and local program advertising, is hopeful that she and her 20 volunteer workers can fullfill their goal of selling 750 tickets per night session during the Pikes Peak Open.

Advance tickets may be purchased at eight of the local bowling establishment—Bowl-Mor Lanes, Circle Lanes, Classic Bowl, Ent AFB Lanes, Fountain Valley Bowl in Security, Peak Bowl, Ute Lanes and Trail Bowl in Manitou Springs—and the three local sporting goods stores (Dave Cook, Blick's, and Lucas).

Tickets will also be sold at Classic Bowl for each session. There will be no reserve seats available but rather, it will work on a first-come first-seat basis with the exception of a limited number of sponsor series tickets. This $25 packet would assure the purchaser a reserve section during each session. But this package deal is limited to a small percentage of the 750-plus tickets sold.

According to Archer, some 72 PBA bowlers have sent in their entry fees to compete in the Pikes Peak Open and he indicated that there would be no problems filling the 96-pro field.

Five of the state bowlers qualifying for the open slots are from Colorado Springs, headed by Jim Pee who finished third in the rolloff last weekend at Ute Lanes and was the top league bowling last season via a 201 composite bowling average. Pee was the only Colorado Springs bowler to average over 200 in sanctioned league competition last season.

Other local bowlers qualifying for the Pikes Peak Open are Harry (Ike) Eichelberger, who is competing in his third PBA tourney held in Colorado; Ed Massey, Jack Elston and Rich Cunningham.

George McDonald, who led last year's Denver PBA Open into the finals before succumbing to the tourney champ (Johnson) and thus placed second, was the top qualifier in the rolloff last week via a plus-677. Eldon Buntrock and Al Hall, two Denver bowlers, are the other state qualifiers for Feb. 22-26 Pikes Peak Open.

* * *

Basket Looks Like Sputnik To District 11 Small Fry

When James Naismith hung a peach basket 10 feet above the floor of a Springfield, Mass., gymnasium, he didn't realize the problems he was creating for basketball teams whose big man isn't likely to be more than five feet tall.

To fifth and sixth grade basketball players in Distict 11's three elementary school leagues a basket 10 feet in the air looks very high indeed. There are no dunkers in these leagues. The grade school players, nevertheless, manage to put the ball through the hoop reasonably often.

In other respects, however, the game has been scaled down to fit the physical development of the youngsters. Teams play 30-minute games, and coaches must use all 12 members of their squad. To open up the game for more scoring, leakue rules forbid zone and pressing defenses.

Scoring and winning are just as important to the grade school players as to players anywhere, but according to Garry L. Berry director of health and physical education, winning is not the main objective of the program.

The program, co-sponsored by the Colorado Springs Park and Recreation Department, is really an extension of the schools' physical education instruction. The main objective, Berry says, is to develop physical fitness and competitive spirit among as many boys as possible.

This season there are 25 teams playing a seven-game league schedule. Games are played Saturday mornings at North Junior, Queen Palmer, and Lincoln schools.

A similar but even bigger program operates in the junior high schools where each school has a seventh, and eight, and a ninth grade team playing in three leagues. In addition, there is intramural competition among homeroom teams.

Palmer and Wasson high schools also have intramural programs with 41 basketball teams that play evenings. At the three school levels over 500 boys are playing on school teams. There is no accurate count of how many boys participate in intramural competition, but Berry estimates the number to be about 2000.

Mizzou Ruins Cowboys' Perfect Mark

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP)—Missouri remained unbeatable on their home court and ruined Oklahoma State's perfect Big Eight basketball record with a 49-42 upset Saturday night, led by Gary Garner's 16 points.

Oklahoma State is still in first place with a 6-1 record. The victory kept Missouri's title hopes alive, at 3-3.

It was Missouri's seventh straight in Brewer fieldhouse, five this season. A standing-room-only crowd of 4,000, best in several years, watched the Tigers put away in the last five minutes.

Garner got 10 of his points the last half, including two goals in the last five minutes.

CSU FROSH—Gary Graham, left, former Cheyenne Mountain athlete, and Sprague Mayger, former Palmer basketball standout, are playing for the Colorado State University freshman cage team. "Gary is very quick and a good outside shooter," says coach Irv Ferguson. "Sprague is also a fine shooter and rebounds well." Graham, a guard, majors in business administration, Mayger, who plays center, also is majoring in business.

Ohio State Rallies, Stops Wisconsin With Ricketts

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Ohio State raced back from a 10-point halftime deficit Saturday with Dick Ricketts leading the way and dealt Wisconsin its second Big Ten basketball defeat in eight days, 73-71.

Ricketts scored 23 points, 13 in the second half, as he ignited the Buckeyes, who trailed 39-29 at halftime.

The sloppily played contest was a battle between guards, with Wisconsin's Jim Bohen and Dennis Sweeney scoring 16 points each, while Ricketts' teammate, Alan Rowley, contributed 14 points in the Buckeyes' second Big Ten victory in five starts.

Ohio State held a 72-67 lead with 46 seconds remaining when the Buckeyes took a time out. Bohen hit a jump shot with 40 seconds remaining, but substitute Tom Gardner fouled Ricketts with 33 seconds left and he converted a free throw to five Ohio State a four-point lead. Bohen hit another basket to make the score 73-71 with 12 seconds remaining.

Minor Leagues Lay Plans For New Football Circuit

NEW YORK (AP) — A 10-team professional football league was formed Saturday with a combination of clubs from the United and Atlantic Coast Leagues, plus Philadelphia and Toronto.

"We are in business — all we need is a name," said Alex Schoenbaum of Charleston, West Va., chairman of the executive committee of the United Football League.

"We're going to have the best pro league in the United States and Canada," said Sol Rosen, general manager of the Newark Bears of the Atlantic Coast League.

The new league will consist of Philadelphia (taking over the Canton franchise), Toronto (replacing Montreal), Charleston, Wheeling and Fort Wayne (formerly Indianapolis) of the UFL and Newark, Richmond, Springfield and Hartford of the ACFL.

A tenth team will be added. Providence, formerly in the ACFL, is a possibility. Other possibilities are Miami and New Orleans, which haven't been contacted, Schoenbaum said.

Directors of the Atlantic Coast League, a 14-team circuit last fall, also met in New York and announced it would continue with at least eight teams.

Richmond, Newark, Hartford and Springfield were banished for jumping to the new league.

The ACFL plans to continue, Publicist Murray Goodman announced, with these teams: Boston, replacing New Bedford; Providence, Jersey City, Harrisburg, Scranton, Mohawk Valley, Pittsburgh and Portland, Maine. Atlanta and Westchester were dropped for failing to meet obligations.

"This will not be a minor league, this will be a major league," said Alex Schoenbaum of Charleston, West Va., one of the owners of the UFL Charleston franchise and chairman of the league's executive committee.

"Ours will be a league stretching from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico. We are throwing away salary restrictions and plan to go big time all the way.

"We are dealing with men able to finance big budgets, such as those in the National and American Leagues. We'll bid for top player talent. We'll go for big crowds and national television."

Schoenbaum held a four-hour meeting in the morning with representatives of a Philadelphia syndicate interested in purchasing the old Canton franchise of the UFL.

"These are prominent Philadelphia business men who barely missed out in the bid for the Philadelphia Eagles," Schoenbaum said. "All that's necessary now is to nail down where the team is to play, and when.

Former Elis Rowing for Oxford

By JOHN FARROW

LONDON (AP) — The man who hauled Yale University to victory over Harvard looks like the man to do exactly the same for Oxford over Cambridge in Britain's rowing counterpart to the great American race.

His name: Ed Trippe, 23-year-old son of Juan Trippe, president of Pan-American Airways from New York City.

Trippe is certain of a place in Oxford eight against Cambridge in the inter-varsities race first rowed over the Tidal River Thames in London in 1829.

The others are: Duncan Sp-necer, 25 years old, a former president of Yale Boat Club. He's already rowed twice for Oxford. He's the son of a New York banker and has made his home in Ireland.

Harry Howells, aged 22, the son of Ward Howells, a New York business executive, from Darien, Conn.

William Fink, aged 22, son of Lyman Fink, also a New York businessman, who has recently moved to California.

The race over the 4¼-mile course of the Thames on April 3 demands endurance just as much as skill, determination just as much as the ability to fight the tide of the river.

Trippe reckons he exerts a 450 pounds pressure on the oar every time he pulls. It's Trippe, too, who will set Oxford's stroking rate on instructions from cox Michael Leigh.

Cambridge won the race last year and boosted its victories to 61. Oxford has won 48 with one nding in a dead heat.

Then he heard about Trippe, Howells and Fink coming to Oxford. . . and those ideas of retiring soon were sunk.

The four Americans know the Thames.

Three years ago all of them rowed in the Henley Regatta—one decided on a different stretch of the Thames to the boat race.

Trippe was in a pair-oared event and lost to the Russians. The other three were in the Yale eigth in the Grand Challenge Cup and lost to the famous Motto Guzzi crew of Italy.

Trippe, Howells and Fink would normally live in their college. But they're several years older than most freshmen and have been given senior status so they can live out.

They live together in a residential house on the outskirts of Oxford.

"After so many years as students we were in danger of becoming institutionalized," Trippe said. "Now we're enjoying looking after ourselves."

Fink seems to be the one American out of the quartet who may miss the boat race.

He's missed several outings in Oxford's No. 1 boat. But his experience still should see him through.

The crew will be picked next month.

Mrs. Streit Nabs Golf Win

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Marlene Streit of Fonthill, Ont., won the 47th annual Palm Beach Women's Golf Championship Saturday with a 4 and 3 victory over Nancy Roth of Hollywood, Fla.

Despite 30 mile winds on the 6,008-yard, par 72 Oceanside Breakers course, Mrs. Streit was only three over par for 15 holes. She played 94 holes in the tournament and finished with a total five-over-par.

National League Reduces Night Game Slate

By HAROLD HARRISON

CINCINNATI (AP) — The National League is reducing the amount of scheduled night work for its 10 teams for 1965 as compared with last year.

The 1965 schedule, announced Saturday, calls for 430 night games. Last year 438 games were scheduled but re-scheduling at night of postponed day games increased the number played to 446, an all-time high.

The program of home openers again will be a mixed-up affair.

There once was a time when four teams opened at home on the same day in alternate years—with the exception of Cincinnati, which always opens at home—and the other four teams opened at home on the same day a few days later.

Expansion of the league to 10 teams and its spread from coast to coast has changed all that, however.

All five first openers will be played on April 12 this year with Los Angeles at New York, San Francisco at Pittsburgh, St. Louis at Chicago, Milwaukee at Cincinnati and Philadelphia at Houston.

Philadelphia will have its home opener on April 14 against San Francisco. Chicago and St. Louis will be at home for the first time on April 15 with the Braves entertaining Chicago and the champion Cardinals being host to Cincinnati.

It will be April 20 before Los Angeles and San Francisco perform before home fans for the first time with Dodgers meeting New York and the Giants playing Pittsburgh.

The Houston Astros and Philadelphia Phils will be the leading night workers at home with 59 games each scheduled under the ights. Los Angeles will be close behind with 56. Cincinnati will have 55 night games, St. Louis 52, Pittsburgh 49 and Milwaukee 45.

The New York Mets will have 34 night games and San Francisco only 21. The Chicago Cubs, of course, will have no home games at night since there are no lights at Wrigley Field.

Pennant-race forecasters can have a field day studying the schedule for the last couple of weeks of the season.

In 1964, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Philadelphia and San Francisco all went into the last week or so of the season with a chance for the pennant.

If that should happen again, the schedule-makers would appear to have smiled on the Phils, who blew what looked like a sure pennant last season.

In the last two weeks of the coming season the Phils will have six games each against Chicago and New York, neither of which is expected to figure very high in the race.

St. Louis, Cincinnati and Milwaukee will play most of the last two weeks on the road with San Francisco and Los Angeles providing a big share of the opposition.

The Dodgers and the Giants will play St. Louis, Cincinnati and Milwaukee exclusively in the final two weeks.

Twenty-Five Schools Set For Relays

EAST LANSING, Mich., (AP) —A huge field, with eight different conferences represented, is promised for the 42nd annual Michigan State Relays next Saturday.

"We've attracted representatives from eight different conferences around the midwest and the mountains and plains state area," said MSU track Coach Fran Dittrich. "A number of top independents are in too, including a large group from the Air Force Academy."

At least 20 of the schools are expected to enter a dozen or more athletes.

The relays generally are considered the opener of the Midwest indoor track season. There is no team championship and coaches use the 18-event meet as a testing of their talent.

Hayes Fired; Refuses to Take Test

INGERSOLL, Ont. (AP) — "Heck," chuckled George Hayes, "I've tested my eyes for years in bars reading labels on whisky bottles. I can still do it, so who needs an eye test?"

Hayes was fired after 19 years as a National Hockey League linesman last week because he refused to take an eye test as ordered by Clarence Campbell, the league president.

"A guy is an inch offside and I can call it from 85 feet away. There's nothing wrong with my eyesight and there never has been," Hayes insisted. "Campbell is a dictator and if he doesn't like you, you've had it. I can live without the NHL."

"One time," he remembered, "I called an offside after Bob Pulford of Toronto got the puck and came in all alone on the Montreal goalie.

"We were getting ready to face-off inside the Toronto blueline and Pulford says to me, 'What's the matter, George, you had four or five beers last night and can't see too well?'

"Jean Beliveau of the Canadiens turns to me and says, 'George, that is an insult to you.' Then he turns to Pulford and says, 'He does not drink four or five bottles. He drinks the whole case.' "

Hayes, a 6-foot, 218-pounder, said there is the likelihood of a court battle over his firing.

"Imagine, 19 years with one outfit and they fire me because I won't have my eyes examined," he moaned. "There was nothing about eye tests in my contract. The only penalty I'm liable for is a fine of $100."

Hayes said his annual salary as recently as 1962 was only $2,500 with additional pay for playoff games. This was increased in 1963 to $4,000.

"Last season I made about $6,300 including bonus, playoffs and league games," Hayes said.

NHL to Discuss Plans For Possible Expansion

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Hockey League, a tight little island in the sea of recent professional sports expansion, may be ready to take that first westward step toward the lucre of television dollars.

Owners of the six NHL clubs, huddling at their annual winter meeting Tuesday, scheduled an unprecedented special conclave next month to discuss plans for possible expansion. Los Angeles and San Francisco are among the cities known to be dickering for franchises in the league, which has been geographically intact for 22 years.

"This doesn't mean we will expand in the immediate future," NHL President Clarence Campbell stated. "We will establish a firm policy and then be ready with a plan when the time to expand does come."

The league has been seeking a national television contract that would alleviate any future growing pains but the networks apparently are demanding expansion as the price for a TV package.

Campbell said the date and site of the special meeting had not been set. He said expansion bids possibly would be accepted at the owners' summer meeting in Montreal June 7-10. Current NHL franchises are in Montreal, Toronto, Boston, New York, Detroit and Chicago.

In other developments at Tuesday's meeting, the owners approved a change — aimed at helping low-placed clubs — in the player draft, required teams to have standby goaltenders dressed and on the bench during Stanley Cup playoff games, ruled out competition between NHL and amateur teams and set dates for the opening games of this year's playoffs and the 1965-66 season opener.

The sixth-place team will be permitted two draft choices and the fifth place team one, without having to drop a player from their 20-man protected lists.

The Stanley Cup semi-final series will begin on Thursday, April 1, with subsequent games on Saturdays or Sundays, Tuesdays and Thursdays through the best-of-seven final set.

The 1965-66 campaign will start Oct. 27 — two weeks later than before so as not to conflict with World Series baseball and professional football — and will wind up April 10.

LSU Cagers Slip Past Alabama Five

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Dick Maile's 24 points and some clutch free throws by Sophomore Brad Brian carried Louisiana State to a 67-64 Southeastern Conference basketball victory over Alabama Saturday.

Brian sealed the victory when he hit twice on one-and-one free throws in the last 1:20. LSU had a slim 63-62 lead when Brian sank those four points to ice the game.

Alabama clicked on 45 per cent of its field shots to LSU's 30 per cent. But the Tigers were more accurate at the free throw line, sinking 15 of 20 while Alabama made 10 of 17.

Injury, Retirement Open Derby Field

By ORLO ROBERTSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The 91st running of the Kentucky Derby still is nearly three months away but the retirement of the flashy Sadair and the injury to the 2-year-old champion Bold Lad already has the experts predicting a wide-open race when the 3-year-olds clash at Churchill Downs May 1.

Until Sadair, holder of the money-winning record for 2-year-olds with earnings of $498,217, was forced into retirement early in the week with a chipped bone in his left forefoot, the Derby shaped up as a three-horse affair involving Sadair, Bold Lad and Jacinto.

Then Bold Lad, winner of eight and second in his other two starts last year, popped a small splint on his right front leg. He was scratched from his scheduled debut as a 3-year-old in the Bahamas at Hialeah Park last Wednesday.

Meantime, Jacinto, another offspring of Bold Ruler, has the experts talking on the West Coast. William Haggin Perry's sensation wasn't among the 2-year-old leaders last year, when he raced only twice. He finished third at Saratoga in August before suffering a slight injury, then late in the season he jumped into prominence with a 10-length triumph at Aqueduct.

Since then the colt has won three straight races at Santa Anita, equaling the track record of 1:20 3-t for seven furlongs in one of them. His next start probably will be the 1-1-16 mile San Felipe Feb. 22 in which he'll be tested over a distance of ground and around two turns for the first time.

The sidelining of Sadair and Bold Lad has given owners and trainers new hope for the top winter stakes and the Triple Crown of the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes.

However, two of the colts which figure in the Derby dope sheet will not make their 3-year-old debuts until spring. They are Michael Ford's Royal Gunner and Raymond Guest's Tom Rolfe.

Tom Rolfe, who has not been out since beating Royal Gunner and Sadair in the Cowdin at Aqueduct last fall, is expected to make his debut at Laurel this spring.

Royal Gunner, considered the better of the two Ford hopefuls, is getting his prep at the St. Lucie, Fla., training track. Umbrella Fella, the speed horse of the Ford duo trained by Lloyd Gentry, also has been shipped to St. Lucie after failing in the Bahamas. Umbrella Fella is being pointed for the Flamingo.

Based on their 2-year-old performances and races this year the other top contenders for the rich stakes are Native Charger, stretch running Hail to All and Sparkling Johnny. All are at Hialeah.

Native Charger, who has not raced this year after being sidelined last fall, and Hail to All are getting close to racing edge. Native Charger worked six furlongs in 1:15 last Wednesday and Hail to All went seven furlongs in 1:29 3-5 on Thursday.

Sixth - Ranked Duke Stops West Virginia

Your Freedom Newspaper
Ever striving for the Pikes Peak Region to be an even better place to live

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is self-control, no more, no less. It must be consistent with the truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

The World's Telephones

We have been reading a handsome brochure put out by the Telephone Company in which we found many points of interest. As of January 1, 1964, the latest statistics that are available, there were 171 million telephones in use on this planet we call Earth. This is an increase of 6.1 per cent, the heaviest gain ever reported in a single year.

More than 84 million, almost half the total, of these phones are in the United States. 53.1 per cent are in North America. There are now 28 countries having more than 500,000 telephones. Hungary just passed that figure in 1963. These 28 countries have nearly doubled the combined count of their telephones in the past decade.

But Japan, with nearly 11 million and second in number only to the United States, has quadrupled her number of phones in the past ten years. India, with 684,284, has more than trebled hers in the same time. Meanwhile, countries having fewer than 500,000 phones have more than quadrupled the number of their telephones in the past decade.

There are 221 countries, places, islands, etc. listed in the brochure of which eight are marked with zeros indicating that they have no phones. Among these are Greenland and Pitcairn Island. Subtract the eight that have no phones and we have the imposing number of 213 areas on earth that make use of Alexander Graham Bell's invention in one degree or another.

And, despite the fact that 166 of these countries have telephone systems that are totally socialized and government operated, there is still a majority of 65.7% of the world's telephones that are being operated by private enterprise. Only 20 places are listed as having no government operated phones whatever. Our 50th state of Hawaii is one of these. But our own United States, the other 49, are not so listed. However, the number of government operated phones in the United States is still negligible. And, according to the report, of the 69,000 government operated phones, more than half are in our 49th state of Alaska, that leaves the 48 connecting states rather free from socialistic telephones.

The other 127 places are listed as having a mixture of privately operated and government operated phone systems. This mixture ranges from almost total government control to almost total private control, as with our own country.

Although most of the "emerging, undeveloped, underprivileged and backward" nations have government (socialized) phone systems, a few have privately operated ones.

The amazing thing is the number of civilized, "enlightened" countries that have gone over to total socialistic control of their phone systems. England, Australia and New Zealand are among these, and so is West Germany (The German Federal Republic). Canada's 6,664,000 telephones are only about 16.5 per cent government operated. Sweden's phones are totally socialized, as are all those of the communist nations and satellites.

Sweden is second to the United States in the number of phones per capita, and the United States is second to Canada in the number of telephone conversations, Sweden holds the third spot. The average Canadian uses the phone 600 times per year. We're close behind at 575 with Sweden at 450. The world average is about 70.

Pursuing the subject further, we learn that 91 per cent of the world's telephones are now automatic and that 96.8 per cent are connected with the Bell systems. It is possible now to call almost anybody anywhere anytime on the face of the earth and converse by means of Mr. Bell's wonderful gadget which, from what we read, is about to become even more wonderful.

Are We Good Neighbors?

"When you build something you ought to be a good neighbor." So says Minoru Yamasaki, noted architect. He means that you should build so as to enhance the neighborhood wherein your building stands.

This is all it would take to build and keep a city beautiful. And, strangely enough, few buildings are being erected in these times that are not built by "good neighbors." If you doubt this we challenge you to drive around the Colorado Springs metropolitan are and see for yourself. Business buildings, industrial plants and homes are being built with, if not beauty, at least handsomeness in mind.

We have been unable to spot a single smelly, unsightly glue factory in the entire area. But the zoners and planners are continually warning us about the dangers of having one move in next door if we do not allow them to do our planning for us.

But we believe the best planning is done by the property owner if and when he is allowed to proceed without bureaucratic interference. And we further believe that the Pikes Peak Region is growing more beautiful, in regards to buildings, not because of the planners and zoners, but in spite of them. Yamasaki's advice is good, but it generally isn't needed. Most builders try to be "good neighbors" in his meaning of the term. At least in and around the Springs.

Deficits by Deceit

According to reports from Washington from those who are "in the know," the government practices monumental deceit in its fiscal policies.

It tells the public one thing and does another. For instance, Johnson's proposed budget of one hundred billion for the next fiscal year is estimated to be many billions more than that, much of which never shows on the books.

But Johnson is only following in the footsteps of his illustrious predecessors, from FDR through Truman, Ike and Kennedy. It may have been going on even longer, but certainly not on so grand a scale. It was the original new dealers who decided that "you can fool all the people all the time" — and they have just about proved it. At least they have kept the majority fooled for 32 years. And, as we are growing weary of hearing, "majority rules."

The government traditionally over-estimates its income and underestimates its expenditures. We long ago learned to expect that, politicians are perennial optimists in their attitude towards the taxpayers' ability to pay up. This over and underestimating was bad enough but it could always be excused as bad judgment. But outright covering up, hiding the truth or sweeping it under the rug was something that was inaugurated by the new dealers, leftwingers and socialists who have been in the saddle for more than 30 years.

The government now not only hides the truth about fiscal matters, it also manages news. Ask any Washington newsman who is on the scene and who is really trying to screen the truth from the political hogwash.

There is another word for politics, it is chicanery.

Wit and Whimsy

A congressman, making a tour of the trouble spots in the Far East, ran into a correspondent in Tokyo, who suggested dinner at the most expensive spot in town. At the end of the meal, the correspondent summoned the waiter and, struggling over every syllable, spoke to him in Japanese.

Congressman (kiddingly): "Is that all the Japanese you've learned in seven months?"

Correspondent: "It's enough. I told him to give you the check."

The Local Scene

Close to Home

By RUFUS L. PORTER

We have been reading with great displeasure about the successful attempts of the commuters in the big eastern cities to get the taxpayers to help defray their traveling expenses. After several years of protesting against any raises in fares in the face of enormous losses by the railroads that operate the trains and, we are forced to admit, after considerable lobbying on the part of some of the roads, Johnson had a bill pushed through Congress last fall to subsidize the railroads. After all, a lot of commuters means a lot of votes.

The railroads gave up trying to win fair play from either the government or its customers and went in for lobbying in Congress. They learned that this is the way to get things done, and now they will, no doubt, do some more of it. But they had better be wary. The unions are already demanding that the railroads be nationalized, and accepting government subsidies is the first long step in that direction.

But all that was way back east, with minor echoes from the west coast. Seattle is crying for government subsidies and San Francisco and Los Angeles won't be far behind. The state of Washington has already, some years ago, "nationalized" (stateized at least) — taken over, in plain English, all the ferry business in the state, which is considerable. It all started with the Bremerton-Seattle ferry during World War Two. The ferry company was not allowed to raise the fares although all the shipyard workers "never had it so good" until Roosevelt's war. They petitioned the state house and the state took over the ferry, running a huge annual deficit which is paid by those who live east of the Cascade range and seldom see a ferry.

Not satisfied with that, the politicians figured they could lose money faster if the state owned every one of the ferries. This brings in the votes from the most populace western end of state and the easterners have to pay their proportionate "share" of the westerners' ferry fares, including the tourists.

But that is way out West, the other is way back east. It can't happen here in our own conservative-minded Colorado. It can't, eh? Well, it has. The Colorado Public Utilities Commission has just voted 2-1 not to let the bus companies increase fares in Colorado. If the companies were making sufficient profit they wouldn't ask for increases. But that doesn't faze the PUC.

The bus companies were turned down because so many commuters in the Denver area protested to the commission that fares were too high already. Raises in bus and railroad fares usually run about ten years behind salary and wage increases of the commuters. The next step will be for the bus lines to threaten to stop service. Then a great howl will go up from the commuters and the state will subsidize the buses and each and every one of us will be paying the fares of commuters between Denver and Boulder and other points. We won't like that because we are already paying the fares of millions of commuters in the New York, Philadelphia and Chicago areas.

But that isn't all. We have heard the cry more than once in Colorado Springs. Everytime the local transit company has had to increase fares to keep alive hundreds of citizens, most of whom never ride a bus unless their car is in the repair shop, stood up and hollered for the city to take over the bus company and run it right, meaning run a deficit instead of increasing fares. Let the old and the halt and the blind and all those who never ride the bus help pay the fares of those who do.

If the people want the buses and railroads to stay in business, they should either patronize them more or allow them to raise the fares high enough to make them profitable enterprises.

Not long ago the Colorado PUC graciously allowed the Denver and Rio Grande Western railroad to close down one part of a non profitable passenger run, but it made them keep another part running trains on schedule, but at a loss. Hundreds of people (voters), who hadn't been on a passenger train since childhood, petitioned the commission to keep the train running. They said it would "look awful" if that old non-payload train didn't roll by their place on daily schedule. But when they go anywhere they go by car, or fly — "that's the only way to travel."

It should be, the aircraft industry has been subsidized by the government from the start. The various branches of government vie with each other in building multi-million dollar airports. The federal government subsidizes the manufacturers of planes and the big airline companies. And the railroads, the heaviest taxed industry in the nation, have to help pay to keep their competition in business. This includes the buses and trucks that have their road beds built by the government.

The Congo Aftermath: An Inhuman Cynical Affair!

From The Iron Age

If ever we want to see man's inhumanity to man, look to the Congo affair. For the moment pass over the massacre.

More inhuman and cynical has been the continual harassment of Belgium and the United States. And by whom? By civilized peoples — Russian, Arabs, Chinese Reds and others.

The Belgians and Americans were on an act of mercy to save people surely tabbed for death, some in a most horrible manner. The Congolese government asked these two Western nations to come to the rescue of those in the rebel area.

No one who has not become bereft of his senses — humaneness, justice, and compassion — could possibly censure the action. Yet we have had to stand the horrible and cynical spectacle of a United Nations debate.

A few African nations defended our actions. But to think a defense at the podium of a so-called world body should be necessary is enough to cause wonder if there has been human progression.

The butchering of missionaries, priests, nuns, businessmen, women and children is indefensible from any standpoint. One may see how uncivilized tribesmen would do such things. But understanding it is something else.

Understanding the Arab, Russian, and Red Chinese attack on Belgium and the United States is not within the realm of civilized possibility. Maybe it serves one purpose — that of being prepared for the worst from the Arabs and communists — while we attempt to prevent a nuclear holocaust and total destruction of the world.

Of course we must deal with Nasser's Arab nations. Of course we must strive for a cold, but beneficial, co-existence with Russia and later Red China. We must do this even though we go two steps backward many times after a faltering half-step forward. But we can't be naive — any more than we can slam our door shut and become an isolated America.

We must keep open the door for negotiations and actions to ease the uneasy peace. Yet, at the same time, we have to keep armed to the teeth with the most forward, most up-to-date machines and techniques of destruction.

To believe this is not to be cynical — it is the voice of common sense and self-preservation. We may be unable to get across to the world that we do things for mercy and love. But we know this ourselves. So why waste our breath trying to prove it to those who wouldn't believe it — even if the Lord sent a messenger from Heaven to proclaim it?

No matter what we do in the way of trade, peace moves, or understanding, Communism is out to destroy us. We must prevent this while we strive to remain a world leader for all that is decent and dignified. For individuals everywhere, there is no other answer.

BOYS RANCH

To the Editor:

The following letter was recently sent to the local representative of a philanthropic foundation as the basis for said foundation's consideration of help to the Colorado Boys' Ranch. It sets forth so admirably the urgent and continuing need for such an institution that this writer feels its widespread communication through your pages will alert many hitherto uninformed to become eager participants in its support and development. Such persons should kindly contact Mr. Re Voe Hill, the director, directly at La Junta with your donations. I also beg, church, lodge, club and other groups concerned with the needs of our many dependent youth to add Colorado Boys Ranch in their financial help.

THEODORE FISHER
P. O. Box 146

Dear Mr.——— :

A mutual friend has advised me of your interest in Colorado Boys Ranch, so I will try and supply some information that, hopefully, will stimulate your interest even more.

We are a new organization, our first boy came to Colorado Boys Ranch in May, 1961. The County Judge's Association, of which our judge was president, recognized the need for a facility such as ours. In cases every day, they had boys brought before them who actually did not belong in a correctional institution. But rather they needed a place where they would receive attention and supervision, which quite probably, would keep them from ever having to face a correctional institution. Colorado had nothing like this to offer.

Our Board of Directors, local and state businessmen, began to explore the possibilities of a Boys Ranch in this area. The only site available to them was a housing development built during World War II, to accommodate service personnel stationed at La Junta Air Base. These were cinder block buildings that had been allowed to become run-down and ramshackle, and thus, gave the appearance of a small scale ghost town. Regardless of the apparent pitfalls, there was a definite need, and the only way to meet this need, was to grab the bull by the horns.

After much planning and deliberation, the old ghost town began to awaken to the sounds of hammer and saw. Caught up in the enthusiasm generated by the men who were undertaking this project, local and community merchants and businessmen rallied and Colorado Boys Ranch was launched. Cottage Number I was cleaned up and renovated, a usable kitchen and laundry were put together, and slowly, but surely, the primitive ghost town began to take shape as a thriving community, populated with very young male citizens.

Now, almost four years later, our population numbers 26, with an additional ten boys expected very shortly. We have two more cottages (the latest one just recently opened), and great plans for the future.

Our aim was to provide a home for Colorado's little boys with big problems. Hopefully, we are doing this, but the 26 boys living here is such a small percentage of the boys who face entering some sort of penal institution. Another cottage would allow the room for 12 more boys, etc. etc. The only possible way to maintain this Boys' Ranch is through the generosity of wonderful friends across the state. We are non-profit, charitable, and qualify for no funds from state or federal agencies. Nor, do we receive assistance from fund raising agencies such as United Fund or Community Chest.

We have so many areas here that need attention. There is still much, much cleaning up to do, of these old buildings. In fact, we have so many really necessary projects to undertake and complete, one hardly knows where to begin. There are never enough funds to actually cover the necessities. But, no boy needs Colorado Boys Ranch because of a financial situation. We are here to help these boys, regardless of their race, religion, or creed, and finances do not enter into the consideration of their acceptance.

Perhaps I have expounded too long and too loudly, but this program is very dear to my heart. Colorado Boys Ranch belongs to the boys of Colorado, and to the people in Colorado who have unselfishly shared in our being able to keep the big welcome sign lit for these boys. With the continued interest and support of these wonderful Coloradoans, many, many more little boys with big problems will have a home provided for them. "Every boy who goes to a reform school in Colorado goes there with our permission unless we do all in our power to prevent it."

Thank you for letting me bend your ear, and if you would like further information, I would be most happy to supply same. I would like to extend a warm invitation to you to visit with us at the ranch any time.

SIX MISTAKES

To the Editor:

The Roman philosopher and statesman, Cicero, said it 2,000 years ago, and it's still true today. The "six mistakes of man" are:

1. The delusion that individual advancement is made by crushing others;
2. The tendency to worry about things that cannot be changed or corrected;
3. Insisting that a thing is impossible because we cannot accomplish it;
4. Refusing to set aside trivial preferences;
5. Neglecting development and refinement of the mind, and not acquiring the habit of reading and study;
6. Attempting to compel other persons to believe and live as we do.

Isn't number six the philosophy of the present politician?

FRED A. LANDER
514 N. WAHSATCH

Editor's note: Reader Lander is correct in assuming that Cicero's "mistake number six" is the philosophy of the present day politicians — or of any and all politician's of the past. It is also, alas, the philosophy of far too many of us who are not politicians.

ANSWERS WANTED

To the Editor:

Before going into the text of the reason for writing this letter, I should identify myself — my name is Stanley L. Gibbs, I'm 38 years old and am an electrician and have been since around 1944. I've never failed to pass a journeyman's examination until I took this city's and Denver's.

Having taken my credentials to the electrical board and shown them by documented evidence that I was qualified to take the Colorado State examination to prove conclusively to the state that I was qualified to work in the State of Colorado.

Of several cities in the state, there are at least three who refuse to accept the state examination and license as proof of my qualifications. Colorado Springs being one of them. The only recognition they give the license is that I must have a valid one before I can take the city examination. This is but one of their prerequisites; another is that a fee of $10.00 be paid before examination, then another $5.00 if examination is passed. The $10.00 is never refundable. After all this, a 30 day "observation of work" is required before a license is issued.

My quarrel is not with the city's requirement of a fee for a license or work permit, nor do I quarrel with the city's requirement that an individual submit proof of his qualifications in his trade or profession. Rather, my protest is that there are only five (5) trades or professions that are required to be examined by the city even though they may already have been examined by the state.

Barbers, cosmetologists, lawyers, doctors, dentists, veterinarians engineers and many more are required by state law to show documented evidence of qualifications then are examined to prove conclusively that they are qualified to practice their trade or profession.

These people are not required by the city of Colorado Springs to prove their qualifications except to produce a state license. They are not even required to pay a fee for a permit or license. Yet there are 5 of us who are not only required to pay a fee but are required to be examined even after the state examination.

If an individual that is allowed by law to treat my health an individual who is allowed by law to affect my wellbeing in society is not required by the city of Colorado Springs to prove they are qualified through city examination, then why are only five of the trades and professions required to do so?

In my opinion, the city of Colorado Springs, by making these demands on only 5 trades is directly and knowingly violating the provisions of the recently passed anti-discrimination law of the Federal Government, and who knows what other state or federal statutes.

If the Gazette Telegraph feels there is an issue strong enough here to warrant publishing this letter, support might be forthcoming. For if support does not come, then I'll find it rather difficult to find employment in my trade.

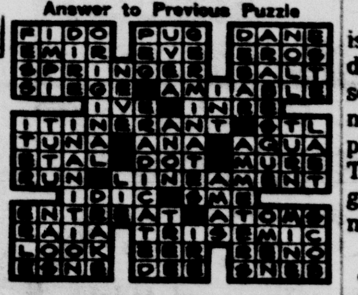
Answer to Previous Puzzle



The Irresponsibilies

By GEORGE BOARDMAN

On more than one previous occasion, I have specifically stated my total disapproval of the blatant authority without responsibility which is government. Do you doubt the accuracy of my statement?

Then, if you will, find ways and means to make each member of the government which bankrupts the government and the people of this country responsible for the repayment of this gigantic debt. At no time have I ever sanctioned the right of anybody to steal from me for the purpose of supporting foreign governments and when such actions have been undertaken under a variety of disguises, promises and political hog wash, those who did so undertake to act have blithely ignored the folly of their undertakings and their own promises of all the good things to come and yet there are those who insist that I should regard such people as good and honest and respectable men. I find any such hypocrisy just that.

Thinking about hypocrisy just the other day, I was reminded of those who bleated their resentment at what they called the secret membership of a society which has been frequently in the news.

The very persons who so denounced secrecy were elected by a huge and secret society called the electorate and not one elected official can name one of those persons who may have voted in his or her favor. This secret electorate is completely irresponsible for what ever action may be taken by those they elected to rule over me, in secret.

If human beings want rulers, why should they be ashamed of their selections? Why should they vote in secret? Why should I not know the name of every man or woman who secretly voted for a ruler for me? Why am I not permitted to know them, so that I may ask, WHY DID YOU DO THIS TO ME and to my children and my grandchildren?

Must voters be protected from those for whom they do not vote? Must they be protected from those for whom they do vote? Why all this secrecy? Why all the idle conversation about those elected openly in open elections where secrecy is the rule.

Why should I be prohibited from knowing the names of every man and woman who voted for the legislators who enacted the withholding tax law as a "war time economy measure"? Why should dark secrecy protect the names of those who vote to enslave me, the names of those who vote for rulers who prohibit me from owning property, in fact?

Isn't it obvious that secret ballots are provided to protect somebody from somebody else? Then where is the protection which is supposedly provided by those who are elected?

If I were so foolish as to organize a secret society, I might be roundly denounced by those who have been elected in secret by a vast secret society of some millions of voters — the electorate. Am I now denouncing some great and sacred institution, the secret ballot?

But I am not denouncing. I am suggesting only that you may find it profitable and wise to think, that you may wish to examine the secret ballot, applauded by those who are critical of a secret club or group or society.

I hope you will not confuse secrecy with privacy. The secret ballot sanctions actions which invade my privacy. My privacy does not sanction the invasion of your privacy.

For myself, I believe the secret ballot is neither sacred or honest and I wonder now how many would vote if they were required to sign their ballots, to take an open stand for the rulers they select?

I will not quarrel with any man who tells me he intends to vote for some specific candidate. I do not approve of his sanction of the system but I have the right to approve or disapprove if he forces his selection upon me. But, then, does he, in fact, vote as promised? The secret ballot protects him, prevents me from knowing, while his actions affect every facet of my life.

Perhaps you will agree that the very thought of a secret ballot needs to be re-examined. Possibly you want to continue to vote in secret. BUT WHY?

Good luck and good health to you, in Freedom.

Question Box

(We invite questions on economics and the proper functions of government which will not injure anyone.)

Question No. 648: "Destructive criticism helps no one. Constructive criticism builds a strong country. The braying jackass tells me all the faults, but has offered no means of how to solve them. What would you do if you had the power to correct our problems? This is what we need to know."

Answer: If we had the power to correct all problems by political action, we would resign. No one should have that much power. The answer is not original with us, but was credited to Ludwig von Mises, one of the top economists in the world today.

Some may condemn a statement criticizing what is considered an immoral act as "destructive." But if one objects to murder or robbery, is that destructive? Nearly all of the Ten Commandments are negative, but would one say they were destructive? The Bill of Rights includes negative statements of prohibition against those in government. Would they be considered destructive?

A great deal of the strife of today comes from attempting to solve human problems with some form of political action. Different groups want to get their own "good men" in office so they can get laws adopted to compel people to do what the members of the groups believe is best. They are not content to try to persuade themselves first, and others later, that the way to solve human problems begins and continues with individual self-control and self-responsibility.

William Graham Sumner, who was professor of political science at Yale from 1872 to 1909, in "What Social Classes Owe to Each Other," wrote the following:

"To mind one's own business is a purely negative and unproductive injunction, but, taking social matters as they are just now, it is a sociological principle of the first importance. There might be developed a grand philosophy on the basis of minding one's own business."

Questions are limited to general human relations questions that will improve the well-being of all mankind on this earth.

ANITA GAMES

By Betty Shaw

Harrison held its annual variety show on January 21, in the Harrison Gym. This years' show was termed 'the best ever." The program provided a wide range of entertainment and went off very smoothly with the "Pall Bearers" as highlights of the show.

The Harrison Ski Club planned a trip to Breckenridge today. They chartered a bus and it will leave Harrison at 7:00 a.m. The club will spend the day skiing and will return home at 7:00 p.m. This was the first trip of the club.

Harrison's Student Council is revising the school constitution and bringing the handbook up to date.

The area drained by the Congo River was practically unknown until the middle of the 19th century. King Leopold II of the Belgians was the first to recognize the region's potential and order extensive exploration.

Looking at Hollywood

By HEDDA HOPPER

© 1964: By the Chicago Tribune

FILM WRITER HAL KANTER GIVES PINION OF STARS

HOLLYWOOD — Today we examine the writer the rarest and least praised of the Hollywood breeds. For 30 years Hal Kanter has made good putting words in actors' mouths. The first time he heard one of his jokes get a laugh he gave up the idea of becoming a veterinarian "I like the immediate response good or bad" he says. "At least I know where I stand."

From the Joe Penner days of radio to his own TV series Valentine's Day through 25 movie scripts Kanter has survived in a treacherous calling. In the ancient days it was the court jester who got his head chopped off if he didn't make the king laugh. In the high pressure business of radio and TV the jester turned the ax on the comedy writer and many heads have rolled. But Hal's is still firmly on topped by a shock of wacy hair. He looks more like a tall pixie than an established institution. He's written for Danny Kaye, Amos and Andy, Bing Crosby, Ed Wynn, George Gobel. His movie credits go from Bob Hope's "My Favorite Spy" to "Dear Brigitte" Jimmy Stewart's latest with B. Bardot.

During that hectic career Hal married Doris Prouder (an editor of Parents magazine and to of Parents magazine and now has three teen-age daughters Lisa, Donna, and Abigail, who sometimes don't think he's funny. A friend of Donna's phoned the house to ask if she was home from Berkeley for the holidays. Kanter answered, "I think so — there's a familiar looking girl outside picketing the house."

Hal was under contract to Paramount for years and had a time convincing the studio he should direct "They had a unique excuse. They said they couldn't afford to let me direct a big picture. I'd have to start with a little one. And I was too expensive to write a little picture."

Now he's his own boss on Valentine's Day and likes it with one exception "I don't have time to get out and talk to people across the country and find out what they're thinking. One summer I drove 7500 miles around America with my wife and children. We took our time stopped and talked with the people. Excitement about TV was at a high pitch here but the guy in Keokuk couldn't have cared less. He was concerned about his crops. The only way I can gauge what the public thinks now is to read the mail. Today was the first time I've been down in this part of Hollywood for a long time. I parked my car a block or so from your office and as I came down the street I noticed it's difficult to tell the men from the girls with the long hair and tight pants. This is the era of the slob."

And what does Hal think of some of the stars he's worked with: Elvis Presley: "I did two pictures for him. He's a hard worker. His mind is uncluttered with nonsense about the Method. He knows he has to do certain things and is capable of doing them. I'm sold on him. He's growing. When some kids who are hot today are gone he'll still be around. He's an authentic first of his kind."

Bing Crosby "I'd have to rate him the all-around most interesting. He's a gentleman, he reads, is intelligent, and has a marvelous wit. As someone said — he's the essence of American style."

Helen Traubel "I use her on the series when I can get her. She's wonderful on the set. Grips, electricians, wardrobe people all love her. She jokes with them but remains a lady throughout. It's refreshing to see one after watching so many tramps bounce in and out."

Ken Boyer of the St. Louis Cardinals, this year's National League's most valuable player, batted .264 in his first season with the club in 1955.

COLD CLOSES CHURCH

PAPWORTH ST. AGNES, England (UPI)—The 13th century village church here has closed until Easter because it is too cold inside and hardly anyone has been attending services. The vicar, the Rev. W. D. Galdsworthy, said he was advised not to light the boiler, which has not been used in 17 years, because it might blow up.

Viet Nam Veterans Honored at Carson

Four members of the 5th Aviation Battalion at Fort Carson received medals recently for their performance of duty in Viet Nam. They were CWO Lavern H. Michal, CWO Carl J. Crow, SFC Charles W. McCarty and Sp5, Gary L. Cole.

Michal received the Distinguished Flying Cross for his aerial reconnaissance on Jan. 24, 1965. While providing aerial reconnaissance for a Vietnamese ground force when Viet Cong fired at his helicopter, his citation reads.

In spite of his wounds and damage to his helicopter, he volunteered to locate enemy emplacements and was successful in directing his team leader's fire to the target.

Crow received the Army Commendation Medal with V device, for valor, recognizing his evacuation of wounded troops. Under heavy fire, he helped to navigate a UH-1B 'copter onto a hastily-built landing zone.

Crow also received the fifth cluster to his Air Medal for active part in at least 25 combat operational or aerial reconnaissance missions in the combat zone.

Army Commendation Medals were awarded to McCarty and Cole for their outstanding professional competence and devotion to duty in the Republic of Viet Nam.

The citations read, in part:

"The loyalty, initiative and will to succeed that they demonstrated at all times materially contributed to the successful accomplishmen of their mission.

Clergymen Plan Meeting on Alcoholism

There will be a symposium Feb. 23 in Denver on alcoholism, for clergymen of all faiths.

The symposium is sponsored by the El Paso County Council on Alcoholism, a United Fund Agency.

It will be 8:30 a.m. 4:30 p.m. in Humphrey's Post Graduate Center, Denison Auditorium, University of Colorado School of Medicine, 4200 E. 9th Ave.

This conference is designed primarily to acquaint the clergy with some of the aspects of counseling with the alcoholic and his family.

The featured speaker, The Reverend Howard J. Clinebell, Jr., Ph.D., of the Southern California School of Theology, will be brought to Denver by the Colorado State Department of Public Health, Alcoholism Division, who is sponsoring the symposium..

Dr. Clinebell's book, "Understanding and Counseling the Alcoholic" was appraised by Dr. Selden D. Bacon, Yale University Center of Alcohol Studies (Now at Rutgers University). "It is without question the best book on this phase of Alcoholism yet to appear and is one of the best books on alcoholism in general which has been published in a decade. It was written for the person who is conforonted with the practical issues in counseling alcoholics, or in dealing with the resources of Christian faith to the problem. Ministers, family counselors, teachers of adult Sunday School Classes and all other Christians who recognize the growing seriousness of the problem have utilized the comprehensive, readable study of sickness of alcoholism," he said. Registration (no fee).

Clergy of the Pikes Peak Region will receive invitations to this conference. Should any clergy wish further information, they may contact the local Alcoholism Information Center in the Out West Building.

Delaware is represented by only one congressman. The state has only three counties.

Assembly Faces Decisions on Junior Colleges

By KEN ROBISON

DENVER (AP)—The question of whether a junior college emphasizing vocational and technical training, or a four-year college should be established in Denver has emerged as one of the major decisions to be made by the General Assembly.

Rep. Richard Gebhardt, D-Boulder, said he believes a debate in the House Appropriations Committee Friday opened the question to full legislative debate.

Gebhardt said the committee should delay action until it was determined what form the school would take. But Rep. Star B. Caywood, D-Walsenburg, the chairman, said the decision can be made on the floor of the House.

Gebhardt said he would conduct no hearings on the bill. Two regents of the University of Colorado, Richard Bernick, Denver, and Daniel F. Lynch, Boulder, had asked for a full hearing so they could testify against the bill.

Gebhardt said a study showed that $60,000 male workers will be needed in the Denver area in the next ten years. He said 55,000 will need vocational and technical education, and only 25,000 a college education.

He said plans for Metropolitan State College provide for giving only 25 per cent of its resources to technical training, some of it on a contract basis through the Denver Opportunity School.

Gebhardt said both a vocational and technical school and an academic institution are needed, but both can't be implemented at once.

Rep. John R. Mackie, R-Longmont, a member of the legislative task force whose study led to the law passed in 1963 authorizing a Denver college, said the primary need is for a junior college, with vocational and technical training.

Mackie said the 1963 law is broad enough to permit the General Assembly to decide in this session on either a vocational and technical school, or a four-year college.

"I personally think we will eventually have a four year institution in this area by 1975, a third university," said Mackie.

Mackie said a study showed that only 15 per cent of students in Colorado's present junior colleges are in vocational and technical programs. He said the reason is that the smaller communities lack jobs that require such training.

But he said the jobs exist in the Denver area.

Mackie also said that a four-year college and vocational and technical training are difficult to combine, because the tendency is for the academic people to take over. He said he expects that to happen at Southern Colorado State College in Pueblo.

Mackie said the Legislature has to establish a junior college in Denver, because it won't be established by normal procedure locally. The Denver School Board won't support it, he said, and Denver would have to pay the cost of a school that would attract many students from nearby urban areas.

Ear Problems Explained To Pikes Peak Sertomans

"More than two times as many people suffer from hearing loss or from heart disease, cancer, polio, tuberculosis and blindness combined," said Dr. James Carris Thursday. "Eighteen million people in this country have a significant hearing loss, and three million of these are under five years old," he added.

Dr. Carris was speaker at a meeting of the Pikes Peak Sertoma Club in the Swiss Chalet. The meeting was to launch a local program of information into the causes and treatment of deafness.

Less than two per cent of funds contributed for the handicapped go to aid deafness research, said Dr. Carris.

In 1958, he continued, the Deafness Research Foundation was formed to solicit and distribute funds. It is the only national organization promoting deafness research.

In 1960 the Temporal Bone Banks Program was luanched by the Deafness Research Foundation. About 30 laboratories and four Temporal Bone Banks Centers throughout the nation now study the temporal bones of persons who have had ear disorders. The inner bones of the ear cannot be examined during life, but if they are donated after death to the program, together with medical and hearing histories, a significant contribution to deafness research can be made, said Dr. Carns. The Sertoma Clubs chose speech and hearing for national sponsorship in June, 1963, said Dr. Louis Kennedy.

"There have been many significant findings already," said Dr. Carris. There have been a distinct improvement in surgical technique, and improvements in restoration where there is a congenital obstruction of the canal. The nature of hearing losses caused by mumps and measles have been investigated. Loss of equilibrium, dizziness and head noises have also been studied.

"There are two basic kinds of hearing loss: the obstructive or conductive, where there is a mechanical impediment of the transmission of sound energy; and the perceptive or sensory neural loss, where there is nerve damage."

"Treatment is much easier for obstructive loss," said the speaker. Examples of this type include blockage with wax or with a foreign object; fluid or scarring in the middle ear; congenital changes in the middle or external ear; and otosclerosis, a condition where the foot plate of the stapes or stirrup bone is fixed so that it cannot vibrate.

Perceptive or nerve damage may take the form of injury to the nerve endings, the hearing nerve, or the pathways to the brain centers. Deterioration in the inner ear, and consequent loss of the higher tones, often occurs in older people. Causes other than age include: exposure to loud or sustained noise or concussive noises (a concern to industry); severe head injuries; and toxic effects of such drugs as quinine, salicilate, aspirin, and streptomycin. Other causes may be mumps or measles damage, circulatory changes, and, rarely, tumors.

Hearing losses of the conductive or obstructive type can usually be treated, said Dr. Carris. There has been great progress in ear surgery since the end of World War II, he said. Types include the reconstruction of chronicaly perforated eardrums; and, after eradication of infection in the middle ear, the reconstruction of the sound conduction mechanism with devices usually made of plastic and stainless steel. In the stapedectomy, the stirrup is replaced with plastic or stainless steel and Teflon.

"We know much more now than 10 years ago. . .about the cause, treatment, and means of ear disorders," aid Dr. Cartion in education of the public, bequests of the needed bones by persons with ear disorders to the Temporal Bone Banks Program.

"There is no expense involved, and it does not affect cosmetic appearance," said Dr. Louis Kennedy, program chairman of the day, and chairman of the Sertoma committee for local sponsorship of the program, who introduced the speaker.

Ed Hakes encouraged club participation. "We have taken it on now, and let's give it our all," said Ralph F. Nanninga, club president, who was in charge of the meeting.

Ex - Asst. Attorney General Indicted

DENVER (AP)—Former Colorado assistant attorney general Robert Newton Trunk of Denver was indicted by a U.S. grand jury Friday on charges of making false statements to secure FHA insured loans.

Trunk, 36, is accused of failing to make good on promised improvements he used to obtain eight loans totaling about $20,000.

Also charged by the jury were a former Ft. Morgan restaurant operator Myrl R. Brown, 39, and his wife. They allegedly attempted to evade federal income taxes totaling approximately $6,600.

Two Idaho men — 36-year-old Robert Dahle Sparrow of Preston and 34-year-old Edward Eugene Whitworth of South Pocatello—were indicted on charges of securities and mail fraud.

The pair allegedly published pamphletes containing false information about securities offered by several organizations the two men formed.

These organizations were falsely imputed to be the owners of trailer parks in Colorado Springs, Phoenix, Las Vegas, and Pocatello, Idaho.

Cross Set Aflame In Miami, Fla. Area

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—An eight-foot, kerosene-soaked cross was set aflame Friday night in front of a Negro teacher's home, police said.

Investigators arrived as the cross flickered out near the home of Arthur Coverson. The house lies in a fringe area between whites and Negroes where some homes, on acre-size plots, are priced up to $35,000.

Mrs. Coverson also teaches at a high school where their son, Arthur, was named to the all-city football team.

It was the first reported cross-burning against a Negro family in Dade County since 1959, when neighborhoods began racial mixing.

Losses in the retail field from theft, fraud and internal manipulation of records exceed a billion dollars a year, according to H. S. Crowe, manager of the Criminal Division of the William J. Burns Detective Agency.

Nikita's Son-in-Law Loses Honorary Posts

MOSCOW (AP) — Alexei Adzhubei, Nikita Khrushchev's son-in-law and onetime editor of the government newspaper Izvestia, lost his final honorary post, Tass reported Friday in Moscow.

The official Soviet news agency said Adzhubei was relieved of his duties as secretary of the board of the Union of Journalists of the U.S.S.R.

every thoughtful man must ask himself these questions . . .

If my wife and I are killed in the same accident, how will our property be handled for our children? By whom?

Should I arrange, in my will, to pay for the education of my children?

Does my gifted (or handicapped) child require special provisions?

Will my heirs waste their inheritance?

Can I provide an income for my elderly parents, yet not deprive my wife or children of their inheritance?

How can I minimize death taxes?

Can I relieve my family of the burden of protecting, investing or managing the property I leave for their use?

Barbara Thomas Will Direct Women's Chorus

The Colorado Springs Women's Chorus, one of the Pikes Peak Region's oldest and most distinctive musical organizations, was reorganized on Feb. 1 and is planning its future programs, based on the intention of "Singing for Fun."

The new director of the chorus is Barbara Thomas, well-known singer and choral director. Mrs. Thomas is also director of the East Methodist Church choirs and is heard regularly in many local musical events and as a performer with the Theater Singers and the Opera Association. She is a graduate of the University of New Mexico, with a B. A. in music education and has earned an M. A. degree from Colorado College.

Believing that some instruction in the reading of music will make the chorus of greater value to many prospective members, plans have been made for a regular course in sight-reading to be given briefly at the beginning of the meetings for those who desire it.

The large library of music, which has been in the custody of Mrs. Hugh Teason, will reduce operating expenses to a minimum. It is anticipated that the chief activites of the chorus will be singing worthwhile music for enjoyment and charitable community service. Women of any age who are interested are welcome to join at any regular meeting.

The Colorado Springs Women's Chorus began in 1931 as the Ladies' Chorus. It had as its director the late Annie Edwards, who was in charge for the rest of her life. Like a number of the other charter members, Mrs. Edwards was Welsh and she brought to the chorus its tradition of melody and good fellowship. Later directors have included Reuel Lahmer, Max Lanner, Charles Warner, and Howard Smith, of the Colorado College Music Faculty.

During the nearly thirty years of activity, the chorus performed for many civic and charitable institutions and for programs of all the seasons, locally and in Denver and elsewhere in the state. One of its first major performances was for the opening of the Colorado Springs Fine Arts Center, in 1936, when the chorus gave the cantata "Mon-Dah-Min" by Paul Bliss, based on an American Indian legend. It was the annual custom of the chorus to give a spring benefit concert.

The second meeting of the chorus will be at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, in All Souls Unitarian Church, 730 N. Tejon, St. at which time a regular meeting time and place will be decided.

State Music Festival To Be Held Here April 3

The monthly meeting of the Colorado Springs Junior Music Club will be held at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, in the Music Room of the Fine Arts Center. All members are urged to attend since there will be a discussion and the formation of committees for the preparation of the Colorado Federation of Junior Music Clubs Festival to be held at the Cheyenne Mountain High School on Saturday, April 3. This is an honor for the Colorado Springs Junior Music Club to host this event and it is hoped that all members will participate in the Festival.

Theta Sigma Phi's Will Have Travel Program

Pikes Peak Area members of Theta Sigma Phi, national professional organization for women in journalism and communications, will be guests in the home of Mrs. George R. Lum, 601 N. 30th St., at 8 p.m. Wednesday. Mrs. Gladys H. Carlson will be the assisting hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. George M. Price of Manitou Springs, will present talks and slides of their visit to Australia and to the South Sea Isles. They were guests in Australia of their son, Richard Marcus Price, who has gained renown for his research and discoveries in the field of astronomy and science while in Australia.

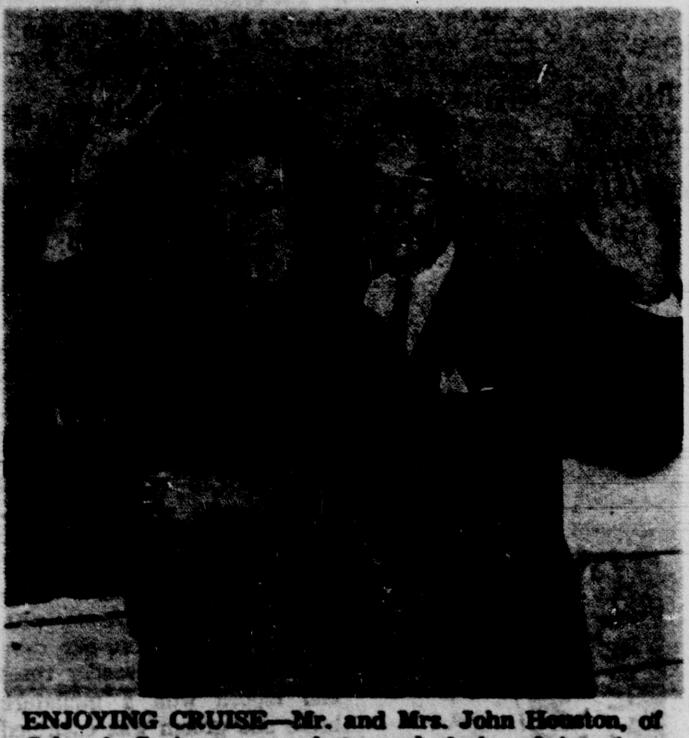
Marcus Price, when graduating from Manitou Springs High School, received a Boettcher Scholarship. He attended Colorado State College, the first college in the state to have a reactor, an atomic project. He received his Bachelor of Science in Physics in 1961, when he received a Fulbright Scholarship. He then went to Australia to do research. He worked at the University of Sydney and at National University at Canberra. With Bryan Cooper, a research officer, he discovered the first radiation or magnetic field in outer space. They used a radio telescope built half by Ford and Carnegie foundations and half by the Commonwealth Industrial and Research Organization in Australia. Australia then gave Price a scholarship for further research. He is working under a National Science Foundation Scholarship. He discovered a constellation near Centaurus A, which is 20-million light years from the Earth. Price also designed tracking equipment, and works at a tracking system, Womera, in Australia, one of the tracking stations for the United States.

Price will earn his Ph.D. degree in July, after which he will return to the United States to serve his military requirements before doing further scientific research.

Theta Sigma Phi members at their last meeting heard a talk by Inez Hunt, who, with Wanetta Draper of Colorado Springs, had recently had published, "Lightning in His Hand, The Life Story of Nikola Tesla." Mrs. Hunt told of research done to obtain data about Tesla, American inventor, who was born in Yugoslavia and came to the U.S. in 1884. In Tesla laboratory in New York he devoted himself to electrical work and made himself well-known by his many practical inventions and briliant suggestions in the fields of electrical science. His researches in electrical oscillation practically created a new kind of electrical investigation.

The book, "Lightning in His Hand, the Life Story of Nikola Tesla," has drawn notices from throughout the nation. The book is especially interesting because the authors deal with Tesla, the man, rather than with a dry history of statistics. As they explain, the scientist has written of the material achievements of Nikola Tesla. The biographer has dealt with the vital statistics of his life. The occultist has related this man's prophecies to his own mysticism. The journalist has often played up the sensational aspects of Telsa's career. Full understanding, however, involves the combining of the many facets which compose the personality of this strange genius of electricity.

An invitation is issued to all members of Theta Sigma Phi in the Pikes Peak Region, whether residents or guests. Those wishing to attend may reach the hostess by calling 633-0565.



ENJOYING CRUISE—Mr. and Mrs. John Houston, of Colorado Springs, were photographed aboard American President Lines SS President Monroe just before the ship's recent departure from San Francisco. From San Francisco, the itinerary of the President Monroe includes the ports of Honolulu, Yokohama, Hong Kong, Singapore, Penang, Saigon, Cochin, Bombay, Karachi, Suez, Port Said, Alexandria, Naples Marseille, Genoa, Leghorn, then from New York to Cristobal, Balboa, Acapulco and home to San Francisco.

Miss Reid teaches at Widefield Elementary School, District 3. Mr. Halsey is stationed at Ft. Carson. The wedding will take place in early summer, at the Southgate Church of the Nazarene.

MURRAY DRUG STORE CUSTOMERS TO GET POSITIVE PROOF OF TAX DEDUCTIONS

The five Murray Drug Stores in Colorado Springs, "prescription specialists in the Pikes Peak region for over fifty years," are introducing a new Free Tax Service to their valued credit, or charge-account customers.

This new Free Tax Service will make it feasible for all qualifying customers to save from 16% to 40%, and even more on their 1965 Federal and State Income Tax medical deductions.

Senior Citizens will save up to 100% on both Federal and State levels with this new Free Tax Service.

The 1965 Internal Revenue Service regulations DO NOT limit deductions to prescription drugs, but will allow all other medication. A partial listing would include:

Analgesics, (Aspirin, Bufferin, etc.)
Antacids, (Alka Seltzer)
Antiseptics, (Bactine, Lavoris, Listerine, etc.)
Baby Needs, (Diaper Ointments, Hypo-Allergenic Milks, etc.)
Cough and Cold Preparations.
Diabetic Needs.
First Aid Supplies.
Laxatives.
Liniments.
Supplies, (Supportive hose, Thermometers, Vaporizers, etc.)
Vitamins (when ordered by a physician.)

However the taxpayer must be able to show proof of purchases, sales slips, and substantiate their payments.

Murray's new Free Tax Service has been designed to do this and more with 30-day charge accounts. Their new automatic equipment — not available previously—will enable them to record your deductible purchases and furnish separate monthly and year-to-date accumulative totals on regular statements if paid monthly). However, customers must retain the original or duplicate enclosed sales slip for insurance claims and/or other reasons.

Murray's sincerely hope their customers will show approval of this plan by using it to the fullest extent. It offers additional tax savings, and certainly makes "Money Worth Even More" at a Murray Drug Store.

The Murray Drug Store will be pleased to discuss the advantage of a charge account at Murray's with you or any of your friends interested in the above plan, or Murray's will mail them an application to open one. adv.

Cole slaw is delicious made with both red and green cabbage, but use more of the former than the latter. A little shredded red cabbage added to a tossed green salad is an excellent idea, too.

The Mature Parent

Reading Will Not Help

BY Mrs. Muriel Lawrence

DEAR MRS. LAWRENCE: My boy, 7, had a hard early childhood because my marriage was unhappy. His father took his bad temper out on him as well as me. I am now divorced and remarried to a man who gives us a good home. My fear is that the boy inherits his father's bad temper. As a younger child he had screaming tantrums if I didn't give him his own way. Now, if I cross him, he will kick the refrigerator door or even knock a dish off the table . . .

ANSWER: He has learned that he can scare you into giving him what you don't want to give him. Can you now defend your right to give to him only when you can give freely and gladly?

The experts give us a million reasons for refusing to accede to tantrums' demands. Every one is based on their interest in the children. Never do they tell us that we refuse their intimidating demands for our own sakes—to defend our right to give freely and gladly. Yet it is only when we can respect this right that we can withstand the pressure of the howls, the kicks, the flailing arms. And announce the meaning of our resistance by saying, "I will give you only what I can be happy to give you."

If, as I suspect you do, we feel that we have cheated a child by choosing a poor father for him, it may be especially difficult to defend our right to give to him freely and gladly. We feel that we owe him a debt; and so any denying of his demands becomes uncertain and apologetic. All he has to do is to reproach us by kicks and screams to arouse our apologetic feelings—and they resentfully produce the piece of cake, the dime, the privilege which he has demanded.

The problem is not the child or his bullying tactics. It is those apologetic feelings in us which will not allow us to consider, much less to defend, our right to give freely and gladly.

The tantrum exploits in us the same fear of unfulfilled debt that is exploited by a threatening bill collector. As the bill collector forces from us the $5 we cannot spare, so does the tantrum wring begrudged giving from us.

MODERN ELECTROLYSIS
Removes Unwanted Hair Forever

1. Could your features be enhanced by a flattering hairline?
2. Would reshaping your brows make your eyes more expressive?
3. Are you trying to conceal unwanted facial hair by excessive make-up?
4. Are you embarrassed by hair on your upper lip?
5. Is the clearness of your skin marred by superfluous hair on the sides of your face?
6. Are you unable to keep your chin up under the brightest lights?
7. Does the nape of your neck need a better-shaped hairline for the new hair-dos?
8. Do short-sleeved dresses expose unsightly hair on your arms?
9. Do you depend on temporary and possibly harmful methods to remove unwanted body hody?
10. Do bristles ruin the satin-smooth feeling of your legs?

If Your Answer To Any Question Is Yes, The Following Information Will Be Important To You.

All-over beauty requires a hair-free skin. Even the most expensive cosmetic will not conceal superfluous hair. On the contrary, creams and powders EMPHASIZE hair — cling to individual hairs and make them more conspicious!

Temporary methods of hair removal (tweezing, bleaching, waxing, shaving, depilatories) stimulate the growth, make your problem worse and can be dangerous. There's one sure, easy way to take care of excess hair. Have it removed by the only PERMANENT method approved by the medical profession — Electrolysis. Modern science and specialization have been applied to Electrolysis—so that now the social and business handicap of unwanted hair can be eliminated. Remember, no matter how heavy the growth, it can be removed permanently.

There is very little sensation involved, no more than when you pluck your brows — far LESS than the mental anguish superfluous hair causes.

The cost of treatment is within the range of your beauty budget.

Personal consultation, without obligation, is as close as your telephone. Only an appointment is necessary.

State Officer Addresses Local Visitor Committee

The Colorado Springs Short-Term International Visitor Committee embarked this week on activities aimed at broadening the base for the leader-specialist program under the Institute of International Education.

Volunteers working since 1952 under the local chairmanship of Elizabeth Wright Ingraham have processed more than 600 visitors have been entertained in homes and by business, professional, academic and government leaders in the area. They have stayed anywhere from an afternoon to a week as part of their one to three months stay in the United States. The leader - specialist program represents one of the country's major efforts in cultural exchange and is supported by both public and private agencies.

As a part of this week's activities, a morning coffee was held at the home of Mrs. Ingraham for 20 volunteers. Elizabeth Blanc, assistant director of the Denver regional office of the Institute of International Education spoke to the group on the kinds of visitors who come through their office and on some of the responsibilities of handling foreign visitors who are here on short-term programs. She gave a brief history of the non-profit, private organization known as the IIE, Institute of International Education, and explained its operations in processing the itineraries of traveling international leaders as well as their work with exchange students.

At a follow-up meeting this week, Mrs. William Boddington, who will assume the chairmanship of the local Short-Term Visitor Committee this month, laid plans for the compilation of a resource book on the regions professional and business activities. In addition, a long-accumulated hospitality list of people interested in entertaining visitors in their homes will be indexed and expanded. Persons interested in entertaining such visitors are encouraged to contact Mrs. Boddington, 1433 Alamo Avenue, 634-5679, for further information.

A series of informative training sessions are also being contemplated by Mrs. Boddington for the volunteers serving on her committee. Such sessions would include seminars and speakers on our local structure of government, comparative religions, minority problems, current world history and other topics which would enable volunteers to better understand and program for international visitors.

Volunteers serving on the Short - Term Visitor Committee are Mrs. John Alexander, Mrs. Phineas Bernstein, Agnes Donaldson, Mrs. Kenneth Erickson, Mrs. Charles Emery, Mrs. Patrick Fitzgerald, Mrs. Robert Krouse, Mrs. Thomas Lasater, Mrs. Clifford Nakata, Mrs. E. R. Peterson, Mrs. William F. Prindle, Mrs. Neale Reinitz, Mrs. Dennis O'Rourke, Mrs. Arthur Washburn and Mrs. William Woodward.

AG Wives to Have Full Schedule at Convention

While members of Associated Grocers of Colorado are attending business meetings and instructive sessions during AG's 30th Anniversary Convention, Feb. 7, 8 and 9, at the Broadmoor Hotel, their wives will be busy with a full schedule of separate activities. Some will accompany their husbands to the annual stockholders meeting to convene at 9 a.m., Sunday, the first day of the convention. Many, however, will spend a leisurely morning enjoying the Broadmoor's internationally famous accommodations and service.

After the morning meeting, wives will join their husbands for luncheon in the International Center, after which they will tour display booths of food manufacturers and brokers, traditionally a husband and wife affair. In the booth area, between 4 and 6 p.m., an Allied Trade reception and party will be held for the couples.

That evening at 6:30 p.m., members and wives will enjoy a chicken dinner in the International Center, followed by entertainment by the celebrated Mario Singers from Denver.

On Monday the ladies will meet at 8:30 a.m. to attend a special preview of an hilarious new Jack Lemmon farce at the Peak Theater. The men, meanwhile, will tend to business at a morning session of instructive talks.

At noon the ladies will lunch in the Penrose Room of the Broadmoor South, and spend the afternoon playing a popular numbers game.

Monday evening at 6:30 p.m., they will rejoin their husbands for the annual AG banquet in the International Center, where they will hear a talk by Dr. William McDivitt, president of Otero Junior College. Then it's the 30th Anniversary AG Dance, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in the Broadmoor Ballroom.

Tuesday morning the members and their wives will attend an informative meeting in the International Center. At its conclusion, they will participate in the awarding of prizes totaling $8,000 in value, including a '65 Chevrolet Impala. The members and their wives will then have a roast beef luncheon, which is the concluding event of the three-day conclave, after which they will bid the Broadmoor goodby for another year, until the annual AG convention whirl begins all over again, as it has for 30 exciting years.

DAR Chapters Announce Good Citizen Winners

Good Citizen awards will be presented to a senior girl from each of twelve high schools in the region at a joint meeting of Kinnikinnik and Zebulon Pike Chapters, DAR, at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, at the Women's Club, 20 Mesa Road, with Kinnikinnik Chapter entertaining. Hostesses will be Mrs. L. V. Holmes, Mrs. Roy Wright, Mrs. Harry Jones, assisted by the Board of Management.

Mrs. Clark A. Pratz, Trinidad, state regent, will present Good Citizen's pins to the girls. The Rev. J. W. Carroll, of the First Congregational Church, will speak. His subject, "The People Who Know Their God Shall Stand Firm, and Take Action", is the theme for the year of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution. The Rev. Carroll attended the Chicago Theological Seminary and has been pastor of the local church since Sept. 1961. He is an interesting and forceful speaker.

This is an annual award stressing the qualities of good citizenship among senior high schools. Each girl possesses to an outstanding degree the qualities of dependability, including truthfulness, loyalty, and punctuality, service, cooperation, courtesy, and consideration of others, leadership, personality, self-control, and ability to assume responsibility, and patriotism, as shown in an unselfish interest in family, school, community, and nation.

The senior class chooses three girls, and from these the faculty chooses one to become the school's Good Citizen. From these a State Good Citizen is choosen, who then competes for the title of National Good Citizen. The State Good Citizen receives a savings bond from the State Society, and the National Society awards a $1,000 Scholarship to the college of the national winner's choice.

Awards this year go to: Becky Richardson, Harrison High School, Donna Davis, Manitou High School, Linda Reed, Widefield High School, Jane Ann Carlson, Woodland Park High School, Diane Cloud, Lewis Palmer Consolidated High School, Monument, Pat Justus, Palmer High School, Linda Tudor, Air Academy High School, Carol Eurick, Calhan High School, Linda Keller, Cheyenne Mountain High School, and Loretta Linnenan, Cripple Creek High School. The girls will be entertained at lunch at Neusteter's Tea Room before the meeting. The mothers of the girls are invited to attend the meeting at the Women's Club.

Opening lead: Jack of ♠

A delicate bit of cooperation by the defenders was combined with a neat unblocking maneuver by East in today's hand to sink a three notrump contract that the forces of nature had virtually wrapped up and sealed for delivery.

West opened the jack of spades and East saw at once that the suit was blocked for the defense. True enough, if West had led from a seven card holding the suit could be established by the play of the ace and queen, but East considered it more likely that declarer held at least K-x-x, in which case South would duck the second lead of that suit, forever eliminating spades as a contending force. South must be induced to take his king of spades at once; so East played the queen of spades, hoping to be able to discard the ace as the diamonds were played. It is true that South could have foiled this diabolical defense scheme by refusing the trick, but to do so would be an admission that he had seen an adversary's hand.

Upon taking the spade, declarer saw that there was nothing to it but to drive out the ace of diamonds and pray that the adverse spades were divided four in each hand.

West refused the king of diamonds as partner had hoped he would, but took the second lead. East's moment had arrived, and he triumphantly disposed of the ace of spades, permitting West to run five tricks in that suit and chalk up a two trick set.

Secretaries to Discuss Social Security Program

A topic of paramount interest to secretaries — and one that is frequently misunderstood — has been adopted as the 1965 program of the Year by The National Secretaries Association (International) with 550 Chapters scheduling for their regular February meetings a study of social security benefits entitled, "Today's Contribution — Tomorrow's Security".

The Pikes Peak Chapter of NSA locally has set its social security program for 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, at Rastall Center, the ASCC Room, Colorado College, according to an announcement by Mrs. Jean Reed, president, and secretary to R. W. Broughton, vice president, Colorado College. A similar program is being conducted by NSA Chapters in Canada.

NSA, with its more than 24,000 members, is said to be the world's largest organization of business women in one profession. The Association estimates that its membership of secretaries has a better than $8 million annual stake in the U. S. government's social security program. This is based on the 3⅝ per cent of salary withheld for social security — reaching a total of $4 million plus. Matched by employers' contributions of an additional 3⅝ per cent or $4 million plus, the estimated total comes to more than $8 million each year.

The 613 social security district offices throughout the United States have been alerted by Mr. Christgau to cooperate with the NSA chapters in the special February program. Locally, Mr. Carl Maunu of the Colorado Springs District is assisting the Pikes Peak Chapter of NSA in arranging the social security program. When Mr. Maunu speaks to the local Chapter at their meeting on February 9, members will learn their rights and benefits under social security in the major areas of retirement, survivors and disability.

Junior Music Club Names Annual Audition Winners

The annual Future Artists Auditions were held on Jan. 15 with the following young artists being selected by the panel of judges: First place, Christine Kleager, 14; honorable mention in order of their merit, Donald Patterson, 17; Ricky Bradley, 14, and Anda Zirnitis, 13.

The judges for this year's event were John Fetler, music critic; Carlton Gamer, composer and teacher; and Naymond Thomas of Pueblo who has appeared as guest artist in Colorado Springs Opera and the Chorale, and is a teacher in the public school music program as well as on the staff of College in Pueblo.

Christine Kleager, a pupil of Dr. Max Lanner, has studied piano for five years. Formerly of Washington, D. C., she studied with Charles Crowder of that city for two of her five years. She recently placed first in the Junior High Division of the National Music Teachers Association Contest for Colorado. She also studies violin with Mrs. Margaret Smith and plays with the Horace Mann Junior High School Orchestra. She is an honor student at Horace Mann.

Don Patterson, an honor student of Cheyenne Mountain High School, will graduate this spring. He has studied piano with Mrs. Nesbit Hamilton for seven years. Last year he was requested by the audition judges to accompany one of the winners of the auditions. He toured Europe last summer with the school band of America and has received many other awards for his trombone work as well as piano.

Rickey Bradley, has had 2½ years of piano with Henry Margolinski and studied for a short time in Ithica, N. Y., before moving to Colorado Springs. He is a serious student of cello also and studies with Eugene Hilligoss. His mother, Mrs. Richard Bradley is an accomplished flutist.

Anda Zirnitis, a pupil of Velta Gravitis, has studied piano since the age of 6. She attends North Junior High School and is already well known for her solo performances at the piano.

On March 20, at 8 p.m., these four Future Artists will be presented in a concert at the Fine Arts Center. All proceeds will be placed into the Future Artists Scholarship Fund which will be awarded to a worthy graduate this spring, to assist in future music studies. Any one who would like to help with this project of the Junior Music Club is urged to contact Mrs. Robert Kushnir, counselor, at 632-4429.

Sweet Tomato-Pear Relish

- 2 cans (each 1 pound, 13 ounces) Bartlett pear halves
- 1 can (1 pound, 12 ounces) pear-shaped peeled tomatoes
- 1 medium onion, chopped medium-fine to make 1 cup
- 1 large green pepper, chopped coarsely to make 1 cup
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon each salt, ginger and mustard
- ⅛ teaspoon cayenne pepper
- ½ cup cider vinegar

Drain pears; cut lengthwise into 4 strips, then make 3 cuts crosswise to cube; turn into a heavy saucepan or kettle. Drain tomatoes and halve; add to pears with remaining ingredients. Boil vigorously, mixing gently a few times, until liquid is greatly reduced — 15 to 20 minutes. Continue boiling gently, watching constantly and stirring very often so as not to scorch, until almost all liquid has evaporated — about 15 minutes. Makes 1 quart. Serve hot or cold. Store in a tightly covered jar in the refrigerator.

If you are using white sauce in a make - ahead casserole that is to be refrigerated one day and reheated the next, it might be well to make that sauce thinner than usual. We suggest this because freezing and reheating gives extra thickness to a sauce made with flour.

HINTS FROM Heloise

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:

For those whose little girls wear nylon dresses and find after letting the hem down, that even steam pressing doesn't seem to help smooth the crease.

Just put some waxed paper over the crease line, and press it with a warm iron, and watch that wrinkle come out of the nylon dress! —Unsigned

The small amount of wax on the paper melts into the "bent" fibers of the cloth. It does iron out the wrinkles.

After ironing the creased or wrinkled garment with the waxed paper, remove the pape and then iron again on both sides to further distribute and melt the wax. Wonderful. —Heloise

Dear Heloise:

For years I have been irked by the rust that forms in scouring pads, sometimes after using them only once.

Finally, I discovered that instead of dipping my scouring pad in water, I could dip the article to be cleaned in the water, and then use the dry pad to clean it.

By using this method I have been able to use the pads until all the soap is gone, and they never become rusty. —V. Soulerin

Letter Of Laughter

Dear Heloise:

I thought I would drop a hint to mothers of curious little toddlers who keep opening bureau drawers, as mine were doing . . . until I thought of dropping a yardstick down "through" the drawer handles!

This may not be a pretty sight but it saves a lot of mother's time. This may be done to any chest of drawers or to the kitchen drawers with open handles. —Mrs. leBane

Dear Heloise:

I had a heavy, long, chenille robe that wore out around the collar and sleeves.

I removed the buttons and cut off the top part of the garment and sleeves, thus getting a beautiful square out of the bottom part. All it took then was hemming on my sewing machine, (one could also do this by hand) and now it is a cozy lap or nap robe. Or it can be used to wrap baby for carrying between the house and the car. —Reader

Now, that's a wonderful idea if I ever heard one!

After they have been worn, washed, bleached, and get old, a cheaille robe is at its best. They make wonderful lap robes!

By turning the nap side down, they snuggle real good to your feet. And most of the extra nap that usually sheds is gone too, eh? —Heloise

Dear Heloise:

Some of my very pretty and expensive wastebaskets got quite rusty on the inside.

I bought some adhesive-backed plastic paper and lined the entire insides of the wastebaskets with it. Presto! The baskets look clean and new, and can be scrubbed because this paper is completely washable.

This paper comes in all colors, patterns, and designs, and can be matched to any color scheme. —Phyllis Schecheter

Dear Heloise:

While I am cooking potatoes or macaroni for a salad, I put the dressing in a large bowl, add my favorite seasonings, add all the extra, extra ingredients (onions, cucumbers, etc.) then refrigerate.

By the time the potatoes (or macaroni) are cooled, peeled, and cut up, the flavors are all blended and the salad tastes much better.

Try it, I think you'll like this idea. —Lois Cross

Happy Watch Fixer Named Handicapper of the Month

By SHARON ERVIN
Gazette Telegraph Staff Writer

Adolf Zoellner is a watch repairman with a dry sense of humor, a placid face and rare droll outlook on life.

He has been named Handicapper of the Month of February by Stalwarts and Pals Club for handicapped persons. Zoellner is not a member of the group.

It was a single bullet on an island in the South Pacific in 1944 that caused Zoellner's handicap. The shell shattered three ribs, sent them puncturing into a lung and severed his spinal cord.

"I was 25 years old," Zoellner recalled. His face and eyes reflected none of the drama depicted in the movies of the men who have been permanently injured in combat. He sat relaxed and matter - of - factly discussed the happenings which followed.

"They patched me up and sent me home on a ship. For 23 days I laid there without moving. I couldn't keep any food down and I felt awful. I went from 175 pounts to about 85. But I never thought I might be dying. I expected to live. After all, anyone could die.

"Back home in the hospital, I asked the doc how long it would be before I would be up and around again. He said truthfully he didn't give me three months to live. I was skin and bones and living on transfusions. I couldn't keep food down and they had had to cut those three ribs out. But I didn't die. I was in hospitals for three years. When they told me I couldn't walk, I figured it only meant I couldn't go up and down stairs, but that didn't bother me much after they explained the injury and said that there was nothing they could do about it.

"I had been a machinist and while I was in the hospital, they gave us aptitude tests. I always had liked working with my hands so I decided to apply to the Bulova School of Watch Making in Woodside, Long Island.

"I married a nurse the day I got out of the hospital, Oct. 4, 1947, and we just went bumming around for a while. There was no housing in New York City but they accepted me for the school so we went anyway and stayed with friends for a couple of weeks until we found a place of our own.

"I was in the school from June 1948 until November 1949. All we had to do was decide where to settle. Anyplace was all right with me. My wife had taken her basic nurses training here at Ft. Carson and it was halfway between both our homes so we decided to come here."

Zoellner has had the A to Z Watch Repair Shop, 1446 N. [illegible], for over 12 years now. They have four children, boys 15, 13 and 11 and a daughter, 8. Zoellner drives a car with hand controls and makes every Air Force Academy football game he can. The family has a cabin in the mountains which they retreat to when they want to get away from it all.

"I miss being able to walk sometimes," Zoellner added. "I was pretty athletic when I was younger. With my boys, I can tell them how to do things, but I can't show them. But when I see someone walking down the street mumbling to themselves or something, I remember there are a lot of ways to be handicapped and things could be worse."

International Days Begin At CSU

Students at Colorado State University will participate in numerous events during the annual International Days program, beginning Monday and running through Saturday. All events will be held in CSU's Student-Center.

Theme for this year's week-long event is "Now is the Time."

A parade through downtown Fort Collins Saturday actually opened International Days, although the first events won't begin until Monday. Dr. Manuel Davenport of the CSU farulty will open the week with a discussion of religion in the Congo at noon Monday. At 4 p.m. African nationalism will be discussed, followed by a concert by Won Kyung Cho, Korean Dancer, at 8 p.m.

Tuesday's schedule includes a discussion of De Gaulle's France at 4 p.m. and an "I tion discussion) at 730 p.m.

Wednesday the cultural diversity of India will be discussed at noon and Red China will be discussed at 4 p.m. Exhibits of arts, crafts and costumes from other lands will be shown at 1 p.m. Wednesday and remain on display until Saturday (Feb. 13).

Thursday's 4 p.m. coffee hour discussion will be on Sukarno and Saigon. Following at 7:30 p.m. will be the International fashion show featuring native dress of CSU's foreign students.

Friday's agenda calls for a discussion of Brazil at 4 p.m. and a showing of the foreign film, "Jules and Jim" at 8 p.m. At 10 p.m. a program of international music will be presented.

Highlighting the final day will be the banquet and talent show. The banquet begins at 5:45 p.m. and will feature a menu of various native foods, served buffet style. The talent show, with an international theme, will follow at 8:15 p.m.

An information party featuring music by an African Band will close International Days at 10 p.m. Saturday — giving those who wish a chance to meet the various foreign students and others involved in this annual affair at CSU.

Family Living Series Continues at YWCA

The 60 mothers attending the current Family Living Series Thursday at the YWCA kept Dr. Harold Hobbs long after the conclusion of his lecture, to answer questions about his recommendation that children be firmly punished for violating parental rules.

The psychologist on the staff of Brady Hospital spoke at the fifth of six lectures sponsored by three United Fund agencies: Family Counseling Service, Mental Health Association and the YWCA. At the conclusion of the present child - rearing series registrations will be accepted for the next series on Marriage and Family Problems which will begin Feb. 25.

Speaking on "The Perfect Parent," Dr. Hobbs said, "Parents are charged with more than taking care of the physical needs of their children. Parents must provide the child with the privilege of learning the rules and laws which must be obeyed if he is to live in our society."

Adding that there are no perfect parents since parents are human, he said, "Parents must be capable of punishment and I don't mean just withdrawing privileges."

He said that a leather strap has had much use in the rearing of his eight children.

"We prove that we care when we prevent our children from doing the things they shouldn't do and when we insist that they do the things that society expects of them," he said.

"If there were a perfect parent, he would fully recognize and accept his own neeeds and impulses and fully recognize and accept his child's needs and impulses," he said.

Dr. Hobbs said that the single most important psychological need parents must provide to their children is "physical contact affection which can move a child toward adequacy or deprive him very early."

He described an experiment performed with newborns in the University of Minnesota School of Medicine. "One group was merely fed, bathed and changed while the second group was fed, bathed, changed and loved. The first group lost weight alarmingly while the second group thrived. When the first group was given love . . . picked up and cuddled often they rapidly caught up with the second group."

"I'm not recommending over-indulging children," he said adding that "over - indulgence is the attempt of parents to cover hosility toward the child."

SIAMESE GREETING

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—Patrons of the Lincoln Book shop —many of them from other states—this year again received their annual Christmas cards from Tai, the bookshop's Siamese cat. Signed by Tai's smudgy paw, the card bears his Siamese-type greeting. In return Tai was remembered with packages of catnip and other tidbits from all over the country.

MAIL BELL STILL PEALS

FRENCH CAMP, Miss. (AP) —This town has a brand - new modern brick post office, to replace the frame one used for many decades. But the old post office bell has been moved from the old site to the new and will continue to ring.

Wayne Curtis, postmaster for nearly 25 years, peals the bell each day to let community residents know the mail has arrived. The custom started in the old days when the roads were so muddy that mail was often delayed, sometimes until late afternoon or night. When it arrived, the bell would ring and townspeople would congregate at the post office.

City Cigaret Tax Take Increases

Gross revenue from the city's cigaret tax last month was $20,095.

This compares with $18,832 collected during January 1964, according to Deputy City Treasurer James O'Leary.

January is usually the biggest month of the year because of new licenses and stamps.

Gross collections during 1964 were $135,545 and $132,505 in 1963. The 1962 collection was $92,577.

AFA Historians Speak To Civic Groups

Col. Wilbert H. Ruenheck, professor and head of the department, addressed the Denver Gyro Club. The subject of his presentation was "America at the Crossroads."

A second member of the History department, Maj. Allen F. Chew, discussed "Russo-Finnish Relations" before the Northside Rotary Club.

CAPITOL STUFF

By TED LEWIS

Washington — Before the new bosses of Soviet Russia visit the United States on invitation of President Johnson, it would seem that LBJ should first give a public accounting of just why the state of the world is so rosy as to warrant this glad-hand treatment of the top men in the Kremlin.

The President has yet to make a detailed report on the nation on how his Administration sizes up our 1965 foreign problems. In none of his messages to Congress, nor in his anaugural address did he seize the opportunity to spell out precisely the dimensions of our global commitments, or reveal why he thinks we are closer to world peace today than any time since World War II.

There has been for many months, it is even conceded with in the Administration a crying need for a full dress Nam, but none has been forthcoming.

Why is the President trying to low-key foreign affairs and at the same time using pianissimo and pulling out all the stops on domestic affairs, such as his Great Society dream?

Probably one solid reason is that he wants, above all else, to keep the economic boom rolling. He realizes there are two intangibles at least which could lessen confidence in continued economic expansion. One is the state of his own health. The other is alarm over a crisis abroad. He can't do much to prevent unfavorable national reaction to a Presidential cough, but it is possible to downgrade a foreign crisis, either by soft pedaling or by abstaining entirely from talking about it.

This Johnson effort to subordinate the importance of whatever happens abroad involving our global interests is actually a new tack. Back in November, 1961, as Vice President, he held exactly the opposite view.

What Johnson Said Here in 1961

Speaking on foreign affairs before a select dinner audience in New York on Nov. 30, 1961, he said that in his opinion "it is one of the major responsibilities of government to set forth fully and frankly its grand design and the state of its progress in carrying it out."

He did just exactly that in that speech and when his estimate of how the U. S. then stood globally is compared with how it stands now.

In November, 1961, Johnson found that NATO has been "expanded in numbers and efficiency" so that "the principal base of Western power outside the U. S. is vastly more secure."

Or consider how Johnson less than four years ago sized up the Viet Nam situation. "The people of Viet Nam," he said "have taken up arms in their own defense under a government which is determined to preserve their freedom from outside domination. The U.S. is providing large and growing assistance to that government."

Africa Through a Rose-Colored Glass

And LBJ reported in that 1961 speech that Communist-inspired rebel movements in other Southeast Asia nations, including Indonesia had been "decisively defeated." In January, 1965, Indonesia's Sukarno has now drifted into the Communist orbit.

Johnson four years ago looked at the Africian situation through a rose - colored glass, with the Congo in particular working its way out of a mess with UN assistance.

That appraisal by Johnson, as Vice President, was almost florid with recitations of the American and free world cold war successes in the 16 years since World War II. It was so effective in arguing that the free world had the Communists on the run that then Soviet UN Ambassador Valerian Zorin walked out of the hall.

Since that November of four years ago, none of the trouble spots Johnson pinpointed to build up his case for American foreign policy triumphs, have grown better, only worse.

But in the process, the President has adopted a new technique. He has offered in one message to Congress the generalization that chances for peace have never been better in 20 years than right now.

Playing Down the Foreign Crises

That impression flows also from his offer to the new Soviet Russian leaders to come here for a visit. As he phrased the invitation in his State of the Union address, it was to the effect that "if we are to live together in peace, we must come to know each other better."

This is a positive but nebulous approach and the President has yet to explain just why the world situation is now more conducive to clasping of Iron Curtain hands.

The deliberate downplaying of all crises abroad is not entirely an original Johnson technique. It is being pointed out that he is actually subscribing to long-held theory of Assistant Secretary of State Harlan Cleveland.

Cleveland, when Kennedy was President, held that the public should be educated not to accept each foreign crisis as if the nation's security was in the balance.

He wanted the public to stop being "crisis conscious" and give attention instead to dull, day by day diplomatic shifts so that each crisis could be worked out behind the scenes on a compromise basis.

Cleveland argued that a "crisis conscious" public demanded a 100 per cent American victory, and that was bad for those trying to negotiate a "consensus" compromise.

EXTRADITION WAIVED

PUEBLO (UPI) — Pueblo County Sheriff Robert Horvat said Kansas authorities would pick up an escapee from the Sublette, Kan., jail today. The man, identified as Edwin Henry Nash, 46, was arrested Wednesday night at the home of his wife here. Horvat said Nash was being held on forgery charges when he broke out of the Kansas jail Dec. 8 and allegedly stole a car. Nash waived extradition hearings.

Not Even Governor Will Be Given Key

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Gov. Sam Goddard found out when he took office last month that "everybody in town" had keys to the Arizona statehouse. He ordered the locks changed.

Floyd Williams, superintendent of state builings, said Thursday that under the new arrangement, "Nobody, including Gov. Goddard, will have a key."

AFRCAN VIOLET PEST

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — A pest that resembles a tiny white pebble and attacks the roots of African violet plants now is under study in the entomology department at Pennsylvania State University, supported by a grant from the African Violet Society of America. The pest has appeared in the eastern United States during the past two or three years and first was described as a species about five years ago.

SWIMMING AIDS KIDS

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) —The earlier children start learning to swim, the better, believes Mrs. Robert Carl, coach of the St. Louis Park Swim Club who developed dozens of state champions as coach of the Minneapolis YWCA swim team.

"At 4 or 5, most youngsters should start learning," she advises. "It will come easy for them, because they have not acquired many fears."

Benefits to youthful swimmers who take part in a competitive swimming program are many, Mrs. Carl adds. "They acquire discipline, poise, courage and health," she points out. "They learn to listen, to work with a group and to give more of themselves than they thought possible."

OSLO — Norwegian bankers will soon be required to order flour at least one year in advance in anticipation of shortages.

RECIPE FOR SUCCESS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Mrs. Edna Gelder Hayden bakes fruitcakes to sell and send to friends. Producing as many as 120 single-handedly in one day is routine for her, despite the fact that she has been blind since the age of 19.

The white - haired baker has her recipe memorized and prepares it by touch. She uses level measuring cups for the ingredients and mixes the batter in a metal dish pan. Everything in her kitchen has its own place, and she tastes the batter to be sure it is right. She times the cakes by a wall clock with an open face, and tests to see if they are done by feeling them.

Date-Line

By Ele and Walt Dulaney

Dear Walt: Here's a question that bothers me. What do you say when you're out on a date and have to use the bathroom? —Jack

Dear Jack: In our modern world, there's no need to be ashamed of very natural functions. So just say, "Excuse me, please, I'm going to the men's room. I'll be right back." No other details or comments are needed from you or your date.

Warning: In a public area, you shouldn't leave your gal alone where strolling wolves can bother her. So suggest, "I'm going to the men's room. Would you like to wait in the ladies' room while I'm gone so no one annoys you?'

When you return, you can start a fresh conversation with no need to refer to your short trip.—Walt

Greetings, Dulaneys: I'm a college student and share an apartment with the world's greatest moocher. He's a good pal otherwise, so I don't want to switch roommates, but I'm tired of seeing my clothes on him oftener then on myself.

Strategy, please.—Ted

Hi Ted: Have you ever told him, "Don't borrow my clothes" in straight English? If not, do so at once. Let him know that you two are close but not that close.

If he still borrows the shirt off your back, get a new roommate or buy a lock for your side of the closet. There's no subtle strategy for a guy like this.—Ele and Walt.

Dear Ele and Walt: Some of the guys in our club give girls phony names at dances, etc. Is this a good joke or a bum trick?—Sergeant-at-Arms

Hi Serge: It's a very juvenile maneuver to give "pretend" names after you've left grade school. Tell your club members that they're hurting the club's reputation with these 10-year-old tricks, and they are making the girls involved feel very cheap. —Ele and Walt.

Dear Ele and Walt: My folks are killing me. They say I can't get my driving license until I graduate from school. I know no girl will date a car-less guy, so how in the world can I make my folks change their decision? —Pedestrian

Dear Pedestrian: There's little chance you can alter your parents' firm decision, so get a bus or subway schedule or share gas costs with a pal and double-date. Your folks are paying your room, board, insurance, doctor, clothing, etc.—not exactly killing you, yes?—Ele and Walt

Girls: Would you date a guy who had to depend on the bus or subway for transportation? Drop us a line in care of this newspaper and let us know.

Canada to Choose Tactical Fighters

OTTAWA (AP) — Canada will announce before the end of March which of four American planes it will choose to be the Royal Canadian Air Force's new tactical jet fighter, informed sources say.

The planes under consideration are the Northrop F5 Freedom Fighter, the Douglas A4 Skyhawk, the Grumman A6 Intruder and the Ling-Temco-Vought A7.

Florida Explosion Kills Five Workmen

CRYSTAL RIVER, Fla. (AP) — Five men setting charges to blast a canal were killed Thursday in the explosion of their dynamite-laden barge. The roar was heard 15 miles away.

The explosion occurred in a remote area of Citrus County, 70 miles north of St. Petersburg, where a canal from the Gulf of Mexico is being cut to haul coal to a new power-generating plant.

Officials estimated that 1,000 sticks of dynamite had exploded.

Buddhists May Hold Key to Viet's Future

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Will the Buddhists in South Viet Nam keep overturning governments until they finally get one that asks the United States to stop the anti-Communist war and get its 23,000 soldiers out of the country?

That was the toughest unasked question at President Johnson's news conference Thursday.

It almost was asked when a reporter wanted to know what the United States would do if requested to pull its troops out of South Viet Nam.

It almost was answered when Johnson said he would cross that bridge if he ever came to it, but that he did not anticipate having to cross it.

The President would have to "cross that bridge" if a government came to power in war-weary Saigon which believed it could handle the Communist guerrilla problem without U.S. help and probably by some kind of "neutralization."

The only practical way such a government could come to power, as U.S. experts assess the prospects, would be by action of the politically powerful Buddhist leadership, possibly in a deal with some group of military men.

Whether such a deal is possible is one of the things Johnson's top foreign policy aide, McGeorge Bundy, is trying to find out in his talks with U.S. Ambassador Maxwell D. Taylor, other American officials and South Vietnamese leaders this week in Viet Nam. Bundy is due back to report to the President Monday or Tuesday.

The questions Bundy is asking, administration officials insist, have far more bearing on the future U.S. role in South Viet Nam than the persistent reports out of Paris that secret diplomatic probings are under way for a negotiated settlement.

Anonymous Paris informants have reported contacts there between North and South Vietnamese unofficial representatives, with the United States being informed.

Johnson tried to smash these Paris reports at his news conference Thursday, denouncing them as incorrect and saying they had "no validity."

Later, other officials said the administration sees no basis whatever for a negotiated settlement under present conditions. They concede the situation is chaotic and frustrating and that much of Congress and the country is fed up with pouring money and men into a war which the United States not only cannot seem to win but cannot even control.

However the implication that the cure for discouragement and frustration is to give up and get out of South Viet Nam is rejected by high officials at the White House, State Department and Defense Department.

These administration policymakers say it is not a case of being against a negotiated settlement. The critical question is what kind of settlement could be negotiated. This poses the key problem from the U.S. point of view.

So far as the administration has ever been able to determine, the Communists directing the war in Viet Nam are interested only in negotiating a South Vietnamese-U.S. surrender.

Actually there seems to be one indispensable condition on each side.

The Commmunists insist the United States must pull its troops out of South Viet Nam.

The United States insists that in any kind of settlement, provision must be made to secure the independence and free choice of the people of South Viet Nam.

With sufficient safeguards, in other words, the United States evidently would be prepared to withdraw from South Viet Nam if the Communists were prepared to put an end to their guerrilla efforts to take over the country.

The impression held by some of the best informed Washington officials is that the Communists in North Viet Nam and Red China are convinced they are approaching victory — a victory which would give them not only South Viet Nam but far greater power and influence throughout Asia.

SCOOTER ACCIDENTS

The motor scooter is another hazard to health. Some may envy the owners of these gay, economical vehicles but they cannot match in safety the modern automobile, including the smaller sports cars. The wheels are small and fit into many defects in the pavement; the device is light and offers no protection to the driver. Otherwise, we have no objections.

Several years ago, when my son was a senior in high school, he was offered a used motor scooter at an attractive price. I said no, and gave my reasons. He was upset but I withstood all his arguments. The next day he came home from school and really took me to task. A classmate beat him to the bargain and his pride was hurt.

The following day the classmate was dead. He was driving along a quiet street in Evanston, Ill., ran over a stone, upset the scooter, and struck his head against the curb. It was an unusual accident and may never be duplicated.

I don't want to be unfair to the scooter industry by making a mountain out of a molehill just because of one case. Furthermore, auto accidents are far more common at this age, as well as athletic injuries.

In the New England Journal of Medicine, Dr. Edward D. Frank of Boston recently reported four scooter accidents. An honor student of Harvard hit an unseen depression in the road, bounced over the handle bars, and sustained a fatal head injury. Another undergraduate was thrown from his scooter; his abdomen struck a telephone pole, causing internal hemorrhages. Many weeks, three operations, and 36 pints of blood later, he left the hospital. According to Dr. Frank, he may not be able to resume his career because of severe residual emotional and physical defects.

A boy and his passenger were struck from the rear and sustained multiple fractures, requiring prolonged hospitalization. Another case was a passenger who fell off because of a quick stop. The brain was injured, followed by progressive and permanent cerebral deterioration.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.

SPLIT PALATE AND LIP

A. S. C. writes: What is the difference between a cleft palate and a harelip?

REPLY

These defects usually coexist. Harelip is the external manifestation of this congenital defect in which a crevice runs through the hard palate (cleft palate) in the roof of the mouth to the lip in front.

NECK REMNANT

Mrs. W. R. writes: I just learned our baby has a thyroglossal cyst that has to be removed. Is this a dangerous operation?

REPLY

No, provided the surgeon is well versed in the anatomy of the neck. This cyst is a remnant of a passageway that existed before birth.

FAMILY SHINGLES

J. S. writes: Is herpes zoster hereditary? My mother had it before she died and now my 68-year-old sister has developed three blisters.

REPLY

No, but the disorder is so common it might appear to be hereditary.

LIVER AND NERVOUSNESS

J. P. writes: Would liver pills help bad nerves?

REPLY

John Fetler, Book Editor

"Hydrospace," by Martin Caidin (Dutton $5.95): In the seven years since Russia launched its first unpopulated satellite, the hoopla about landing on the moon and probing Mrs has distracted attention from a more modest American program that may prove such more important — the exploration of the world's vast ocean deeps.

"Hydrospace" is Caidin's report on early ventures into this potentially vital segment of "Inner space" — pioneer approaches which have barely penetrated a vast hidden world.

Most Americans are inclined to take the sea for granted, never realizing the startling superlatives it involves. The waters cover 71 per cent of our world; they descend to depths of nearly 7 miles, more than a mile deeper than Mt. Everest is high, and the Pacific Ocean alone covers more area than the entire surface of Mars.

Under U. S. auspices, en have descended to a depth of 35,600 feet. The long undersea voyages of U.S. nuclear submarines, around the world and under the Arctic ice, have extended our knowledge, but we still know woefully little of the awesome forces that wrecked the USS Thresher in 1963.

The Russians also have been active in ocean exploration, under a cloak of discretion that contrasts perhaps ominously with their trumpeting of their alleged outer-space achievements.

It has been earnestly suggested that the Russians are trying to lure us into wasting our substance on expeditions to the moon and other close-in celestial bodies while they advance their ambitions of world conquest by mastering the seas, a major arena in any future war.

"Hydrospace" is a valuable contribution to understanding of an important area of scientific research which may eventually make the difference between victory and defeat for the United States.

"Soul of Wood and Other Stories," by Jakov Lind (Grove $3.95): These short stories of Jews under the Nazi terror are told with a technique that combines reality with fantasy so skillfully that they are sometimes indistinguishable. If that is what Lind intended, he has succeeded admirably. His characters, pursued and pursuers alike, exhibit starkly and often with a mocking kind of humor the greed, hatred and madness which lie just beneath the surface awaiting release. Translated from German by Ralph Manheim.

"Crisis," by Terence Robertson (Atheneum $6.95): A political-diplomatic account of the 1956 Israeli-British - French attack on Egypt.

The book's hero is Lester Pearson, now Canadian prime minister, whose work at the United Nations during the Suez affair helped end the invasion and prevent what might have been world war III.

There are plenty of villains, notably Anthony Eden,, Guy Mollet, David Ben-Gurion, John Foster Dulles, V. K. and Krishna Menon. There is only one winner — Gamal Abdel Nasser, who emerged stronger than ever after apparent near defeat.

Robertson, a Canadian author, has reconstructed the story from documents and interviews with the men involved. He concludes that the real battlefield was not the canal but the United Nations headquarters . . .The armies of Britain, Frence and Israel hurt Nasser less than the wounds their collusive diplomacy inflicted upon the Atlantic Alliance.

"Hurry Sundown," by K. B. Gilden (Doubleday $7.95): This huge novel attempts to show how World War II has influenced present-day society. Rad, a white soldier, returns to his farm in Georgia after getting a taste of European culture. He meets his cousin,, Henry, on the way home and Henry tried to fill him full of ideas for taking advantage of the postwar boom.. Henry has stayed home during the war and has seized upon every opportunity to make a killing. But when Rad presents his dreams to his wife, she doesn't want to leave the rundown farm she has always known. After all, she worked in a plant while he was away so she could keep the farm going. There is Reeve, a Negro soldier, who has also returned. He too has gotten a taste of a different way of life — having associated with men from other parts of the country and men of foreign armies. When he walks into town dressed in his uniform and hears a farmer jeer at him he wants to strike back. What was once a huge plantation with tenant farms has now been taken over by a northern syndicate and turned into a mechanized farm while eviction notices threaten to uproot the natives from the soil. This isn't intended to be a regional novel — not just a story of the south. It might be any place from which men have gone to war and returned changed for life.

"Ukiyo," selected and edited by Jay Gluck (Vanguard $4.95): If novels were motion pictures, this collection of short pieces on postwar Japan could double as a set of colored slides — literary snapshots depicting life, manners and modes of thought in one of Asia's more inscrutable countries.

The 25 selections —some by professional writers and some by amateurs — include short stories, parts of diaries and a class composition by a schoolboy. As literary pieces, the quality is uneven. As comments on the impact of war, defeat and the U.S. military occupation, they make interesting reading.

The subjects range from an eyewitness account of a World War II naval battle to the racy advantures of Tokyo's call girls and black marketeers. All are related, in one way or another, to World War II or its aftermath.

Authors include a Hrioshima housewife, a Japanese admiral, an undercover agent for the Imperial army, Kyo Haruto (dubbed the "Japanese Hemingway") and Mishima Yukio, Japan's leading contemporary writer.

One of the best pieces is by Eguchi Koichi, 14, a poverty-stricken schoolboy who somehow manages to support himself and his grandmother on only six dollars a month.

"P. S. Wilkinson," by C.D.B. Brpan (Harper & Row $5.95): The author recieved the $10 thousand Harper Novel Prize for this book. The story concerns a young Ivy League graduate of old Virginia stock who gets his first taste of the world outside his family society as an army officer in postwar Korea. As a inexperienced reserve officer he lacks confidence in assuming a position of command. He finds it even more difficult to go along with the attitudes and dogmas of his superior officers who have found a secure life in the military. Returning to the United States and shedding his uniform except for weekly drills, he discovers that he doesn't know where to begin. There are family ties which he can't break easily and he finds he is being drawn back to an unhappily married girl with whom he had an affair in college. Getting involved in some unsavory situations he earns the scorn of his family and employer. The story is written in a fast-moving style, which carries the reader effortlessly through its great length.

"The Life and Times of the Late Demon Rum," by J. C. Furnas (Putnam's $6.95): Rum, the term that came to represent whiskey, gin and all the other spirits, has had its ups and downs in American history. Once praised as the true aqua vitae — water of life — and prescribed for a wide array of ills, it ran into trouble in the 19th Century and found itself illegal in the 20th. This is a detailed chronicle of the battle of the Drys and Wets that culminated in the 18th Amendment. Many of the main characters are familiar — Carrie Nation, the hatchet wielder, Frances Willard, the moving force of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and the Rev. Howard Hyde Russell, founder of the Anti-Saloon League. The author's point of view is that alcohol, saloons and breweries certainly did cause trouble for some individuals and society as a whole, but it was nothing like the trouble that resulted from the attempts to legislate them out of being.

Skilled Workers Sought for Africa

ACCRA, Ghana (AP) — James Farmer, director of the American Congress of Racial Equality, says the civil rights organization is seeking skilled U.S. Negroes to work in Africa.

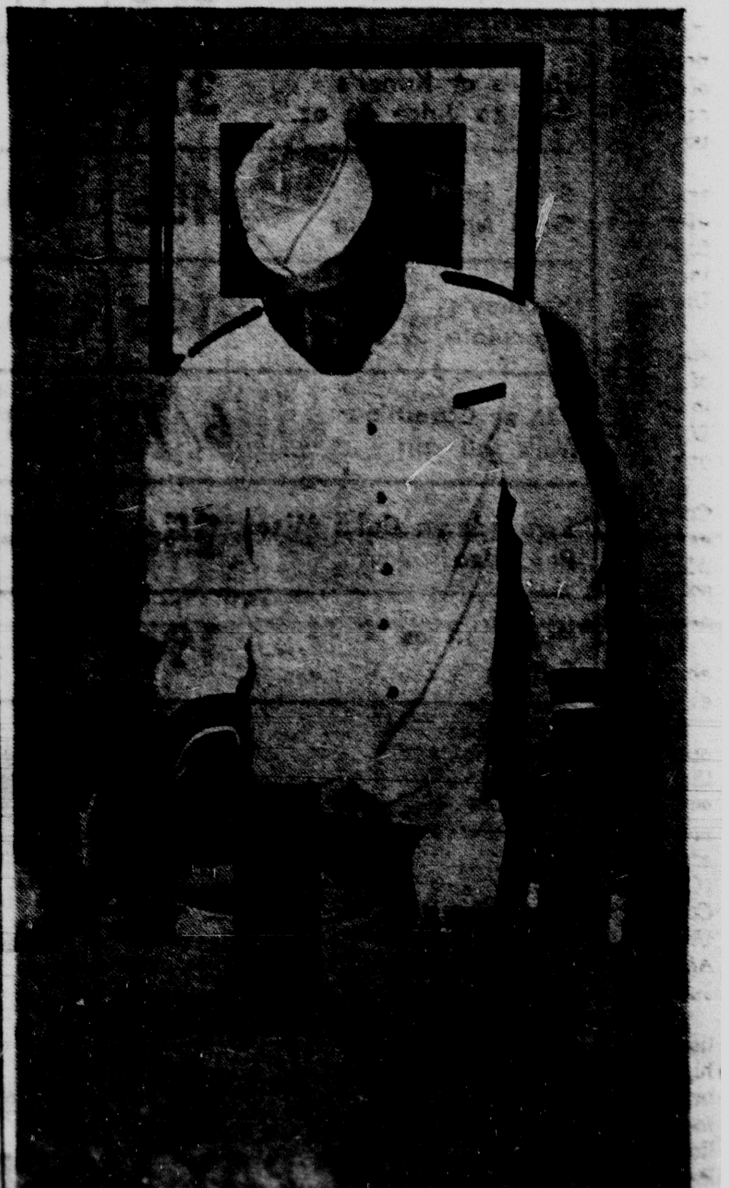
Farmer, ending a five-week tour of Africa, said Zambia, Tanzania, Ethiopia and Nigeria had asked him for recruits to "help build their countries." He said that American Negroes would be hired on a contract basis by the interested governments.

CHILD LOGIC

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Little Lisa Golob came home from kindergarten and handed her mother a piece of paper on which she had made a "painting." Running from side to side of the sheet were wide lines of violet, blue, green, yellow and red. She explained that it was a rainbow. Her mother admired the art work but asked why it was not curved like a rainbow. The youngster looked up quickly and replied. "Well, all we had was straight paper."

WRAPPING PROBLEM

PETERBOROUGH, England (UPI) — Thirty-two fish-fryers will study modern fish-and-chip shop techniques in a seven-week course at a local technical college. One of the things they will be told: "Teach the customer that fish-and-chips do no taste better out of newspapers. Plain wrapping is more efficient and hygienic."



WILLING WAITER—"Waiting" plays a mighty big part in Ed L. Green's life but he's a willing waiter. Colorado Faced With Education Problems

By GLENN URBAN
Gazette Telegraph
Political Writer

One of the problems that the state assembly has to wrestle with in the current session is education.

And going right along with that, of course, will be taxes — the taxes needed to finance education.

The problem comes in two distinct categories so far as finances are concerned.

— Support of education from kindergarten through the 12th grade is primarily done by property taxes within the individual school districts.

— Finance of higher education, junior colleges, colleges and universities is, generally speaking, done by the state, with some exceptions for the junior colleges.

The higher education operations also have an additional problem of providing housing for students, which the lower educational system does not have to contend with.

There seems to be at least three reasons for the added emphasis on education which is bound to be felt in the state's politics and finances.

— The baby boom. The United States' birth rate took a hefty climb during the 1940s and continued for some time. The youngsters that changed the statistics are now of college age.

(Further, it has been pointed out that the parents of those young citizens are much more able to send their children to college than were the grandparents able to send their children who grew up in the Great Depression and World War II.)

— The state population keeps growing. Colorado's population has increased by 212,000 persons since the 1960 census, the U. S. Commerce Department announced late last year in a report on Census Bureau figures.

As of July 1, the report said, the state had reached a population of 1,966,000.

In the 39-month period following the April, 1960 census to July 1, 1963, the state gained about 164,000 new citizens.

A total of 144,000 babies were born, 51,000 residents died, and 71,000 more people moved into the state than moved away.

The only Western state to grow faster than Colorado was Arizona, which gained 279,000 citizens.

— There is a general drive for education, which was sparked, according to many educators, in the period immediately after the Russians put up Sputnik I in 1958.

In addition to the national drive, both the state and El Paso county have pinned their hopes for industrial growth on increased educational facilities.

Locally, there is much interest both in a punior college program and in expansion of the University of Colorado Extension Center, which got a new location last year when Dr. George Dwire, the chief officer of the organization that controlled the Cragmor sanitarium presented the buildings and grounds to the state.

However, so far as is known, Gov. John Love's budget does not include any great amounts of money for development of the center or the building of a satisfactory library there.

Apparently the local Extension Center will get no special attention — and its immediate future will be determined by the amount of money the State University gets.

An idea of the growth the state is expecting in its schools of higher learning was included in a December report by John W. Bartram, University of Colorado budget officer.

He said that enrollment in Colorado's public junior colleges, colleges and universities will grow from this year's 40,000 to about 73,000-76,000 in the next six years — by 1970.

That growth will figure out to about 4,000 additional students every year.

A way of comparing that figure, Bartram reported, is that the total growth in six years will be equivalent to the total number of students "as there are now on the Boulder campus (Colorado University) and Fort Collins campus (Colorado State University — formerly Colorado A&M and Mesa College (Mesa Junior College) combined."

Colorado now spends $33.7 million a year in public support of higher education at all levels, but that figure will have to be increased to between $74 million and $79.5 million by 1970, Bartram said.

Reported Bartram: "This is an increase of about 20 per cent a year. State tax revenues under present tax structures will not grow at nearly that rate of increase. It seems clear that higher education will have a larger proportion of the total state budget than it has had in the past. With other state needs increasing, it is probable that additional income will be required beyond that which present sources can provide."

In addition to those needed operating funds, Bartram noted, the state's public institutions of higher learning will need approximately $100 million in the next six years to build and equip buildings to handle the additional students.

"By comparsion," Bartram said, "It can be noted that between 1956 and 1964 Colorado put nearly $90 million of its tax funds into higher education capital construction."

Bartram explained that more than half of that $90 million came from the building mill levy which expires this year.

The governor and the legislature will have to decide whether to re-enact that mill levy or get the money from some place else if it wants to keep on expanding its educational plant. Bartram figured that the average yearly requirement would be $16 million.

How the state will go about getting that needed money, on the assumption that something will be done to meet the growth predicted, might make a lot of headlines in the cosing months.

The lower house of the state assembly, the House of Representatives, initiates all tax bills. It is controlled this year by the Democrats, who wrested control from the Republicans in the November general election.

The upper house, the Colorado Senate, also must pass all bills and it is controlled by the Republicans, who held control but lost some of their strength. Gov. Love is a Republican, who was elected on a pledge of lower taxes and tighter control over state expenditures.

How to beat this problem is a sticker. Bartram reported that costs go up as a student progresses up the academic ladder in Colorado just as in any other state.

Grade school is cheaper than high school, high school is cheaper than college, and college is cheaper than a university, Bartram reported, but added that costs are about the same for comparable teaching at comparable levels. Junior college costs and freshman-sophomore costs at the University of Colorado are about the same, he said.

Comparing costs for each student in Colorado with those in other states, Bartram noted that "Colorado junior college costs are typical of those in other states. The costs in Colorado's senior institutions run several hundred dollars a student lower than similar purpose state institutions in other states."

Costs of higher education are only part of the problem. The public school system, kindergarten through 12th grade also costs a lot of money.

Love Wants Duplication Eliminated in Schools

How much control over the state's colleges and universities should the state governmnet have?

In light of the present problem of financing education that faces the governor and legislature that question seems larger than in other years.

About a year ago, Gov. John A. Love returned to his home town to speak at a meeting of the Winter Night Club in the Broadmoor's International Center.

One of the things he discussed there before one of the largest meetings of that club last season was the most economical way state could finance higher education.

He explained that it was his belief that some money could be saved and other money used more effectively if duplication was cut out of the state's schools.

What he was saying was that he didn't think that the University of Colorado at Boulder and Colorado State University at Ft. Collins should both have journalism schools or departments, or engineering schools, or schools of architecture.

What he seemed to imply was that the state needed some sort of over-all planning and direction for all its schools.

The Colorado Republican party platform issued last Sept. 22 had this to say about education:

"We pledge continued increase in the state support for primary, secondary and higher education, and further development of a coordinated long-range plan for education beyond the high school.'

The planning issue has to be decided as early as possible, for the number of students in the state's colleges increases each year, and right now it is estimated by educators that Colorado ought to begin spending about $30 million for new college facilities.

So far this year, Love has not pressed, publically at least, for any central control over the colleges and so far as is known the legislature has not had printed any bills dealing with that topic.

What will happen is anyone's guess, but should the state do something like that it would not be pioneering. Other states face the same problem and some have set up machinery to centralize control at least to a certain degree.

Last July, Ohio put its plan into gear. It now has a nine-man Board of Regents with a chancellor, created by the Ohio legislature in a special session in 1963.

The job of the board is to coordinate further development of the six state colleges and universities, three municipal universities and two junior colleges in Ohio which receive public support.

Ohio's Board of Regents will be relatively strong. Appropriation requests and other important matters will have to be approved by the board.

One of the principle concerns of the Ohio board will be to help determine which schools will be allowed to have graduate programs for doctoral degrees, which are expensive operations.

Ohio has the same problem every other state has—money. In 1963 the voters of the state approved a $250 million bond issue. Current proposals, such as a new state school in Cleveland and a $40 million medical school, plus other proposed expenditures total more than $300 million.

In Indiana, the two large state universities seem to have steered away from duplication to a considerable extent. Indiana U. sticks pretty close to liberal arts, medicine, law and commerce. Purdue specializes mostly in engineering and agriculture. The smaller schools in the state emphasize teacher training.

California set up a Coordinatin Council for Higher Education in 1960. It is advisory and now has a study of the state's educational programs under way which it will report on next year.

Illinois has a Board of Higher Education,, set up in 1961, which has power to turn down expansion proposals.

All across the land there has been growth of schools and with that changes of names to indicate the expansion.

In Iowa the three state schools were named distinctly:

The State University of Iowa at Iowa City (Big Ten school), was a liberal arts, law, medicine, dentistry, art, journalism and minor engineering school.

Iowa State Teachers College was just that.

Now the same schools are named State University of Iowa, Iowa State University, and Iowa State College.

Colorado has seen the same change. The University of Colorado at Boulder, founded in 1861, still has the same name. Colorado State College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts at Ft. Collins, founded in 1870, now is Colorado State University.

Western State College of Colorado at Gunnsion was founded in 1901 and still has the same name.

Southern Colorado State College is the new name for Pueblo Junior college. The school is in a transitional period and will open its new campus northeast of Pueblo, six miles from its present location, later this year.

Sooner or later the question is going to come up in the state legislature this year about putting the schools under one planning agency, and what will follow is your guess.

Carson Training Unit Gunning For Second Win

Ft. Carson's Marksmanship Training Unit riflemen were gunning for their second win of 1965 when they competed with an estimated 50 other military and civilians in the Southern Division Rifle Championships Saturday and today.

Scene of the matches was the National Guard Armory in northern Colorado Springs.

Four of those competing took team honors in January at the sixth annual Frontier Rifle Championships in Colorado Springs. They were SFC. Francis McCargar, Staff Sgt. Linwood Waterfield, Sgt. Brian Epperson and PFC. David Deyell.

COMPUTER M.D.

NEW YORK (UPI) — What does a thinking machine do when it gets sick? It takes its own pulse and writes a prescription. Thomas A. Wood, president of Decision Systems, Inc., a computer programming company of Teaneck, N. J., explains it this way:

"When a computer acts up, we feed it a diagnostic program, and out comes an answer like, 'I have a transistor loose in my arithmetic unit.'"

Former Carson Dental Chief Honored

Col. Will M. Clark (ret.), former Ft. Carson, Colo., dental chief and chief prosthodontist at U. S. Army Support Group, Ft. Huachuca, Ariz., was awarded the Legion of Merit by order of President Johnson.

Colonel and Mrs. Clark and her mother, Mrs. Cora Schafroth of Colorado Springs, are at home in Tucson, Ariz., for the winter. The colonel was a civilian dentist in northern Colorado before starting his Army career which ended in August 1964 in Arizona with his retirement.

The Legion of Merit decoration citation mentions the colonel's exceptionally meritorious service from July 1957 to August 1964, at Fort Hauachuca, Ft. Carson and as commander of the 665th Medical Group and group dental surgeon for U. S. Army Pacific.

"He established an outstanding dental training program at Ft. Carson; introduced the most current techniques and dental treatment in Korea; and worked diligently to support the Preventive Dentistry Program," his citation reads in part.

REGRETS FORECAST

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—Henry Rockwood, chief weather forecaster here for 18 years who leaves soon for a supervisory post in New York, regrets most a prediction he made in November, 1950. It called for "colder with snow flurries."

The next day the district was buried under 30 inches of snow.

Soviets Condemn U. S. 'Barbarous Bombing'

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union condemned the United States today in strong terms for what it called "barbarous bombing" in Laos and demanded that the United States get out of Southeast Asia.

A statement, issued by the official Soviet news agency Tass, repeated a Soviet call for a new Geneva conference to guarantee the neutrality of the tiny, landlocked kingdom.

The United States has supplied planes to the Laotian Air Force to bomb Communist supply lines crossing southern Laos in an effort to slow up Communist assistance to the Viet Cong in South Viet Nam.

Deputy and 'Daughters' Large Family

Deputy Sheriff and Mrs. Harry Orvis have 85 daughters. The first is the one they raised. The other 84 are members of Job's Daughters, Bethel 31, Security, a group of girls between the ages of 12 and 20. As guardian and associate guardian of the group Deputy and Mrs. Orvis organize and participate in camping trips and outings ranging from tobogganning in the winter to philanthropic projects throughout the year.

A sergeant in the Army, Deputy Orvis retired in 1960 at Ft. Carson, after more than 20 years of service. He and his wife live in Cormacks Trailer Court.

Sgt. Orvis and his family traveled extensively in the service, and he served a tour in Bordeaux, France. He served as a military policeman and later in the veterinarian service as a meat inspector. He said that although he misses service life, he enjoys knowing people as he and two other officers patrol their 20 by 36 mile beat, Irene Pompea reports.

Deputy and Mrs. Orvis helped organize Job's Daughters in Security in 1959 and have remained active in the group since.

Mrs. Orvis, who came to Colorado at the age of four, claims to be just about a native. She says that her husband has the patience of Job to handle the girls of Job's Daughters and maintain his constant good humor. Since Deputy Orvis changes shifts from week to week, the girls try to plan their social activities and projects so that he can participate.

The girls have participated extensively in the March of Dimes campaign. They have worked with Mrs. Frank Wizek, Security March of Dimes chairman, and have delivered more than 10 Mothers March envelopes to block leaders.

Services Set Monday Muriel D. Patton

Mrs. Muriel D. Patton, wife of Rolland Patton, of Cadleen Motel, Canon City, died Thursday at a Canon City nursing Home. Funeral services will be held at 10 a.m. Monday at the Chapel of the Garden, Canon City, with burial in Evergreen Cemetery, Colorado Springs at 12 noon. The Holt and Wilson Mortuary is in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Patton was a member of the Methodist Church and, of Cactus Rebekah Lodge No. 24 of Pueblo, and LAPM No. 5, and was former resident of the Odd Fellows Home in Canon City. She was born in Iowa April 17, 1898, and went to Canon City in 1959 from Pueblo. Besides her husband she is survived by a son by a former marriage, Staff Sgt. Arthur Walsetd, McClelland AFB, California, and five grandchildren.

ASTRONAUT'S VIEW—Here's what you'd see from your windows as your spacecraft rendezvoused with another in orbit to link up and transfer men and supplies. The windows are actually television screens on which computer-driven views are presented exactly as they would be seen by an astronaut. The manned orbital laboratory simulator here is part of an advanced system called an Integrated Manned Space Systems Simulator, which is nearing completion at the Astronautics division of General Dynamics Corp., San Diego, Calif When completed the entire system will be capable of simulating in detail every conceivable manned mission in earth orbit, to the moon or any planet in the solar system. Its purpose is to study man's role in space to gain a better understanding of the requirements of crew systems and spacecraft design.

Lobola' Pay for Bride Still Pride of Africans

By KEVIN J. HAMILTON

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — The young African lawyer looked incredulous. "How on earth can you be proud of a woman for whom you did not pay lobola?" he asked in impeccable English.

His words bring to light at least one aspect of life in which emergent Africa prefers to remain traditional — marriage customs.

"Lobola" is a payment traditionally made in cattle, but today often in cash, by an African bridegroom or his parents to the parents of his prospective wife. The amount varies with the "worth" of the girl.

The early white settlers in Africa thought originally the lobola payment meant an outright purchase of the woman, and criticized it along with slavery. But modern anthropology has shown this is not the case.

Lobola, in the words of one city African, is "a kind of payment to the girl's parents during our marriage, to please them." Another young man said, "Lobola should always be paid to the parents as a sign of respect to the people who have kept her since she was born."

It is the return of the investment made by African parents in rearing their offspring. It is a mark of respect, not just a cash payment when the goods are delivered.

Lobola has taken many forms among the different African tribes. In Zambia for instance, the tribes of the northwestern province give hoes and axes. In the southern province cattle are the offering, and among tribes such as the Bemba and Tonga, beads are the customary gift.

In urban areas today lobola is paid almost exclusively in cash, and varies between 20 and 30 pounds sterling ($56 and $84) depending upon the eligibility and education of the girl.

With the immorality and large-scale breakdown of family life that has hit the urban centers of Johannesburg, Salisbury and all other large towns in southern Africa, lobola more than ever is an affirmation of the bridegroom's seriousness of purpose.

There are, of course, those who want to do away with lobola. A letter to the "agony" column of a Rhodesian weekly summed up the position in this way:

"I think the time has come to reason about lobola. In most cases lobola has endangered many families.

"Lobola has been a good custom to our forefathers because during past centuries all people had enough cattle, goats and sheep with which to pay their lobola.

"But now where all people depend on money it seems parents are not preparing a better future for their daughters."

In spite of the reluctance by most to do away with the system, what is happening is that the African bride is turning her back on traditional wedding ceremonies and going more and more for European-style weddings complete with chapel, maids of honor, cake and in some cases champagne.

Wedding dresses are all the rage and brides-to-be are paying small fortunes for them (presumably financed from lobola). Some firms are cashing in on the idea by offering pay-as-you-marry gowns on the installment plan.

City Council Studies Memorial Operations

The Colorado Springs City council has done some review recently of policies at Memorial Hospital.

One matter which has been under study is the nursing school operated in connection with the hospital.

A new class was not admitted last year although studies are continuing for those who had enrolled earlier. The course now takes about 2½ years to complete.

However, the board of trustees of the hospital, have not made a formal request that the ordinance be changed to discontinue the school. Indications are that a new class will be enrolled this fall.

"Lately the City Council has felt that it should concern itself more with the affairs of the hospital, including the nursing school operation," Mayor Harry Hoth said.

He said there have been meetings between council and the board "for the purpose of discussing and cooperating in matters of policy at the hospital."

For the past several years the hospital has been operating somewhat independently and hasn't asked the city for money except for bond retirement and some capital outlay. This year's capital outlay is $26,000, plus some $66,000 for bond retirement.

Robison Takes Over Top Woolworth Post

A veteran of 24 years with the Woolworth chain has taken over as manager of Colorado Springs' downtown F. W. Woolworth store. Ray R. Robison came to his new post in mid-January from Omaha, Neb.

Robison's career with Woolworth's began on Feb. 4, 1931 when he began work as a trainee at the Parsons, Kan. store. For the six years that followed, he trained at several Woolworth outlets in Kansas and Nebraska.

In 1937, Robison travelled to Salt Lake City to fill his first managerial position. After five months there, he was transferred to Liberal, Kan., where he served as manager for two years.

Manager of the Loveland, Colo. Woolworth store was Robison's next post. Following three years there, he managed the Denver store, at the corner of 8th and Santa Fe Streets, for more than four years.

A transfer to Great Bend, Kan. came next. He managed that store for some four and a half years and then was moved to Odessa, Tex. for a four and a half year stint as manager.

In 1957, he received a transfer to the Omaha downtown store, which he headed until 1962 when he moved to Omaha's Crossroads Shopping Center Woolworth store. After a year at the latter, Robison was sent back to downtown Omaha to open and head Woolworth's new "super store," until his recent transfer here.

In the Woolworth chain, transfers usually serve as promotions. Robison, however, actually took a step down to come to the Colorado Springs outlet. The store he previously managed in Omaha employed 285 persons, while the downtown store here employs about 35.

"I love Colorado," said Robison, "and when I heard Mench (Charles, the former manager; was retiring, I applied for this position." He continued, "Although it is a smaller store, I wanted to get back to Colorado for several reasons, mainly because I love this part of the country."

When asked if he planned any changes at the downtown store, Robison replied, "I just hope to fill Mr. Mench's shoes. There won't be any changes in the operation."

The native of Parsons, Kan., places fishing and hunting at the top of his hobby list. He is a member of the Methodist Church and has been active through the years in numerous civic clubs.

Robison lives with his wife, Irene, at 2018 Atfon Way. Their son, Ray Jr., graduated last year from the University of Nebraska and is row serving as an officer in the U. S. Air Force. A daughter Roslee, is a senior at the University of Utah, majoring in English.

APPROPRIATE TITLE

LONDON (UPI)—American pop singer P. J. Proby, whose tour was banned after his skin-tight trousers ripped on the stage during a recent performance, has a new record coming out shortly. It's entitled: "I Apologize."

1,350 Died in '64 Catastrophes Say Insurors

Catastrophes last year took the lives of about 1,350 persons in the United States — somewhat fewer than in 1963, according to statisticians of Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. Catastrophes are defined as accidents in which five or more persons are killed.

During the calendar year, there were eight catastrophies, each of which took more than 25 lives. Five involved aviation and three were natural disasters

In the greatest of these catastropes, 85 persons were killed on March 1, when an airplane of a non-scheduled carrier crashed into a ridge near Lake Tahoe in California.

Only a few days earlier — on February 25 — 58 persons were killed when a scheduled plane fell into Lake Ponchartrain, near New Orleans. Another scheduled plane crashed on May 7 near Concord, California, taking 44 lives.

Other aviation disasters were a crash which resulted in 39 deaths near Newport, Tennessee, on July 9, and another in Las Vegas during a snowstorm on November 15, when 29 persons were killed.

Two of the natural disasters were floods. The most serious occurred near the end of the year when high waters poured over large areas of several Western states and claimed about 40 lives.

The other was in northern Montana on June 8 and 9, when 36 lives were lost. About the same number of persons were killed in the remaining natural disaster, a hurricane and associated tornadoes that struck southern Louisiana on October 3.

Last year, motor vehicle accidents accounted for almost one-third of all fatalities in which five or more persons were killed, the statisticians reported.

Civil aviation accounted for one-fourth of the total; fires and explosions — mainly in homes and apartments — were responsible for one-fifth, and natural catastrophes for an additional one-seventh of the deaths. The remaining loss of life resulted mostly from military aviation accidents.

While catastrophic fires and explosions, motor vehicle accidents and accidents in mines and water transportation took fewer lives last year than in 1963, deaths from aviation disasters showed an appreciable rise in the year just ended.

Natural catastrophes also accounted for a some what larger number of fatalities last year, the statisticians said.

AG Reviews 30 Eventful Years, Meet at Broadmoor

The more than 700 grocery retailers who make up the membership of Associated Gropart of their 30th Anniversary first organized AG in 1935 could Convention recounting and analyzing the radical changes and momentous events in AG's history which have shaped the progress of the grocery industry.

The giant food buying and distributing organization will hold its annual meeting February 7, 8 and 9 at the Broadmoor Hotel in Colorado Springs.

The 15 original members who first organized AG in 1935 could not, in their wildest dreams, have envisioned the fantastic growth and progress that retailing has experienced in thirty years. As the era of super market chains was dawning, these first 15 foresaw the need to combine buying, merchandising and advertising strength in order to compete with the competitive situations.

By 1947 there were 250 retailer members who approved the awarding of a contract for the construction of a new $1 million warehouse, which was finished by September of 1948.

AG members voted in 1948 to admit owner-operated stores outside Colorado into the organization. During 1948, consumers got a hint of the kind of modern markets to come as AG member Con Becker opened one of the first super markets in the region. His ultra-modern super market set many new retailing standards for that era.

During 1949, AG's new warehouse chalked $11,000,000 in sales. Fred Fishburn was appointed to the post of General Manager in July of '49. Fishburn still holds that position.

By the end of 1949, the AG warehouse had enjoyed a 31 per cent sales increase. A new mrchandising trend during 1950 was the self-service meat department, and food pioneers were beginning to discuss the manufacture of complete frozen meals. Shoppers greeted new advances like frozen foods, baking mixes, laundry detergent, vitamin enriched flours, improved packaging and freshness control in food products.

The membership of Associated Grocers had grown to a total of 291 retailers by 1951, and total warehouse sales for the previous year were $16,412,000. That year, at their convention, members witnessed the burning of the mortgage on their two-year-old warehouse.

In May of 1951, AG bought the Amato & Sons produce operation, in order to improve the quality of produce in all member stores.

In 1952, 350 AG members hailed a sales increase of 46 per cent, and expressed relief that food prices were beginning to level off. One-stop shopping was the new trend, as AG markets began to stock more non-food items.

The growing organization opened a new 73,000 sq. ft. warehouse in Pueblo during 1953, and added 58,000 sq. ft. to the Denver warehouse at 3rd and Rio Grande Street. Members voted to raise the 400-member limit to admit 100 more retailers into the organization so that AG price and service advantages could reach more consumers.

Growth continued so rapidly that in 1957, AG bought the Burlington Railroad Locomotive Shops at 5151 Bannock in Denver and spent $1,200,000 for conversion and expansion of the buildings. In 1961, 40,000 sq. ft. was added to the Pueblo warehouse, and a new warehouse was opened in Albuquerque, in order to expand operations in New Mexico.

At the convention in 1963, association president J. A. Brillhart resigned his post and Gordon Rissler of Greeley, Colorado was elected to the office. That year AG acquired a new IBM 1401 computer to handle inventory and payroll at the Denver warehouse.

By 1964, a new 138,000 sq. ft. addition to the Denver warehouse was completed, making a total of over 612,000 sq. ft. of warehouse space in the three distribution centers. This increased capacity enabled AG to offer more products at lower prices to shoppers in AG's six-state distribution area.

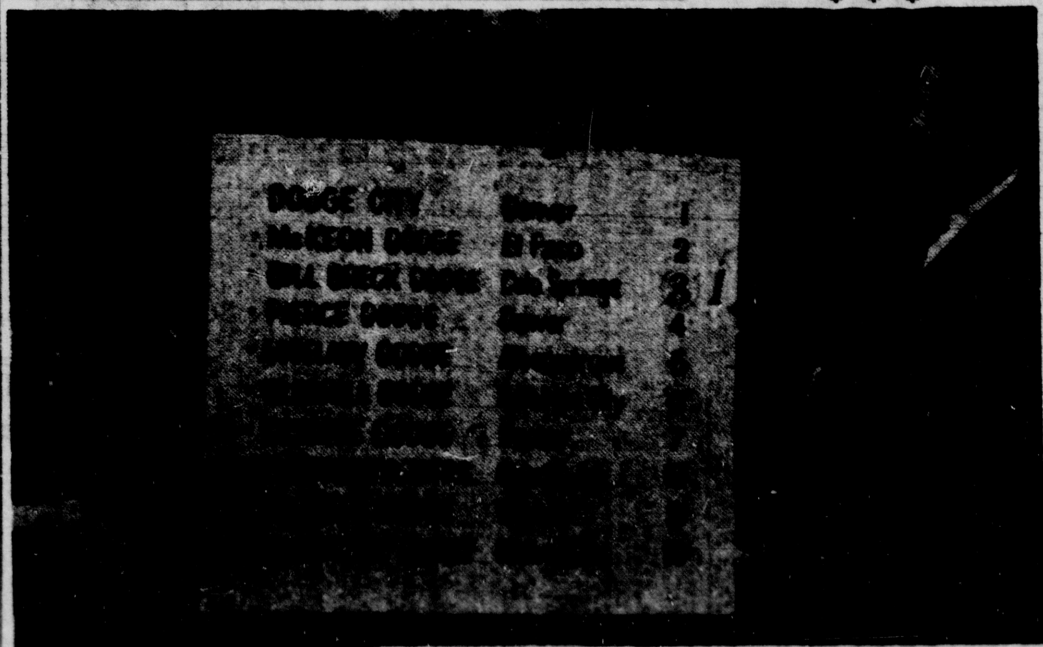
This year, AG's 30th Anniversary year, more than 700 members will gather at the Broadmoor Hotel in Colorado Springs to hear reports on progress made in 1964, and to make plans for further growth and improved consumer serivice. If the history of Associated Grocers is the gauge, shoppers can look forward to even lower prices and greatly modernized services in the near future.

AG officials pointed out that, as a result of competitive free enterprise in the food industry, the average American family spends only 19 per cent of its disposable income for food. In 1947 they spent over 25 per cent. In Russia today, AG reminds us, families spend over 50 per cent of their spendable income just for food.

"There is a greater abundance, greater variety and higher quality of food in the U. S. than in any other country," said Fred Fishburn, executive vice president and general manager of AG. "All this progress is a result of the dedication and competitive spirit of American businessmen and retailers like the members of Associated Grocers of Colorado."

Fishburn concluded with the statement, "As we celebrate our 30th Anniversary, everyone at AG is grateful to our customers in all six of our states for their patronage and loyalty. Without it, the associations' tremendous growth would not have been possible.

We will continue to work for improvements in our products and services, that in the end, the saving may be passed along to the consuming public."



WE'RE NUMBER ONE — Jim Hayes, general manager of Bill Breck Dodge in Colorado Springs, points to his company's new rating in the Denver sales region. On the strength of selling 76 new Dodge cars and trucks in January, Bill Breck has moved from number three to number one in the eight state region. In winning the honor, Bill Breck topped Dodge dealers in Denver, El Paso, Albuquerque and Salt Lake City, among others. (Gazette Telegraph Photo)

Bill Breck Dodge Tops Eight States in Sales

There should be a saying that "one telegram is worth a thousand words." That was the message conveyed by Jim Hayes, general manager for Bill Breck Dodge, when he received a telgram Thursday from the Dodge regional manager.

It read, "Congratulations on being the top volume Dodge dealer for the month of January in the Denver region. This is an excellent job. Keep up the good work. Our thanks to you and your entire organization — E. F. Kenningham, regional manager."

Since its start in Colorado Springs on Nov. 1, Bill Brick Dodge has aimed at number one in sales volume of all Dodge dealers in the eight state Denver sales region. Now, just three months after its start, Bill Breck Dodge has achieved that distinction.

Becoming number one was not an easy job, as the local Dodge dealership had to triple the previous sales performances of Marksheffel Motor Co., its predecessor. During the first 10 months of 1964, the old Dodge dealer averaged 24 cars a month. Bill Breck has sold a record 76 Dodge cars and trucks during January.

Dodge sales in Colorado Springs for January exceeded those of dealers in Denver, Salt Lake City, Albuquerque and other larger cities in the seven states surrounding Colorado.

Hayes attributed the big boost to a revitalizing of the dealership, sales incentives, a more competitive trading policy, the Dodge product and his employees.

Advertising in newspapers, on television and radio was also cited as a major reason for Breck's rapid growth here. When asked about the future outlook, Hayes replied, "I don't feel we've reached our peak yet."

Bill Breck Dodge has another location in Tucson. Breck and Hayes are partners in the firm. In Colorado Springs, Breck employs 46 persons.

Village Inns Number 20; More Under Construction

Nowadays, a person with ambition, leadership qualities and $22,500 in cash could own and operate a Village Inn Pancake House franchise restaurant. It sounds like a lot of money, but some energetic young men who felt it was a wise investment, are now collecting $30,000 annually for their time and trouble.

Village Inn Pancake Houses, Inc., were started in November, 1958 in Denver when Jim P. Mola and Merton S. Anderson opened their first restaurant. Now, just six years later, they have 20 franchise restaurants in 14 states, with eight more under construction.

Denver now has three Village Inns, Albuquerque and Omaha have two each and there are franchises in St. Louis, Kansas City, Mo.; Mobile, Ala.; Salt Lake City, San Diego and Oklahoma City, among others.

Those presently under construction are at Milwaukee, Springfield, Mo.; Tulsa, Okla.; Casper, Wyo.; Lafayette, La.; Dallas, Phoenix and Long Island.

According to A. F. Reesman, controller for the company, the restaurant total has risen on the average of four each year. The firm's target now is a new one every 60 days.

By 1960, Village Inn Pancake Houses numbered three. In 1961, there were eight and the number rose by four each year to 20 by the end of 1964.

Two prototype buildings, designed by James H. Johnson and Associates of Denver, are now being used by all new franchises. There are two building sizes, one which seats 110 and one with seating for 165. At present, the 20 pancake houses employ more than 800 people, from owner-managers down to bus boys.

Mola and Anderson are still at the helm of the now prosperous business, with the former serving as president and the latter as secretary-treasurer. They have a combined total of 35 years in the business of operating restaurants. This experience is being put to use in schools the company runs to train managerial personnel, along with bookeepers, hostesses and kitchen managers.

The two company heads would rather have inexperienced persons fill the manager's slots in their franchises as they want their own proven techniques used, rather than others. It is necessary, however, that a manager have leadership ability and a great deal of ambition.

On the average, single franchises have sales annually totalling between $250,000 and $300,000. Total sales of all the company's outlets is now more than $6 million a year and it is just beginning to grow.

Village Inn Pancake Houses have now penetrated the east, with one located in Trumbull, Conn. They will be on a nationwide scale in just a few years, according to Reesman. A restaurant is even being planned in Montreal.

Headquarters for Village Inn are located in a small office at 1000 W. Fillmore St. The business, however, will probably move to Denver next year.

Village Inn menus now feature 19 varieties of pancakes, ranging from plain buttermilk to strawberry or Hawaiian. Also on the menu are steaks, fish, pork chops, chicken and a complete line of breakfast foods.

Reesman says the three most important factors for success of a Village Inn Pancake House are: the right location, good management and maintaining the highest quality in the selection and preparation of food products along with a pleasant atmosphere.

New Medical Building Features Pharmacy, Lab

Services of the Northside Pharmacy, Northside Laboratory, four physicians and two dentists are all being offered at the new, Northside Medical and Dental Building, 3021 N. Hancock St., near the Venetian Village Shopping Center.

A local pharmacist, Joe Pieper, is proprietor of the new pharmacy and secretary of the Northside Medical Building Corporation. He is also owner of Pieper Rexall Drug Store, 2431 W. Colorado Ave., and the West Side Pharmacy, at 3808 W. Colorado Ave.

The Northside Pharmacy, which occupies 1,200 square feet of the 10,000 square foot building, is in business strictly as a professional pharmacy. It is being managed by A. C. Conrey, a registered pharmacist.

According to Pieper, the new pharmacy carries a complete line of prescription drugs and pharmaceutical aids, but does not stock any of the sundries usually found in drug stores.

The $235,000 building was completed in mid-January. Actual construction by the Metzler-Bernabee Construction Co., took four months. The modern, two-story structure was designed by Walt Miller, a Colorado Springs architect. A 20-car parking lot surrounds the all-brick building.

Each of the doctors' and dentists' suites has four or more rooms and average 1,200 square feet of floor space. The entire building is air conditioned.

"We hope the Northside Medical and Dental Building will serve as a welcome addition to northeast Colorado Springs," said Pieper. The facility is the only one of its type in that immediate area.

Financial Needs Filled at One Stop Super Mart

Financial Advsors, a new business at 2232 E. Pikes Peak Ave. in the Plaza Shopping Center, is a financial service super market. Owner - General Manager Frank Brown believes that financiers as well as food shoppers like the convenience of one-stop shopping.

Brown says that just as the super markets have replaced many a neighborhood grocery store, his finance mart will make many similar places obsolete.

Financial Advisors is divided into four main sections: Insurance Mart, Finance Mart, Real Estate Mart and Reading Mart. It also features Community Services, which include document copying, a buy-sell-swap bulletin board, typing of letters and manuscripts, notary public and widows' assistance.

The Insurance Mart is equipped to handle every insurance need including personal, family, business, auto and home insurance. Financial Advisors will also handle financing of insurance premiums.

Mutual funds, investment information and savings and loan association plans all come uner the Finance Mart heading. The investment information includes all the latest literature from the nation's stock exchanges. High interest savings plans are handled through various California savings and loan associations.

The Reading Mart has a vast assortment of financial literature which is available on a lending library basis.

Income tax service, with a basic price of $4.50 for both federal and state returns, is available on a 24-hour basis. Preparations after 6 p.m.. are handled by appointment only.

Widow's assistance is a free service of Financial Advisors. Much of this work is done through women's and church groups and commercial advertising. The service is free to any widow who needs assistance with insurance matters, investment or real estate problems. It also covers aid in budgeting and obtaining loans.

Literature used at Financial Advisors is from the American Institute for Economic Research, one of the nation's foremost financial authorities.

The completely new concept in financial assistance opened its doors Feb. 1, after what Brown termed, "quite a lot of planning." Brown is a retired Air Force officer, who was formerly assigned to Air Defense Command Headquarters in Colorado Springs. He has been in the city since 1954.

His wife, Jane, serves as office manager at "the sign of the Scotch dollar." Brown has been associated with the insurance and investment fund business since his retirement in 1962. He is presetly serving as vice - president of the local Retired Officers Association and is executive secretary for Retired Officers Mutual Aid.

"We don't use any pressure salesmanship," says Brown. "We invite everyone to come in and just browse. They won't be bothered unless they require assistance."

Steel Companies Approach All Time High

The nation's steel companies are approaching the all - time high rate of steel production and should surpass it this month, Iron Age magazine predicts .

A new wave of inventory buying for pipe and wire products, both of which have lagged in the stockpile race, should put the weekly tonnage over 2,690,000 net tons. This previous high was set in the week of December 12, 1959.

Current production, on a weekly basis, is less than 2 per cent under the record rate, the national metalworking weekly points out. Only bottlenecks in finishing facilities in sheet and plate, as well as other flat-rolled products, have prevented production from soaring past the former high.

Iron Age says that production had reached capacity for finishing the flat - rolled products. But pipe and wire has been below capacity and new demand for these products should put ingot production over the former peak.

Demand for most steel products has become more frantic in the wake of the breaking off of negotiations between the steel companies and the USWA .The intra - unior power struggle between David McDonald and challenger I. W .Abel has only added to the urgency behind the demand for steel in advance of a possible strike May 1.

Further, the feeling is growing that unless there is a clear-cut victory in the Feb. 9 union within the union will drag on for weeks either in the courts or within the union hierarcy.

With delivery delinquencies becoming more common, mills are making equally frantic efforts to meet demand and get their books in order.

In the Midwest, for example, attempts by some mills to get customers to move delivery dates back after May 1 are having little effect. Customers who are already complaining about late deliveries are not likely to gamble on a "no strike" assumption.

Instead, the big steel users are using every pressure available to get mills to book more steel for March and April. Although estimates of inventory stockpiling has generally fallen far behind user schedules.

This is due to user rates of chew - up which have far exceeded estimates. Even without the inentory buildup, steel production would be at a high rate just to satisfy day-to-day demand.

Many steel users are extending their ordering beyond the May 1 deadline. Apparently they are looking past a strike and intend to be protected after an increasingly possible work stoppage.

Extraordinary Capital Gains

These special-nature stocks—starting, of course, from a very modest base—have achieved average gains in operating profits of more than 1000% since 1961. Dynamic new gains are expected in the 12 months ahead.

Moreover—because of Government rulings purposely designed to foster the continued growth of these pioneer enterprises—a large portion of their operating profits are not subject to Federal income taxes.

Incredibly, the stock market at large has not yet taken note of the remarkable potentiality of these Special Situation stocks—all recently priced at discounts ranging from 20% to 60% below asset value.

For independent stock market investors who seek to be ahead of the crowd, the 9 Special Situations analyzed in full in Value Line's new Special Report could bring rewards of extraordinary magnitude.

Brookwood Subdivision To Have Spring Opening

Located on Academy Blvd. at the interesection of Woodmen Road, Brookwood comprises 86 residential sites and a commercial area that will be developed into a neighborhood shopping area.

Principals in the development are Floyd Stanley, and Jim Cox.

Stanley was one of the main developers of Falcon Estates and is at present carrying on that area.

Cox has been a leading home builder in Colorado Springs for the past four years operating under the name of Cox Construction Co.

The name of Brookwood was chosen because it so perfectly describes the area. A small brook runs through the area with many lovely big trees alongside. Nature in its most beautiful dress throughout the seasons of the year is there for all to enjoy in the perfect view of Pikes Peak.

Brookwood promises to be something new in subdivision design. The perimeter of the area will be fenced with a 6' stockade fence affording the residents privacy and lending prestige to the area.

Entrance to the area will be enhanced by attractive entrance ways with a fountain at the main entrance.

The area will be served by water from the Woodman Water District and sewage disposal will be handled by a disposal plant. All streets in the subdivision will be paved and the homes will be served by underground utilities.

The unrestricted view of the Peak will give to those who build their homes in the area a feeling of living "out of town," while the facilities of easy access via the newly paved Academy Blvd. or the Freeway a short distance away adds to the ease of driving to the downtown area, the Academy or to Denver.

The pleasure of living in a restricted area means so much to those who are particular in the home and area of their choice. The perimeter fencing, the roads with their gentle curves and the sites on the cul-de-sac's (circular areas surrounded by sites but no thoroughfare) give a particular sense of graciousness to be enjoyed. No highways with fast speed mar the Brookwood sites.

Because of the beautiful view, location and controlled development Brookwood will be an address that all those that live in the area will be proud to call theirs and it will add joy to their manner of living.

Present plans indicate that construction of homes will start in February. Twenty-three sites have been sold to date to many of Colorado Springs leading homebuilders. Strict architectural control will be enforced in order that Brookwood will develop into the area's most beautiful subdivision.

How to Buy, Sell and Operate Through Broker

By MORTON YARMON

When you buy shares of stock in a company, you may either keep the certificates of ownership in your possession or leave them at your broker's office. If you have bought these stocks with an eye to selling them shortly afterwards, it of course would be more convenient to leave them with your broker and thus avoid the necessity of returning them to him when he has sold them for your account.

If you leave the certificates at your broker's office, you may ask that they be registered either in your name of in his name — in "street name," as this latter procedure is known. Either way, of course, the shares are your, along with dividends and any other rights to which they entitle you. If the shares are left in street name, your broker's monthly statement to you will give a complete rundown of just what he is holding for you.

When cash comes into your account through a dividend check or a sale, it may either be left in your account, to be used toward the purchase of other securities or it may be sent to you by check.

Most brokerage house customers give their instructions by telephone. Sometimes an order can be handled while you remain on the phone. More normally, your broker will call you back when the purchase or sale you ordered has taken place. You will also get a written confirmation from him by mail.

If the order was for a sale, this confirmation can serve as your receipt. If it was a purchase, the statement of the cost in effect is a statement of what you owe. These statements should be kept permanently. Among other purposes, they will be handy when you figure out what you owe in income taxes.

Brokerage houses are quipped to provide you with researched information about securities. Some of the larger houses even send experts to make on-the-spot checks on the operations of companies.

For the most part this wealth of information is yours free for the asking, to help you make your investment decisions. In addition, the registered representative assigned to your account will answer specific questions for you, and give you sound advice should you ask for it.

Strout Realty Opens Office To Serve Colorado Springs

Strout Realty, the largest real estate corporation in the world, has opened a branch office in Colorado Springs at 441 N. Union Blvd.

Company officials have named Jim R. Farr and Marilyn Mann as co-managers of the new branch office, according to information received from Strout's western headquarters in Los Angeles.

A multiple sales organization, Strout Realty has offices from coast to coast, dealing in ranches, farms, homes and businesses. Its operation covers most of the western United States, with 15 branch offices in Colorado alone.

The huge company features a nationwide service for securing buyers for its real estate. Its advertising budget is hundreds of thousands of dollars each year, distributed among more than 500 newspapers across the country. Strout has catalogs which are ristributed to more than 400,000 real estate prospects annually.

Prosperity and progressive growth in El Paso County were cited as the main reasons for opening the new Strout office. Many of the company's prospects had indicated a preference for the Pikes Peak Region, so the local office has decided to handle real estate in the surrounding communities, also.

Farr, who is 41, is a native Texan and has a background which includes military school, college, ranching, military service and real estate. He has attended Rice Institute and Texas Christian University and was a member of the Marine Corps during World War II, where he saw action in the South Pacific.

He is a member of the Christian Church, Masonic Lodge No. 472 in Uvalde, Tex., and the Uvalde County Farm Bureau. He is also secreatary and treasurer of the Reed Ranch Polo Club, here.

He lives with his wife, Margaret, and their two daughters, Phyllis and Kathleen, in Woodland Park.

Mrs. Mann has attended Bradley and DePaul Universities. For three years, she actively worked at a youth ranch on the Rampart Range Road, near Woodland Park.

The native of Chicago and her husband, who operates Man-Size Hamburgers in Colorado Springs, have three sons; Bill, Todd and Scott. She is presently serving as treasurer of the Washington-Irving PTA and is a member of the First Methodist Church.

Ruth River, who has lived in Colorado for 19 years, and Chuck Copus, who specializes in ranch and mountain properties, are also associated with the local Strout office.

During its first few weeks of operation in the region, officials of Strout Realty are inviting residents to come to their office, browse through it and discuss their real estate questions.

Reading School Opens Classes At Weltech

The Culbreath School of Speed Reading officially opened classes at 4 p.m. Saturday in the Weltech College building, 3113 N. Hancock.

Director Myrna Culbreath said the school will guarantee to double a person's present reading speed. Many students will be capable of reading more than 1,000 words per minute after completion of the nine-week, 18-hour course, she said. Most beginning students start between 200 and 250 words a minute, the director said, and each person works according to his own rate of speed.

No machines or films are used in teaching speed writing by the Culbreath School. Cards are implemented to widen a student's wordage vision.

A Culbreath School of Speed Reading also is located in Pueblo. Four years of research led to the development of the speed reading method taught by the school.

Registration may be made by calling 634-1102.

Home Furniture Displays Top Colonial Furniture

By DAVE OSBORN
Gazette Telegraph Staff Writer

One of the most complete lines of Early American furniture west of the Mississippi is on display at Home Furniture's Colonial Shop at 325 S. Cascade Ave. The main Home Furniture location is at 326 S. Tejon St.

Among the Early American, colonial and casual furniture lines featured at the Colonial Shop are Ethan Allen, Drexel, Roger Conant, Ranch Oak and others. These furnishings, all arranged in individual room settings cover nearly 20,000 square feet of floor space in the Colonial Shop. Also included in the Cascade Avenue outlet is a recently completed annex which displays a complete line of miscellaneous upholstered sofas and chairs.

Home Furniture's complete furniture line, in both its main store and the Colonial Shop, also encompasses a wide price range — from the least to the most expensive furnishings and accessories available. In the past, Home Furniture has had an "expensive" stigma attached to its name, one which is partially false.

It is true that Home carries a line of Ethan Allen groups, among the finest furnishings in the world. One little known fact about the local company, however, is that they also have a line of economical furnishings on display. With this in mind, Home Furniture is equipped to fill the customers needs without exceeding his budget.

A leisurely atmosphere prevails throughout Home Furniture's two Colorado Springs outlets. Sales personnel, many of whom are qualified interior decorators, wlcome customers to browse in the store's relaxed atmosphere. And there is no "hard sell" or pressure salesmanship.

Mrs. Adele Obodov, buyer and manager of the Colonial Shop, reports that many of the stores regular customers drop in periodically to browse through the dozens of room settings just to see what is new in furniture. "We welcome this," says Mrs. Obodov.

The Colonial Shop, which has been at its present location for five years and in existence for 10 years, is a complete, one-stop shopping center for colonial furniture and accessories. It features everything from paintings and table lamps to full size room groupings. All room settings are complete and are arranged exactly as they would be in the home. If any help is needed in selection or display once a customer gets the furniture home, Home Furniture will supply an interior decorator free of charge.

Twice each year, store representatives travel to central furniture markets to buy furniture. When choosing the furnishings, the Home Furniture experts make sure their customers get the benefit of everything newly developed in the industry. The store's buyers make it a point to get the best value for the money they spend, in order to give the customer the same benefit.

Three months ago, an annex was added to the Colonial Shop for display of upholstered furniture. It allows Home Furniture to display most of its additional inventory, up to 250 sofas and 400 chairs. Furniture in the annex ranges in price from the most modest to expensive, high quality upholstered pieces.

Types of furniture included in the annex display are Early American, traditional, contemporary and French provincial, among others. It is all part of the broadest cross - section of furniture of any store in the state, in actual stock and resources.

In the near future, Home Furniture's Colonial Shop will have in stock a line of economically priced Early American groupings. A new Drexel group is also expected. The grouping of pecan furnishings is called, "French in the Country Manner," and features a rustique or dark umber finish.

Ethan Allen American traditional groups have more than 400 pieces in the complete set. They are available in either maple, cherry, pine or mahogany.

A hardrock maple grouping, called Roger Conant, is the finest of its type available to Home Furniture. This group includes sets for the living room, dining room and bedroom.

Nearly 200 pieces are found in the Drexel American Review Group, a cherry wood group which features a veneer finish.

One of the most attractive and practical sets on display in the Colonial Shop is the Ethan Allen set of wall groupings. These are dressers and bookcases, which may be set along a wall and, by adding pieces to it, can be displayed at the entire length of the wall. Customers may buy this group one piece at a time and never have to fear that it may go out of stock in the future. It has remained constant for some 18 years.

Many other furniture lines are found in Home Furniture's mammoth 50,000 square foot display, at both the main store and the Colonial Shop.

EVERYTHING UNDER THE SUN—The Home Furniture Colonial Shop features a broad line of lamps, rugs and accessories in Early American and Colonial design including the authentic and unusual. The Home Furniture Colonial Shop encourages browsing among the room settings. The service of the Home Furniture interior design staff are available to its customers, at no charge.

Earle Simms To Speak at Grocer's Meet

Earle Simms, owner of Simms' Super Market in the Security Village Shopping Center, will address a meeting of members of Associated Grocers of Colorado, at AG's 30th Anniversary Convention, at the Broadmoor Hotel. Simms will speak Monday on retail merchandising of baked goods.

Many new developments of interest to consumers are expected to come out of the meeting, according to Simms.

Dr. McDivitt's speech, "Big Issues and Small Talk," will cover present and future problems of higher education, and the importance of education to business.

McDivitt has been prominent in Colorado education since obtaining his M. A. degree in education at the Colorado State College in 1947.

W. A. Stolte, marketing director of the Shurfine-Central Corporation, will tell the retailers about new manufacturing and marketing plans for the Shurfine line of foods, which is AG's own brand. A subject of prime consideration will be improved merchandising methods which will continue to allow retailers to feature the high quality Shurfine food products at lowest prices.

Stolte's speech is scheduled for Monday, the second day of AG's annual meeting.

Cholm G. Haughton, director of membership and personnel relations for the American Meat Institute, will address Associated Grocers retailers, Tuesday.

Haughton's talk will encompass management of modern meat departments and the recent McKinsey Meat Study. Points to be stressed are cost cutting through more efficient distribution and merchandising of meat products, and better training of personnel.

On the third day of the Convention AG retailers will hear about "Meat Merchandising in the '70s," from Jim Stimpson, manager of the meat division of Certified Grocers of California, Ltd.

Nationally known as an authority on retail meat merchandising and meat department operations, Stimpson will reveal plans and prophecies for the future.

International Introduces Three New Truck Lines

The motor truck division of International Harvester Company heralds a new and bigger year for the American trucking industry with the introduction of three major lines, it has been announced by D. F. Kuntz, motor truck divisional sales manager.

— a new line of Metro multi-stop delivery vehicles rated from 4,000 to 23,000 lb. GVW.

— the D-line of light-duty trucks, 4,000 to 15,000 lb. GVW.

"These new lines cover the extremes in capacity ratings, yet are united by their emphasis on both styling and machanical advances," Kuntz declared. "Truck owners and operators will be struck by the styling developments, but they will be even more impressed by the array of functional cab and chassis innovations."

The new CO-4000 series is available in six models: 4x2, 6x2 and 6x4 units, either gasoline or diesel-powered. Regular production tandem-axle models have GVW ratings up to 54,000 lb., GCW to 79,000 lb. Even higher ratings are possible, since this series has been designed with the advant of higher legal ratings in mind.

The lightweight all-welded aluminum cab on the CO-4000 has permited the use of bigger, stronger frame and driveline components that do not result in the penalty of added tractor weight.

Non-sleeper cabs are available in 50 and 73-in. BBC dimensions, sleepers in 73 and 83-in. BBC. The 83-in. sleeper cab has the largest berth of any COE cab on the market, will take an 80x36-in. mattress.

The ruggedly constructed cab is all welded, with the skin supported by an extra-strength sub-structure. The CO-4000 cab is the first designed specifically for aluminum construction.

Metro trucks have undergone the most sweeping modernization in the 30-year history of the name. The improvement most readily apparent is a new, uniform body design which gives all Metros a "family" appearance. Fleets using various sizes of multi-stops can now standardize one single fleet "image."

The new and broad-based Metro line has payload capacities from 174 to 885 cu. ft., and body lengths from 7 ft. to 18 ft. 8 in. It includes ten series with designations from M-700 to M-1700.

The new Metros have a large, large, full-width access panel above the front grille, through which routine maintenance operations can be performed from outside and in front. This means Metro units can be lined up side by side and given their daily checks by servicemen without need for the trucks being moved.

A new line of International light-duty trucks features more than a dozen styling changes. The new D-line, including rear wheel and all-wheel drive models, offers a wide choice of factory-installed bodies: Travelall, pickups, panels, Travelette, stakes, flatbeds, dumps and service-utility designs.

Optional trim features, many of which are available separately or as a package to add even more to the trucks' appearance, include deluxe hub caps, deluxe floor mats, deluxe interior trim and upholstery and dual horns.

Important mechanical advances of the D-line include new self-adjusting brakes for all 900, 1000, 1100 and 1200 models and two new heavy-duty rear axle options for the model 1000 Travelall, especially for trailer-pulling applications.

Citizens of Paraguay become eligible to vote at the age of 18. The 60 - seat parliament consists of one chamber and the president is elected for a 5-year term.

U.S. Teens 'Silly About Morals' Comments Scandinavian Visitor

By SHARON ERVIN
Gazete Telegraph Staff Writer

Dorte Kreilgaard takes dictation in seven different languages and gets confused only when she is tired.

A native of Denmark, Dorte has been in this country since October. She has been selected as an exchange secretary and worked for a jewelry company in Philadelphia until Christmas. At the end of her official stay, Dorte decided she would like to see more of this country before ging home. She bought a special bus ticket which allows her 99 days of travel for $99. She arranged to travel a day or two, stay in a YWCA for a few days and travel on. She reached Colorado Springs last week.

"I began learning English when I was 11," Dorte said, explaining her multi-lingual background. She is a tall, slender natural blond with high coloring and an alert air about her. "I took up German at 12. I also speak and read Swedish, Latin, French and Spanish." Dorte explained that in taking dictation in a language, one must think in that language.

"I am sure at night I dream in my native Danish," she said. "But as soon as I get up in the morning, I think about where I am and what I am going to do and I think that in the language of the country I am in."

Dorte had three years of language training in a business school. After graduation, she took a job as an exchange secretary in Germany.

"I try never to expect anything when I go out of Denmark," she said. "That way I am never greatly disappointed. I liked the German people as individuals but I didn't care for them as a whole. The main reason, I suppose, is that Denmark has been at war with Germany many times in the past 100 years and any people the Danes would disagree with that often, must have something wrong wrong with them."

Dorte explained that she likes American people, but, at 20 years of age, finds many flaws in the society here.

"I had seen many American films and had read a lot of magazines and newspapers before I came here," she said, "so I had a few ideas of what it would be like.

"But mainly, I think the mentality of the American people is different from Danes. The women here, for instance, try so hard to be young. They wear very bright colors and lots of make-up and die their hair. I noticed this especially in the eastern part of your country. I think it is very sad — that they can't accept their age. If you can't accept what you are, you are not even human.

"People just don't think over here. They are always busy doing a lot of things. They are always on the go but they don't know what they are doing. They have committees and organizations for everything but they do nothing."

Asked if she thought activity might make Americans happy, Dorte looked surprised.

"How important is that?" She asked. Happiness is not the most important thing in the world you know. "In Denmark also we live quite well without television in every home. Every body here acts like they have to have a television set. We don't have to be entertained all the time. And while I have been visiting the nice areas of their cities. We don't tour the slums. Well, we have read a lot about President Johnson's war on Poverty and we know there is a lot of poverty in this country just like in every other country in the world. I really wouldn't mind seeing some of it."

Asked about the different in morals in the Scandinavian countries and in America, Dorte said the teenagers here get much more involved and "are awfully silly about morals." she admitted, however, that her only knowledge of American teenagers was composed of what she read in magazines and newspapers. She added that in Denmark, judging any segment of the society by reports in magazines and newspapers would not be a proper basis.

"I have been fascinated with many things about this country," she continued. "I was especially amazed at your institution called a drugstore with all the hundreds of things they sell. We don't have anything like that.

"Also, we don't have all of the vending machines you have either. Many of the small shops have machines like them though. When a pastry shop is closed, often there is a mechine in front which has patries in it. But we don't have your coke and candy machines.

"But all those machines don't seem to make Americans any fatter than Danes. I guess we all have the same calories to fight.

"All in all I think this has been a wonderful trip. I like most Americans as individuals and like the people as a whole."

Dorte planned to travel to California, then to return to the east coast through the southern states.

NEW COMPUTER — Burroughs Corporation's new D84 military electronic computer attains its small size, light weight and low power requirement through the use of monolithic intergrated circuits. The computer's modular construction, which separates basic functions, allows the system to be expanded easily or tailored to fit specific applications.

Burroughs Corp. Announces New, Tiny Computer

Burroughs Corporation has announced a compact military electronic computer that uses the industry's newest form of microcircuitry, monolithic integrated circuits.

The new general purpose system, called D84, occupies less than 1½ cubic feet, weights 100 pounds, operates on 110 watts of power and is fully transportable, making it ideal for rugged military environments.

In announcing the new system, Ray R. Eppert, Burroughs president, said, "The D84 extends the company's D800 series of military data processing equipment into application areas requiring compactness and extreme reliability.

"The D84's monolithic integrated circuits are so small that it would take 30 of them to cover the top of a common aspirin tablet," Eppert stated. "In addition, life tests have shown that these circuits will far outlive ordinary electronic components."

"However," he pointed out, "the key factor in the D84 is its modular design which allows it to grow — without reprogramming — to match the capacity of all but the very largest systems that have been announced to date.

"This combination of features makes the D84 ideal for tactical command and control; ground, airborne and naval data systems; fire control; automatic message processing; missile checkout, and general purpose data processing."

The D48 was developed by the company's Defense and Space Group, headquartered at Paoli, Pennsylvania, which has been producing D800 series modular data processing systems for Army, Navy and Air Force use.

In the Burroughs modular concept, the basic functions of a computer system — data processing, memory and input-output control — are functionally and physically separated into individual housings. This allows a system to be tailored to exactly suit a customer's needs, and to be expanded by adding modules as his requirements increase.

As an example of the D84's growth potential, its memory can be expanded from 4,096 words to 65,536 words. For applications requiring the simultaneous, parallel processing of different computer programs, called "multiprocessing," additional data processor modules can be added.

The D84's input - output modules can handle a wide variety of peripheral devices including printers, card readers, radar and high speed communication links, typewriters, and magnetic tape, disk and drum storage devices.

D84 systems will be ready for delivery during the third quarter of 1965.

Aspen Air Taxi Gets To Use Second Plane

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) Friday authorized Aspen Airways, an air taxi operator, to utilize a second DC3 on flights between Denver and Aspen, Colo.

The firm received permission last July to operate a single DC3 to fly skiing enthusiasts to the ski resort center. Air taxi aircraft grossing more than 12,500 pounds takeoff weight without special authorization.

The airline told the CAB that in the past 12-months, it was unable to accommodate 1,200 passengers due to lack of equipment.

States Push for Tax Increases

A review of tax proposals made to the legislatures now meeting in 42 states indicates that many states are considering plans to increase taxes to raise more revenue, reports Commerce Clearing House.

Although methods of raising money for state treasuries range from proposed new sales taxes in New York, Massachusetts and Idaho to the adoption of income tax withholding in several states, the effect is the same. Taxes continue the upward trend as most of the states hold their regular odd year legislativ sessions.

Sales taxes — already the best single source of collections in 30 states — are up for higher rates in Colorado, Utah and Wyoming as well as a broader base for the North Dakota sales levy.

To balance burgeoning budget of $4 billion in California and almost $3.5 billion in New York for fiscal 1966, chief executives are calling for new and broadened taxes.

California's governor has urged an increase from 3 to 8 cents per pack in the cigarette tax, enactment of a 20 per cent levy at wholesale on cigars and other tobacco products, increased income taxes coupled with withholding, sales taxes covering leased or rented equipment with emphasis in the electronic data processing field, and sales taxes on motor vehicles, boats and airplanes sold privately, and gas, electric and communications services, CCH said.

In his budget message, New York's governor has asked for a brand - new 2 per cent state sales tax, as well as measures doubling cigarette taxes and automobile registration fees, to finance proposed increased spending for education and general state aid including outlays for water pollution, public welfare, municipalities and highway construction. Food and drug purchases would be exempt from the sales tax levy.

The proposed state sales tax would be in addition to those already levied by some cities in the state, including New York City. In order to fix a maximum rate of 5 per cent throughout the state, the governor called for a 1 per cent reduction in the New York City tax, from 4 per cent to 3 per cent.

The governor of Massachusetts has also proposed a 3 per cent cales tax, along with adjustments in the personal income tax designed to produce additional revenue.

And, yet to deliver budget messages, the governors of Illinois and Ohio, among other states, have outlined broad programs with numerous spending projects.

Officials Urge Open Path Policy For Industry

"More jobs will be created in the Pikes Peak Region and the entire State of Colorado if we don't put up too many 'roadblocks' in the way of industry locating here. This could happen if our State Legislators pass upon some of the present bills now in the House and Senate. Some of these bills should be changed and others modified if we plan on continuing our industrial growth." Robert Jenner, chairman of the Chamber legislative committee and Alex Chapman, Chamber board of director, told other Chamber directors Monday.

"These bills are 'Workmen's Compensation' bills and in their present form could help to 'put us out of the running' in getting more jobs for more people," they added.

The recommendations which were passed upon were recommended by the Legislative Affairs Committee. John Sawyer, Chamber president, said: "Your Chamber of Commerce is doing everything possible to provide jobs for people who want to work.

"We want people who are temporarily unemployed or who have been disabled by accidents to have sufficient income to provide the necessities of life.

"Fair legislation will provide this. (We cannot be sympathetic toward legislation which permits an imbalance.)

"We are all concerned about the growth and progress of our locality and state and this grow must be supported in many ways.

"We must have fair legislation with fair taxation which will provide more opportunities for those who want to work and maintain a good standard of living for their families."

Approximately 1,000,000 American women were married in 1963, about 65 per cent of them by their 21st birthday.

Two Military Nominations Pending Locally

The Hughes family of Ft. Carson and Fort Worth, Texas, celebrated news of two important nominations this week.

Col. John S. Hughes, 5th Division Artillery commander, has been nominated by President L. B. Johnson for promotion to the rank of brigadier general.

His son, Jim, a high school senior, was nominated by a Texas congressman for appointment to the U.S. Military Academy.

Col. Hughes was commissioned in 1940 after enlisting in the Texas National Guard. He served in four major European campaigns commanding an artillery battalion and as XX Corps civil affairs officer in the occupation.

Subsequent tours have taken Col. Hughes to faculty duty and student status at senior military colleges and to high level staff assignments. He was with the initial staff contingent at SHAPE (Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers Europe.) He was executive officer to the assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs and an artillery officer of Eighth U.S. Army in Korea.

He came to Ft. Carson from the faculty of the National War College.

His decorations include a Legion of Merit which he won at Thiel Bonn when he turned a battery of eight captured German 100 cm. fortress guns against the enemy when ammunition was not available for Allied guns.

One-Man Bank Chief Accused of Embezzlement

TYLER, Tex. (AP) — Authorities Friday charged a small, bespectacled man regarded by neighbors as the No. 1 citizen of their East Texas village with taking nearly $400,000 from his one-man bank.

Butler McClung, 62, posted $10,000 bond and went free after he waived a preliminary hearing.

Meanwhile, the Winona State Bank closed. A notice from the directors posted on the door advised the public that the bank, with $20,000 capital stock and about $50,000 in deposits, was "in failing condition."

The federal complaint accused McClung specifically of making false entries amounting to $380,392 in records of the bank. An investigator for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC) said the money was taken over a period of several years.

McClung was president, sole member of staff and the only person who knew the vault's combination at the bank in Winona, a town of 450 people. Winona is 18 miles north of Tyler.

Agent Wilton H. Bremer of the Federal Bureau of Investigation filed the charges in late afternoon. He and other officials gave no details and there was no explanation of how the alleged shortage occurred in such a small bank.

McClung signed the notice placed on the ban door. It bore the names of three other directors, all relatives of McClung, and advised that they had turned the bank over to the state banking commissioner for liquidation.

Officials said the FDIC was arranging to pay depositors up to the statutory insurance limit of $10,000 each.

Last Atlas Missile Leaves Cheyenne

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP)—The Air Force Friday began removal operations on the last Atlas E missile assigned to the 566th Strategic Missile Squadron at Warren Air Force Base.

The missile was removed from its launch emplacement near Fort Collins, Colo., and then transported on a specially-equipped trailer to the assembly and maintenance shop.

The missile was the final one of the nine Atlas E missiles in northeast Colorado and southeastern Wyoming which are being deactivated and shipped to Morton Air Force Base in California.

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

Preventive Care-Focus Of Children's Dental Week

By William Lawrence, D.D.S.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

This is Children's Dental Health Week. Fifty-one weeks, seven full days each week, (except for Mother's and Father's Days), may be dedicated to his teeth.

On the American scene this week, dentists are making an extra effort to stimulate children to: brush after eating; make the best use of sodium fluoride; eat wholesome foods; seek regular and frequent dental treatment.

Dentists feel good dental health throughout your life is dependent on establishing these values at an early age. Yet many parents still believe it's a waste of time and money to take care of their children's teeth.

Brushing after meals is necessary. Food that sticks to teeth is a major cause of decay, particularly the soft, white material that collects on the teeth near the gums.

Fluoridation is known to substantially reduce the rate and extent of decay. If you live in an area where there are no fluorides in the water, sodium or stannous fluroide should be painted on your children's teeth a couple of times a year.

Many dentists and pediatricians practicing in these fluoride-free areas, prescribe calcium fluoride tablets for their patients under 8. After that age, teeth are fully formed and fluorides taken internally are not absorbed by the teeth.

During this period of tooth formation, calcium and phosphorus are necessary for hardening enamel and dentin. An adequate diet should include a quart of milk a day, and a good selection of meat, fish and fresh vegetables and fruit. Sweets should be kept at a minimum.

These visits may eliminate the later need for crowns, bridges and dentures, as well as save you and your child much anguish, pain and remorse.

Please send your questions about dental health to Dr. Lawrence in care of this paper. While he cannot answer each letter personally, letters of general interest will be answered in this column.

Housing Bill Is Discussed

DENVER (UPI)—The Judiciary Committee of the Colorado House of Representatives met for 40 minutes today to discuss a bill strengthening the state's fair housing law. But no real progress was made on the legislation.

Another meeting was scheduled for 9 a.m. next Wednesday.

Before the committee is a bill sponsored by Gerald Kopel, D-Denver, with extensive amendments proposed by Rep. Isaac Moore, D-Denver. Kopel has said he is going along with Moore's proposed changes.

The bill would broaden the scope of the fair housing law to include all types of property and also would provide for fines against violators.

About 25 persons sat in on today's committee meeting, most of them representatives of various civil rights groups in the Denver area.

Every 20 minutes a vessel leaves or enters New York harbor, the National Geographic says.

HEFTY COPTER — Able to carry 100 troops or civilian passengers, 12 to 20 tons of cargo, or operate as a powerful sky crane, this heavy-lift helicopter could be flying within five years, according to Lockheed-California Co. engineers. Despite its big payload and large size — 90,000-pound weight and 100-foot length, with 120-foot rotor blades—the helicopter would have a light-touch "hands off" stability, thanks to a Lockheed-developed rigid-rotor system. Passenger or cargo carrying pods could be removed and changed to suit the mission. A military version could carry troops, guns, tanks, and supplies in virtually all weather conditions over the most rugged terrains. It would be steady enough for the accurate firing of aerial artillery. As a crane helicopter it could be used in construction work to transport huge segments of buildings or bridges, to lift telephone poles.

KUALA LAMPUR — Malaysian soldiers with more than one wife will get an allowance for one only.

ALEXEI OUSTED INSIDE

MOSCOW (UPI)—The official Soviet news agency Tass Friday announced a further downgrading of Alexei Adzhubei, son-in-law of ousted former Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev.

BELFAST — Mary Donnelly has been awarded $7,000 because her personality was changed by an auto accident.
